REPORT ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE INDIAN FAMINE CHARITABLE RELIEF FUND IN BENGAL.

THE following papers are published for general information:—

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

REV. DEPT.,
The 21st February 1898.

M. FINUCANE,
Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

No. 272Fam., dated Calcutta, the 18th February 1898.

From—M FINUCANE, ESQ., C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of Bengal,Revenue Department,

To—The Chairman, Bengal Executive Committee, Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund.

I AM directed to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, forwarding, for the information of Government, copy of the report on the operations of the Bengal Provincial Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund, and conveying on behalf of the Committee an expression of their high appreciation of the services rendered by their Secretary, Mr. E. N. Baker.

2. In reply I am to say that the Lieutenant-Governor has noticed with much pleasure the terms of high praise in which the Chairman has spoken of the services rendered by Mr. Baker. The cordial thanks of Government are due to the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens and yourself as Chairmen, to the Members, and to the Secretary, of the Provincial Committee for the care and efficiency with which the Fund has been administered, and the Lieutenant-Governor desires that an expression of his appreciation of their services may be conveyed to them and to the members of the various local Sub-Committees who have worked under the general supervision of the Provincial Committee.

BENGAL BRANCH.

INDIAN FAMINE CHARITABLE RELIEF FUND.

Dated Calcutta, the 9th February 1898.

From—The Hon'ble W. H. GRIMLEY, Chairman, Bengal Executive Committee, Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward for the information of Government copy of the report of the Bengal Provincial Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Relief Fund, and at the same time I am desired to express on behalf of the Committee their high appreciation of the invaluable services rendered by their Secretary, Mr. E. N. Baker, in connection with the administration of the Fund in addition to his ordinary duties. The Committee have also placed on record a resolution in recognition of these services. The duties of his post, voluntarily undertaken, have not only entailed much labour, but have been attended with peculiar difficulties. As the mouthpiece of the Committee it fell to him to interpret and explain to the numerous local Committees with whom the Committee were in correspondence the objects of the Fund and the principles of action which had been laid down in general terms by the Central Committee. This he did at the outset of the undertaking with great care, sufficient detail, and, what is more, with the necessary promptitude, and after making his preliminary instructions as complete as possible, it became his duty to watch the proceedings of the District Committees and to check and call them to account whenever they seemed to be overstepping the line of action marked out for them, and this part of his self-imposed task he also performed with much tact, forethought, and an entire absence of friction. He studiously avoided the assumption of any authority beyond his powers, but was careful to consult the Chairman, and through him the Committee, when necessary, on all matters requiring their attention and orders. The correspondence with the several District Committees became very voluminous, but in discussing the various matters under reference with the Chairman, Mr. Baker has always shown himself most fertile in useful expedients and suggestions, and having all the details of the work well within his grasp, he was able to become the mainspring of action in the administration of the charity.

Personally, I am extremely grateful for his willing assistance, and the Provincial Committee, who are equally indebted to him for his excellent services, have desired me to bring them to the notice of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

Extract from the Minutes of the 11th Meeting of the Bengal Provincial Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund, held at the office of the Board of Revenue on Wednesday, the 9th February 1898.

THE Committee desire to place on record an expression of their high appreciation of the invaluable services rendered by the Secretary, Mr. E. N. Baker, in connection with the administration of the Famine Fund entrusted to the Committee.

Resolved—That a copy of the above resolution and of the Chairman's letter to Government, recording his opinion of Mr. Baker's services, be attached to the letter forwarding the report to the Chairman of the Central Committee.

Districts less seriously affected.

2. In these districts the famine was most severe and necessitated the opening of regular relief works by State agency under the Famine Code. There were also many other tracts where great and widespread distress prevailed, though in a less acute form, more particularly in the districts of Patna, Rajshahi, Pabna, Jessore, Dinajpur and Lohardaga. These districts comprise an area of 20,428 square miles, and a population of 9,018,279. Outside the area included within these two groups, the effect of the famine was chiefly felt in the great and sustained rise in the price of food-grains, which extended to every district of Bengal, and indeed throughout India. This matter is further referred to in paragraph 11 of this report; but in the present place it may be broadly stated that for ten months prices ranged about 100 per cent. above the normal rate. The suffering and distress thus occasioned, were shared by all except the wealthy, but chiefly by the poorer middle class, the bhadra lok, on small fixed or [illegible] incomes, by the labouring and menial classes and the poorer artizans and weavers, and by those who are ordinarily dependant on private charity. No part of Bengal was wholly spared, though the eastern districts suffered less than others; and ample scope for the charity of the Relief Fund was found in every district, with the fortunate exceptions of Hooghly, Darjeeling, Backergunge and Balasore.

Districts affected by high prices.

Description of affected area. Patna Division.

3. Foremost among the affected tracts, whether regard is had to the numbers concerned, the intensity of distress, or the danger to human life, are the four districts of North Bihar. These districts, Saran, Champaran, Muzaffarpur and Darbhanga, forming the northern or trans-Gangetic section of the Patna Division, stretch in an irregular band, 80 miles in width, from the Ganges to the borders of Nepal. They are intersected by the Gogra and Gandak, and several smaller rivers, which flow from the Nepal hills to join the Ganges, with a trend from the north-west to the south-east. There is no artificial irrigation (other than wells) except in Saran, which has a small canal system of little value. The population is extremely dense, averaging 785 to the square mile, which is exceeded in parts of Saran. The great majority of the inhabitants live by agriculture, there being very few local manufactures. The soil is for the most part under cultivation and exceedingly fertile, except in the north and west of Champaran. It is divided in varying but tolerably equal proportions between the three main harvests: the bhadoi, or rain crop, which includes early rice, millets, maize and indigo; the aghani, or winter rice; and the rabi, or spring crop, which includes wheat, barley, pulses, sugarcane, opium and oilseeds. The winter rice is the most important single crop, and its normal outturn ranges from 39·75 per cent. of the whole in Champaran, to 54·26 per cent. in Darbhanga. The people are, generally speaking, skilful, industrious and thrifty in their habits. Large numbers annually leave their homes temporarily, especially from Saran, in search of work in North and East Bengal. All four districts were affected by the famines of 1866 and 1873-74. The material condition of the inhabitants is thus summed up by the Commissioner of Patna:

"In spite of these many advantages, the material condition of the peasantry is a good deal below what it is elsewhere, not only in other parts of India, but in other Divisions of the Lower Provinces. The population is extraordinarily dense, and is steadily increasing: early marriages are universal, while the comparatively salubrious climate induces a relatively high birth-rate and a low death-rate. The people are almost entirely agricultural, holdings are small and greatly subdivided, and in most districts the landlords are themselves of a petty class and much impoverished: all these conditions make for indebtedness and poverty, and the result is that a large proportion of the agricultural poor have sunk from the position of tenants, and are day-labourers and serfs, while with the majority of those who still occupy land, life is a perpetual struggle on the verge of insolvency."

4. A leading feature in the economic survey of these districts is the presence of indigo and poppy cultivation on a large scale. The area under each crop is as follows:—

		Indigo.	Poppy.
		Acres.	Acres.
Saran ...	...	32,300	40,842
Champaran ...	...	81,000	46,495
Muzaffarpur ...	...	102,200	11,390
Darbhanga ...	...	70,300	2,118
Total	...	285,800	100,845

Regarding the indigo industry, the Collector of Champaran has made the following remarks, which are applicable to all four districts: —

"Though occupying only 4½ per cent. of the cultivated area, the indigo crop is of the greatest economic importance to the people of this district. The elaborate tilling and weeding of the lands and the cutting and carting of the plant afford employment to a very large proportion of the labouring classes for a considerable portion of the year, while in most of the planters the peasantry have the good fortune to live under lenient landlords who show them much consideration in a year of distress."

The poppy crop is also of great value to the people by reason, among other things, of the substantial advances which they receive from Government for cultivating it. During 1896 these amounted to 11¾ lakhs of rupees, in the four districts under discussion.

5. The only other tract in the Patna Division in which severe famine prevailed was the Bhabhua subdivision in the south-west corner of Shahabad, together with a part of the adjacent subdivision of Sasaram. This tract includes a part of the Kaimore plateau, besides some lowlying country at its foot. It is sparsely populated, the crops are poor and precarious, and communications are so difficult that during the rains parts of it are almost inaccessible. This was one of the very few parts of the province in which the Government was forced to abandon its established policy of non-interference with private trade, and to make arrangements that the local markets should be supplied in due time by a grain dealer appointed by the Collector.

Bhagalpur Division.

6. In the Bhagalpur Division, the severely distressed area was confined to parts of the districts of Bhagalpur and the Sonthal Parganas. In the former, it comprised the Madhipura and Supaul subdivisions, which lie north of the Ganges. The soil is comparatively poor: the aghani, or winter rice, is the chief crop, while there is little bhadoi or rabi, and artificial irrigation ducts or tanks are few. The population consists chiefly of low caste Hindus and Hinduised aboriginals.

In the Sonthal Parganas the distress was most acute in the Deoghur and Jamtara subdivisions. The following description of the district is given by Mr. Carstairs, the experienced Deputy Commissioner.

"Its soil is poor and undulating, the lower ground and beds of small water-courses having been terraced extensively into paddy-fields, sometimes protected by springs or reservoirs, but often unprotected. So the country has to depend very much on rain-water to carry through its cultivation; and when that fails, there is distress.

"The principal food-crops grown are mentioned below in the order of their importance, namely: —

(2) Indian-corn.
(3) Marua.
(4) Pulses.
(5) Wheat.

"In the major portion of the district mahua flowers and fruit help a great deal in forming the food-staple of many classes of men, especially aborigines. They also live on many sorts of forest produce, when their food-crops prove deficient or insufficient. As regards the economic condition of the people, they are generally unostentatious, simple, and seldom indulge in luxury. The Sonthals are improvident and fond of enjoying themselves, but wonderfully patient and independent when distressed. The principal occupation of the people is agriculture, and even when a man earns his livelihood by some other means, he must have a little cultivation to supplement his earnings

"The Sonthals and Bhuiyas emigrate in large numbers yearly to work in the tea-gardens of the Duars and the Darjeeling Terai. Some go to the neighbouring districts of Burdwan and Birbhum, and some to Malda to reap the rice crop. Some also emigrate as labourers to Assam and Chittagong."

Chota Nagpur Division.

7. The area affected in the Chota Nagpur Division was almost as large as that in the Patna Division, but the population involved was only about one-fourth as great. The area of acute distress included the whole of Palamau, the whole of Manbhum, except the south-eastern portion, and the northern and eastern portions of Hazaribagh. No part of either Lohardaga or Singhbhum was officially recognized as affected, but there was a good deal of distress in the former district.

The country may be described as consisting of an ascending series of plateaux rising in successive terraces from 800 to 3,500 feet, separated from each other by ranges of hills and watered by numerous rivers flowing into the Mahanuddy on the one side and the Ganges on the other. In all the districts the country is much broken up by ravines, with cultivated valleys and rolling downs interspersed. The highest point in the Division is the [illegible] hill, a well-known Jain place of pilgrimage in Hazaribagh [illegible] has an elevation of 4,479 feet above sea level. The Ranchi plateau, with an area of 4,500 square miles, has an average elevation of 2,100 feet, and the Hazaribagh plateau, 600 square miles in extent, is about the same level. The Palamau district, which is of comparatively recent formation, lies to the north and west of Lohardaga, and consists of spurs thrown out from the Ranchi and Hazaribagh plateaux, and a tangled mass of broken hills and more or less open valleys, with an average height of 1,200 feet. The Manbhum district is hilly to the south, and also in the extreme north and west, where it borders on the Jamtara subdivision of the Sonthal Parganas, and on the Hazaribagh district. In the centre and to the east the country is flat and open, and includes the valley of the Damuda.

The population of the Division is scanty, averaging 128 to the square mile, though parts of Manbhum rise considerably above this figure. The inhabitants are mostly Hindus and aboriginals, many sections of the latter having become more or less Hinduized. Sonthals, who number 290,000, are found mostly in Hazaribagh, the north of Manbhum and Singhbhum. Mundas, Uraons, and Korwas, a semi-wild tribe, numbering altogether 880,000, are found chiefly in Lohardaga and Singhbhum. The population includes also a greater proportion of Native Christians than any other part of Bengal, and all the principal Missions—Anglican, Lutheran, Roman Catholic, and others—have local branches. The Division is a favourite recruiting ground for the Assam tea-gardens, and thousands of labourers leave it every year either under indenture or nominally as free emigrants.

The soil is only moderately fertile, and the mineral wealth in which the Division abounds as yet gives employment to but few. Of the three chief crops, the winter rice is by far the most important, being more than two-thirds of the whole food-supply. The bhadoi, or rain crop, represents rather more than one-fourth, and the remainder is represented by the rabi or spring crop, which is insignificant, except in Palamau. Forest edible products, including the flower of the mahua tree, form a most valuable addition to the food-supply of the people, especially in the wilder and more hilly parts.

With the exception of certain main roads, the communications are of a very primitive description and consist of narrow bridle paths, along which lightly-laden pack-bullocks pick their leisurely way to distant marts. Traffic is also carried on by bullock-carts, but these are rarely to be found off the metalled roads, and owing to the long distances to be travelled over, this is a very laborious and tedious mode of transporting produce. Palamau is particularly badly off in respect of communications, and in this district it became necessary at one period of the famine for Government to supplement the ordinary operations of trade by offering a bounty on importations of grain. The Bengal-Nagpur Railway, the only through line in the Division, traverses a very small corner on the south-east, but is of comparatively little use to the more distant places. The roads also, such as they are, are frequently intercepted by hills, ravines and rivers which are unbridged and at certain seasons of the year unfordable. The occurrence of scarcity in an acute form in Chota Nagpur emphasises the necessity for a liberal extension of the railway system in this fine country with its vast mineral wealth and immense trading possibilities, a measure which was frequently advocated by the Hon'ble Mr. W. H. Grimley, the present Chairman of the Provincial Famine Relief Committee, who was for many years Commissioner of Chota Nagpur.

Presidency Division.

8. In the Presidency Division, which includes five districts surrounding Calcutta on the north, east and south, distress was most acute in Nadia, Khulna and Murshidabad, but parts of Jessore were affected to a nearly equal extent. The 24-Parganas district, which immediately encircles the Presidency town, escaped unscathed, except for the high prevailing prices. Mr. Westmacott, the Commissioner of the Division, gives the following account of the area affected, and the economic conditions of the people.

Physical conditions of area affected.

"In Nadia the area affected is composed of two classes of land—a black clay soil on low lands, and a light sandy soil on higher levels. The former is subject to inundation and grows only aman rice, but the light soil grows aus rice and rabi crops. Over the greater part of the affected tracts in Murshidabad the chief crops are aus rice followed by a cold-weather crop, but on the low land in the south-east of the district known as the "Kalantar," the only crop is aman rice, which depends almost entirely on seasonable inundation. The "affected tracts in Jessore consisted of high lands along the banks of rivers, also some low-lying bheels. In Khulna the tract affected is low and flat, being intersected by numerous tidal khals and protected from inundation by small embankments called bherries. The soil is impregnated with salt, and grows nothing but aman rice, which will not thrive unless there is enough fresh water to wash the salt out of the ground.

The nature and the relative importance of the crops grown.

"In Nadia the early or aus rice is a far more important crop than the winter or aman rice, the area under the former being twice as large as that under the latter. The other crops in this district are by no means of equal importance. In Murshidabad the principal crop is aman rice, which is grown in the Rarh tract, which comprises the west of the district, and also in low lands in the Bagri. Aus rice is grown in the Bagri. The Rarh is "the chief source of the food-supply of the district, and most of it this year produced a very good crop, which was largely exported into Nadia and probably elsewhere. About one-fourth of the cultivated area of the district is under mulberry, jute, indigo, oil-seeds, &c. The principal crops in order of importance in Jessore are aman and aus rice, jute, indigo, oil-seeds, pulses, millets and tobacco, but date-sugar, which is a special product of the district, contributes very largely to the resources of the people. In Khulna aman rice is the staple crop, but aus and boro rice and jute are also grown to some extent. Such crops as kalai, khensari, sarisa, &c., are grown in small quantities.

The economic condition of the people, their chief occupations, and the existence of any special customs.

"In Nadia the cultivators and the holders of petty lakhiraj tenures are by no means so well off as similar classes in Jessore, Khulna, or the 24-Parganas, and there is much indebtedness. The cultivators of Murshidabad are also in debt, though, perhaps, not so entirely dependent upon mahajans as the cultivators of Nadia. The great majority of cultivators in Nadia are tenants-at-will, and cultivate on the system known as utbandi under which raiyats have no fixed holdings. There is also a certain number of persons who own, occupy and cultivate, or sublet hereditary rent-free lands. In Jessore the people are chiefly agriculturists, and although their welfare depends to a great extent upon the success of the aman rice crop, they have, in all the higher parts of the district, a valuable source of income in date-sugar. There are a very few labourers in the district, and what there are, are in the habit of going annually to the Sundarbans in search of employment, and remitting funds by money-orders for the support of their families. About four-fifths of the population of Khulna are agriculturists, and I consider that they are generally prosperous and comparatively wealthy. There is little trade except in grain and dried fish. If the people get a good crop, they are contented. Almost all the zamindars are absentees, indifferent to the welfare of their tenants, and the inferior tenure-holders or gantidars are said to be impoverished by successive bad years, though not, I suspect, to the extent which they allege. The Pods in this district change their habitations after the winter crop has been gathered. They never cut their crops themselves, but the work is done by hired labourers coming from other parts of the district. This indicates that they can afford to be idle, as their labourers go away with boat-loads of rice."

Burdwan and Orissa Divisions.

9. The two remaining tracts which were classed by Government as severely affected are portions of the Bankura district in Burdwan, and of Puri in Orissa. The former adjoins on the east the district of Manbhum in Chota Nagpur, and its physical characteristics are similar. The district is undulating, with hill and jungle to the south, and open level country to the north and east, where it is intersected by the Damodar river. The population, which includes many Sonthals and other aboriginals, is mainly agricultural. The principal crop is the winter rice, which suffices to maintain the population, and also yields a surplus for export. In 1897, notwithstanding the presence of famine, the exports of rice amounted to 3,37,000 maunds, from January to September.

The district of Puri lies in the extreme south of the Orissa Division, bordering on the Ganjam district of Madras. An area of 231 square miles lying along the Chilka lake was flooded in July and August 1896, and was subsequently exposed to drought. It is a noticeable characteristic of the inhabitants of this district that even the lower castes object to their women appearing in public, and none or very few of these were ever found on the relief works opened by Government.

Failure of the rains of 1896.

10. The famine of 1897 was due to the shortness and unseasonable distribution of the rains of 1896. The rainfall was deficient during the months of July and August, when sowing and transplanting of rice are in progress, and from the 19th September rain ceased altogether till the close of the year, thus depriving the young crops at the critical time of the moisture necessary to bring them to maturity. The extent and distribution of the deficiency in the districts most seriously affected are exhibited in the following table :—

Statement showing the monthly rainfall in each of the affected districts of Bengal during 1896-97 as compared with the normal fall.

Short harvests of 1896-97.

11. The following account of the extent to which the crops of 1896-97 suffered from the failure of the rains, and of the consequence on the price of food-grains throughout the Province, is taken from the General Administration Report of Bengal for that year:—

"Like all previous famines in Bengal, the famine of 1896-97 was caused by the failure of the monsoon rains, and was the result of two successive bad seasons. The season of 1895, although on the whole favourable to the bhadoi or autumn crops, was bad for the winter rice, inasmuch as the rains were unevenly distributed at the time of sowing, and ceased earlier than was necessary to ensure a full outturn. Then followed a prolonged drought, which lasted throughout the cold weather, and materially injured the rabi or spring crops. For the Province as a whole the outturn of the bhadoi crops was estimated at 14 annas, of winter rice at 13 annas, and of the rabi crops at 11 to 12 annas. The good crops reaped in 1893-94 and 1894-95 enabled the people to tide over the partial failure of 1895-96, but a greater disaster followed, and caused distress more or less acute throughout the Province. The rainfall of 1896 was very nearly as short as in 1873, and was worse distributed. The bhadoi crops suffered from short rainfall in all parts of the Province except in Orissa, where, on the other hand, there was excessive rain in July and August, resulting in floods which destroyed the standing crops over a large area. The average outturn of these crops for the whole Province is estimated at 10½ annas, but the outturn of the bhadoi food-crops alone is believed to have been not more than 9½ annas. The injury done to the great winter rice crop by deficient rainfall during the sowing and transplanting season was aggravated by the entire cessation of the rains at the most critical period; no rain fell after the 19th September. The effect of these abnormal meteorological conditions was that the total area cultivated with winter rice was about a million acres less than in the preceding year, and that the outturn of the crop was as bad in Bihar and in parts of Bengal as in 1873, the estimate for the whole Province being only 7½ annas, or less than half the average crop. The rabi crops of 1896-97 suffered considerably from the want of moisture in the soil, but showers of rain fell at intervals during the cold weather, which did much good in the Patna and Chota Nagpur Divisions. The outturn of these crops throughout the Province is estimated at 10½ annas. The mahua and mango crops, which in an ordinary year form a useful supplement to the food-grains, were also poor. Not only was the failure of the crops in the Province of Bengal as great as in 1873-74, but it extended throughout India and caused an unprecedented rise in prices.

"Prices in Bengal generally rose instead of falling, as in ordinary years, as soon as the bhadoi crops had been harvested, and there was a further sharp rise when the failure of the winter rice became certain. The following table shows the prices of common rice in seers per rupee at the head-quarters of the affected districts, in comparison with the normal rates and the prices which prevailed during the famine of 1873-74: the prices of other food-grains rose proportionately:—

"The effect of the early cessation of the monsoon rains was more disastrous in Bihar* than elsewhere, partly because the comparatively high lands of Bihar require more moisture for the growth of rice and other crops than the low-lying lands of Lower Bengal. In Bihar, too, the population is extremely dense and much poorer than in most other parts of the Province. The ordinary wages of agricultural labour are extremely low, and they have, owing partly to the growth of population and partly to the influence of custom, remained practically unaltered for the past 20 years or more, while the prices of food-grains have largely increased during the same period.

Charitable relief prior to formation of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund.

12. When it became apparent that the Province was face to face with a serious famine, steps were taken in a number of districts to organize measures for charitable relief. In the Presidency Division the Commissioner allotted sums of Rs. 2,000, Rs. 1,500, and Rs. 1,000 respectively to the districts of Nadia, Jessore, and Khulna from the balance of the late Bengal Distress Relief Fund, and these funds, together with subscriptions raised locally, were distributed by Subdivisional Officers and others under the orders of the Collector. In Nadia a local Relief Committee was formed on the 23rd December 1896. In Khulna, subscriptions were raised as early as July 1896, and were spent in purchasing paddy for husking, and in giving doles of grain and money. In Rajshahi a public meeting was called in December 1896 under the presidency of the Commissioner, and subscriptions were raised, which were expended in that district. A small grant of Rs. 300 was also made by the Commissioner for expenditure in Bogra.

13. In the Patna Division, where the approach of the famine was felt earlier than elsewhere, the organization of charitable relief received attention from the outset. In October 1896, when the price of grain rose suddenly in the city of Patna, the Collector called a general meeting of the inhabitants and formed a Committee, which purchased grain and sold it at one seer below the market rate to deserving persons in the presence of a member of the Committee. In Gaya, in the first half of December, the Collector caused each Municipality to raise a small sum locally, and placed it in the hands of a Committee of the principal inhabitants, to be expended in relieving cases of proved distress. Early in January, the appearance of distressed wanderers along the Grand Trunk Road warned the local authorities that relief was needed, and two kitchens were established for their assistance at Aurangabad and Kusa. In Shahabad a public meeting was called in December, and machinery was organized for the prompt distribution of relief when occasion should arise. In Saran the Collector, Mr. Earle, was prompt to act on the Commissioner's admonitions to arrange for charitable relief in good time. Meetings were held and Committees formed; and in the town of Chapra, during January, February and March, grain was distributed in weekly doles at three centres in the town, under the personal supervision of the Municipal Commissioners, aided by almost all the European residents of both sexes. In Champaran the Motihari branch of the Theosophical Society from an early date issued grain doles on their own account to all who chose to accept them, and continued to do so for two and a-half months. In January the Maharani of Bettiah established a large kitchen, at which an average of 596 persons received cooked food daily for a month and-a-half. In Darbhanga a meeting was held on the 22nd December, at which it was decided to call for subscriptions, to appoint a Committee, and to direct its members to institute enquiries for destitute persons who were outside the conditions of Government relief. More than Rs. 6,000 was collected in this manner before the fund was eventually absorbed in the District Relief Committee.

In the Bhagalpur Division small grants were made in December to Malda and the Sonthal Parganas from the balance of the Bengal Distress Relief Fund, but, except in Jamtara in the latter district, no expenditure was actually found necessary. In Hazaribagh, subscriptions were raised in December 1896, and a kitchen was opened which provided relief to all destitute persons till May 1897, when it was taken over by Government.

Establishment of Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund and organization of relief.

14. The Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund was inaugurated in India on the 14th January, when a public meeting was held in Calcutta at which His Excellency the Viceroy presided, and resolutions were adopted recognizing that the time had come for the formation of a fund for charitable relief, supplementary of the operations of Government and designed to meet cases not clearly or adequately covered by those operations. By other resolutions the meeting accepted the statement of the objects to which private subscriptions might be devoted, as set forth in the Gazette of India of the 9th January, and arrangements were made for the appointment of a General and a Central Executive Committee. The objects to which the Fund was to be applied are set forth in Appendix A of this report, and were briefly as follows:—

(1) To supplement the subsistence ration, which alone is provided from public funds, by the addition of small comforts, whether of food or of clothing for the aged or infirm, for the patients in hospital, for children, and the like;
(2) to provide for the maintenance of orphans;
(3) to relieve the numerous poor but respectable persons, who will endure almost any privation rather than apply for Government relief, accompanied as it is by official enquiry into, and by some kind of test of the reality of the destitution which is to be relieved; and
(4) to restore to their original position, when acute distress is subsiding, those who have lost their all in the struggle, and to give them a fresh start in life.

Formation of Provincial Committee for Bengal.

15. In accordance with the scheme approved by the Central Executive Committee, arrangements were at once made to form a Provincial Committee for Bengal, including representatives of every division and district. For the direct conduct of business an Executive Committee was appointed, of which the Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens, C.S.I., Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, L.P., was Chairman, and Mr E. N. Baker, C.S., Collector of Customs, Calcutta, was Honorary Secretary. The constitution of the Committee is shown in Appendix B. As originally formed, it included 32 members, of whom 8 were officials and 24 non-officials, and was thoroughly representative of all sections of the community. The Hon'ble Mr. Stevens filled the office of Chairman till the 23rd June, when he resigned on being appointed to officiate as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. His place was taken by the Hon'ble Mr. W. H. Grimley, the present Senior Member of the Board of Revenue.

First measures taken by Provincial Committee.

16. The first meeting of the Committee was held on the 28th January, and was fully attended. Arrangements were made for inviting subscriptions and issuing collection books, and a circular was drawn up for issue to all District Officers, requesting them to form local Relief Committees, explaining the nature of the organization recommended by the Committee, and setting forth the objects to which, and the manner in which, the Fund should be applied. A copy of this circular, which forms the basis on which charitable relief was administered in Bengal, is given in Appendix C.

Formation of District Relief Committees.

*As already stated, local Committees had been formed in some districts before the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund was inaugurated.

17. On receipt of this circular, active steps were taken in all districts to organize machinery for charitable relief. Murshidabad was the first* district to form a Relief Committee, which was established on the 30th January 1896 under the presidency of the District Judge. This district, though not one of those most severely affected, was most active and efficient in the administration of charitable relief. It raised by local subscriptions the liberal sum of Rs. 27,011 for local expenditure, besides contributing towards the relief of sufferers elsewhere. Bogra, Malda, and Chittagong were also prompt in forming Committees, and in the Patna Division the Committees which had been formed prior to the establishment of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund were at once merged in the District Relief Committees constituted under the Fund. Eventually a Committee was formed in every district of the Province, with branch and sub-committees for subordinate areas in all distressed districts. Ordinarily the Collector or District Judge was Chairman of the District Committee, but in Burdwan and Palamau that office was filled by non-official gentlemen, Raja Bun Bihari Kapur and Rai Thakurai Bhagobat Dyal Singh Deo Bahadur. The details of the organization differed slightly in different districts, but the following account, which is taken from the interesting report of Mr. J. A. Bourdillon, C.S.I., Commissioner of Patna, is, in substance, typical of all:—

"A Central District Committee was first appointed, of which the Collector was th Chairman, and a Vice-Chairman, Treasurer and Secretary were elected, sometimes off and sometimes non-official. A local Committee was next nominated for each subdivision with similar office-bearers: for municipal towns a separate Committee was usually appointed, and in those districts which were most severely affected sub-committees were formed for each thana or outpost. On these various Committees most of the influential men of the neighbourhood found a seat: a large majority were non-officials, and, besides officials, they included European planters, lawyers, and doctors, native gentlemen and zamindars, pleaders, bankers, school-masters, and in short all who could afford the time to assist in what was universally recognised as a work of real benevolence The Committees administered each their own jurisdiction under the orders of the District Committee: to them they applied for funds, and to their Chairman they forwarded accounts and returns: these were submitted by him to the Secretary to the Fund in Calcutta. In each jurisdiction a definite work was usually assigned to each working member of the Committee, and besides this in some districts separate sub-committees were formed. In Saran an Accounts Sub-Committee did excellent work in drawing up simple rules of business and account, which proved to be of the greatest service. Usually, the care of the persons falling under the different heads of relief mentioned in paragraph 50 above was entrusted to different members, some taking over the care of orphans and the supply of comforts in poor-houses and hospitals, while a second group undertook to investigate the claims of the respectable poor, and a third charged themselves with the duty of regulating the grants under Object IV—a process which in the later stages of the operations involved much labour and enquiry."

Functions of Provincial and District Committees respectively.

18. In the administration of the Fund, the principle that commended itself to the Provincial Committee was that the actual disbursement of the money and giving of relief should be entrusted to the District Relief Committees, which alone possessed the necessary machinery, and which were in close touch with the distressed population and in immediate relations with the local officers of Government charged with famine work. The duties which the Provincial Committee reserved to itself were the collecting of estimates of the funds required by the various districts and the preparation of consolidated estimates for the Province; the procuring of funds from the Central Committee, and their distribution from time to time to different districts and divisions; the issue of detailed instructions to guide the local Relief Committees in the grant of relief; the prescribing, collection, and examination of periodical returns of expenditure and of persons relieved, and the compilation of similar returns for the whole Province; and the settlement, in communication with the Central Committee and the Local Government, of all questions of principle that might arise in the course of the operations.

Provincial Committee acted as local Relief Committee for Calcutta

19. To this division of duties there was one exception. At the outset it was considered that, as the area of severe distress was for the most part situated at a distance from Calcutta, no Relief Committee need be formed for the Presidency Town. Before long, however, it was found that the pressure of famine prices, which, as already explained, were a universal feature of the year throughout India, was making itself felt, to a limited extent, in Calcutta itself. The Committee therefore took upon itself the task of dealing with cases of distress at the Presidency. At first these were of rare occurrence Grants aggregating Rs. 1,400 were made from time to time to the Hon'ble Prince Bukhtyar Shah, C.I.E., to enable him to relieve destitution among a number of his co-religionists, including respectable women in straitened circumstances. The money was judiciously expended, the number relieved being 219. A sum of Rs. 300 was given to the Hon'ble Nawab Syed Amir Hossein, C.I.E., for a similar purpose, and was divided among 112 persons. A small grant of Rs. 50 was given to the Calcutta Orphanage, and a sum of Rs. 300 to the Rev. Mr. J. M. Brown for his orphanage at Raniganj. A similar application from the Lady Superior of St Vincent's Home was not entertained. as it was held to be outside the scope of the operations of the Fund.

20. Later in the year it became apparent that further measures were necessary in Calcutta. On the 3rd September the Commissioner of Police reported that numerous cases of petty theft had occurred in the town, and that it appeared that the culprits had been driven to steal by hunger. He also stated that children had been found wandering about the streets in search of food, and in a state of complete destitution. At the same time, Dr. Gibbons, Superintendent of the Campbell Hospital, commonly known as the Pauper hospital, represented that the wards of that institution, which have accommodation for 585 inmates, were seriously overcrowded in sequence of the presence of numbers of persons so debilitated by insufficient food and privation that they were unable to shake off the effects of disease, and were incapable either of earning their living or even of returning to their own homes.

21. Measures were promptly taken to deal with this emergency. The Corporation of Calcutta agreed to bear the cost of erecting two sheds in the compound of the hospital for the reception of the convalescents. The Committee contributed the cost of supplying these with filtered water and necessaries, and also provided cots, bedding, blankets, clothing, cooking utensils, and equipment for a population of 200 inmates. It also paid for the extra establishment required by the hospital for looking after these patients, and provided rations and medical comforts for a daily average of 200 persons. The Honorary Secretary visited the hospital on several occasions, and also accompanied the Commissioner of Police to an encampment of up-country paupers in Harrison Road Most of the inmates had come from a distance—Azimgarh, Mirzapur, Jubbulpur, and Monghyr—in the vain search for employment, and had broken down through disease and hunger. Many of the women were accompanied by children, and all were in a pitiable state of destitution. To meet cases of distress found in the streets, a number of printed tickets were issued through the Commissioner of Police to officers in charge of stations, each of which entitled the holder to receive one or more meals provided by selected native hotel-keepers in different parts of the town. Up to date meals have been given to 1,183 persons in all, at a cost to the Fund of Rs. 151-5-6. Finally, a sum of Rs. 3,000 has been made over to the Commissioner of Police to enable him to forward to their homes, many of which were situated a long distance from Calcutta, those who were unable to get there without help, and generally to deal with cases not fully covered by the arrangements indicated above. The total expenditure to date has been as follows:—

Proceedings of the Provincial Committee.

22. The Provincial Committee met in all eleven times. After issuing their circular of instructions already referred to, their first care was to call for estimates from the affected districts. The compilation of these and the preparation of a provincial estimate were a task of much difficulty, as the local Relief Committees had insufficient data to work on, and it was also uncertain what funds would eventually be available. It was decided, after careful consideration, to estimate the possible requirements of the Province at Rs. 30 48,000, and an estimate showing the details of this calculation was submitted on the 6th March. It is believed that this was the first detailed estimate to reach the Central Committee.

23. On receipt of an allotment of funds, the Committee proceeded to make grants to the local Relief Committees. The first provisional grants had been made on the 8th February, and included the following:—

Distribution of funds.

At first allotments were made to the District Officers direct; but it was soon found desirable to take advantage of the superior knowledge and experience of the Divisional Commissioners, and from the 30th April all grants were made to those officers, with discretion to apportion them to the affected districts as required. The Committee desire to acknowledge the care and judgment with which the distribution was made by the Commissioners, to whose prudence and discrimination the economy which has marked the administration of the Fund in Bengal is largely due.

The net assignments eventually made from time to time to each Division, after deducting refunds and adjustments, were as follows:—

24. The examination of the monthly accounts submitted by each district, and the preparation of the provincial monthly accounts and returns for submission to the Central Committee, devolved upon the Honorary Secretary, Mr. E. N. Baker. This was a work of considerable difficulty and labour, partly because the district accounts had to be compiled from figures supplied by disbursing agents, many of whom were non-officials, who were not accustomed to prepare returns, and who in many cases did not realize the importance of punctuality. Moreover, the principal return, Form B, eventually prescribed by the Central Committee, involved a very large amount of detail, and was beyond the power of an untrained staff to prepare. A further difficulty arose from the fact that the relief given was partly in the form of single payments, as where clothing or a grant of money for the purchase of seed and cattle was made, and partly in the form of recurring payments, as where a weekly or monthly dole was given for subsistence. These doles were given for different periods to different persons, as occasion required, and it was no easy matter to exhibit them in a form which should be entirely free from the risk of misleading. No special forms of registers had been prescribed in the first instance for recording either expenditure or details of persons relieved, and when returns were called for, it was found that there was no uniformity in the records preserved by local Committees, many of whom had kept imperfect accounts of their operations.

District and provincial accounts and returns.

25. Eventually, in July 1897, the Central Committee arranged with the Local Government for the appointment of a travelling Examiner to go round and inspect the accounts kept by the district relief agencies. This office was held by Babu Suresh Chandra Chatterji, Deputy Collector, who discharged his duties in a very efficient manner. He took over charge on the 3rd August, and within three months visited all the severely distressed districts (except Puri) and several others, recording full and useful notes on all the accounts and returns kept by the local Committees. His diaries contain much valuable information and many useful suggestions, which should prove of service in organizing charitable relief on a future occasion. He also rendered much assistance to the Committees whose districts he visited in preparing Form B. It would have been an advantage if such an officer had been placed at the disposal of the Provincial Committee at the outset of the operations.

Distribution of clothing received from abroad.

26. Another duty undertaken by the Provincial Committee was the receipt and distribution on behalf of the Central Committee of the clothing and other gifts in kind which were sent out by charitable persons in England, America, and elsewhere in aid of famine relief. In all 98 bales and packages of clothes, blankets, and unmade materials were received, of which 17 were despatched by Mrs. Jeannotte Hauser, of Chicago, U. S. A. These were received and stored in the office of the Provincial Committee, and were distributed to different parts of India, in accordance with indents and applications. The greater part was sent to the North-Western Provinces and Central Provinces, but the Punjab, Bombay, Madras, and many Native States in Rajputana and Central India received a share. Only two bales were sent to Bengal districts, most of which made their own arrangements for clothing either by purchase or by giving out the spinning of thread and weaving of cloth as a form of relief.

Receipts and expenditure.

27. A full statement of the accounts of the Provincial Committee and of the District Committees in Bengal and of the numbers relieved in each class will be found in Appendix D of this report. The following is a brief summary of their principal features.

28. The total net receipts,* after deducting a sum of Rs. 2,75,000 refunded to the Central Committee, were Rs. 22,02,864. Of this amount, Rs. 22,979 represented the balance of the late Bengal Distress Relief Fund, which was made over to the Committee by the Trustees of that Fund. Rupees 15,18,750 were the net grant made to Bengal by the Central Committee; Rs. 70,959 represented subscriptions received by the Central Committee, and stated by the donors to be intended specially for Bengal. Rupees 1,38,900 were subscriptions received direct by the Provincial Committee, or by District Committees for the Province generally; and Rs. 3,31,237 were collected by the various District Committees, each for its own use. Besides the above, the Provincial Committee collected Rs. 28,888 for India and Rs. 2,088 for other provinces, and remitted these sums to the Committees concerned. The remainder of the net receipts were of a miscellaneous description, and were chiefly made up of the sale-proceeds of work given out as a form of relief, such as rice obtained from paddy huskers, thread from cotton spinners, cloth from weavers, rope and twine from jute workers, and the like.

29. Among the contributions received by the Provincial Committee, a prominent place must be accorded to the very handsome sum of Rs. 20,000, the proceeds of a Fancy Fair organized by Lady Mackenzie, and held in the grounds of Belvedere on the 26th and 27th of February 1897. The grateful thanks of the Committee were conveyed to Lady Mackenzie and the ladies and gentlemen to whose generous efforts this welcome contribution to their funds was due.

30. The Sobhabazar Benevolent Society subscribed Rs. 3,050 through their President, Raja Binoy Krishna; Rs 1,219 was collected by Mr. W. D. Cruickshank, of the Bank of Bengal; and Rs. 1,197 by Mr. C. H. Wilkie, of Graham and Company. The Principal, Presidency College, raised a sum of Rs. 1,710-14 among the Professors, lecturers, and students of the College and the Hindu and Hare Schools. Among other individual subscriptions of Rs. 1,000 and upwards were the following:—Raja Pramada Nath Rai, of Dighapatia, Rs. 5,000; Raja Janaki Ballab Sen Rs. 5,050; His Highness the Raja of Hill Tippera Rs. 5,000 in addition Rs. 14,000 subscribed for India generally; Ganpat Singh ar Narpat Singh Rs. 4,000; the Raja of Mahurbhanj Rs. 4,000; Messrs. Kissen Law and Company Rs. 3,000; Mr. W. Maling Grant, Rs. 3,000; Babus Srinath Rai, Sitanath Rai, and Janaki Nath Rai, Rs. 3,000; the late Maharani Surnomoye, C.I., Rs. 2,500; Maharaja Surya Kanth Acharjya Rs. 2,000; Bhaia Dirgaj Deo Singh Rs. 1,500; and Mr. W. A. Brown, Raja Peary Mohan Mukerji, C.S.I., Messrs. Robinson, Morrison and Company, Thakurai Gobind Prasad Singh, of Ranka, the Maharaja of *Gidhour, Nawab Abdus Subhan Ali Chowdhry, the Raja of Gangpur, Maharaja Girjanath Rai, and Babu Nando Lal Gossain, Rs. 1,000 each.

* Not including Rs. 10,000 subscribed for the Monghyr district.

"Educational offerings," being the result of voluntary subscriptions raised among the boys of schools of all grades in Bengal at the suggestion of Dr. C. A. Martin, Director of Public Instruction, amounted to Rs. 1,238.

One donation, which does not figure in the accounts, was the gift of 200 maunds of ballam rice, presented by Mr. R. Zeigler of Backerganj. This was divided equally between the districts of Nadia and Khulna.

Receipts by District Committees.

31. In Appendix E is shown the sum collected in each district of the Province, whether for its own use, for Bengal, or for India generally. The districts which collected over Rs. 20,000 each were—Monghyr Rs. 34,207, Cuttack Rs. 28,164, Murshidabad Rs. 27,081, Bhagalpur Rs. 26,661, and Mymensingh Rs. 21,181; while Dinajpur, Gaya, and the Sonthal Parganas were not far behind. The individual subscriptions of largest amount for local expenditure were given by Maharaja Harballab Narain Singh, C.I.E., of Sonbursa, Rs. 10,000 for Bhagalpur; Maharaja Sir Ravaneshwar Prasad Singh Bahadur, K.C.I.E., of Gidhour, Rs. 10,000 for Monghyr; Raja Ram Narain Singh Bahadur, and Rai Camaleshwari Prasad Singh Bahadur, Rs. 5,000 each for Monghyr, and Mr. J. Hennessey, Rs. 5,000 for Malda. Subscriptions of from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 5,000, and of smaller amounts were so many that it is impossible to enumerate them in this report. All have been acknowledged from time to time in the subscription lists published in the press.

Expenditure.

32. The total expenditure to the end of October has amounted to Rs. 19,46,480. The total number of persons relieved was 720,086. Of these, 270,878 received assistance from the Fund to supplement or take the place of the subsistence ration given by the State. Eight thousand two hundred and two orphans and deserted children were supported. Relief in the form of work, clothing, and doles in money or grain was given to 194,678 persons among the respectable poor, including purdanashin women; and 246,328 persons received grants for the purchase of seed and cattle, and to give them a fresh start in life after the crisis was over. The administration of the Fund has been conducted uniformly by honorary and unpaid agency, the only charges being some small payments for clerical assistance, stationery and contingencies. The total expenditure on this account has been Rs. 26,883, which represents a percentage of 1·2 on the net income of the Fund and of 1·4 on its expenditure. The Committee are confident that the conspicuous economy which these figures disclose cannot fail to be gratifying to the generous donors of the Fund.

33. The following sections of the Report give a brief account of the operations under each of the four heads or objects for which the Fund was established.

OBJECT I.

Definition extended.

34. The first of these four objects was defined to be the supplementing of the subsistence ration, which alone is provided from public funds. In practice, however, it was speedily found necessary to widen this definition. Interpreted strictly, it implies that no relief should be granted from the Fund (under this head) except to persons who are already in receipt of relief from the State. But except in the fifteen districts, which were officially notified as being affected, no relief works were opened by Government, and little or no gratuitous relief was given from public funds. It was, however, quite impossible to confine charitable relief to those districts. As already explained, every district in the province was affected by the high range of prices, and almost every district contained areas where the crops had failed in whole or in part, where "distress which just falls short of absolute destitution" prevailed.

In districts of this class—of which, it is understood, examples were found in every province in India—there was ample and legitimate scope for the operations of the Fund. Moreover, in districts which are intersected by the Grand Trunk Road or other main arteries of traffic, destitute persons from distant parts were constantly found wandering along the high roads in search of employment or food. It was necessary to make provision for these, and this was usually done at the expense of the Fund, by establishing kitchens and poor-houses.

Relief of destitute travellers.

In the Gaya district, which was in itself almost wholly free from famine, kitchens had to be opened for the relief of wanderers at Aurangabad, Madanpur, Dobi and Barachatti, where on an average 330 persons were fed per diem, from first to last. At another kitchen in the town of Gaya 630 persons were fed per diem. Mr. Savage, the Collector, makes the following remarks on this subject:—

"The Grand Trunk Road, which runs through a thinly populated part of the district, will always be the place where the first signs of want will show themselves if there be scarcity in the North-West Provinces. The tale told by the travellers is always much the same. They look on Bengal in general, and on Calcutta in particular, as the land of plenty, and as soon as they feel the pinch of want at home, they sell all they have and start for the promised land, too often to meet death on the long and dreary march, or to find that even Calcutta can be stony-hearted, and to retrace their steps to die at their homes."

35. Similarly in Burdwan, which was not severely affected, it was necessary to establish a kitchen and temporary hospital at Budbud, on the Grand Trunk Road, which remained open for 170 days, and relieved the large number of 26,430 persons, or an average of 155 per diem, the average cost being about 9 pies a head.

36. In Monghyr a traveller's rest-house on a large scale was established under the personal charge of the Subordinate Judge, Babu Karunamoy Banerjee. This institution was very successfully managed, and relieved 10,331 persons in five months. The following interesting account of the institution has been submitted by the Subordinate Judge, to whom the Committee's acknowledgments are due:—

"The rest-house was formally opened on 1st April 1897, and remained in full working till 4th September 1897.

"On the first day no traveller came, as the opening of the rest-house had not been sufficiently known to travellers outside the district. I had therefore to depute peons to the railway-station, the steamer-ghat, and the Patna Road junction to inform passengers and travellers of the opening of a rest-house here and to guide them to it.

"On the 2nd April, a solitary traveller, named Jagesur Singh, came from Chapra, and the number increased to 13 on the following day, when 1 man from Gorakhpur, 1 from Basti, 1 from Benares, 2 from Jaunpur, 2 from Allahabad, total 7 from the North-Western Provinces, and 1 from Patna, 2 from Arrah and 3 from Muzaffarpur, total 6 from Bihar—13 in all—entered the rest-house.

"The procedure observed by me was as follows:—

"The open space in front of my house was selected as the place where the travellers were to assemble morning and evening. Every traveller was given a ticket under my signature bearing a consecutive number and his name and residence, and all these particulars were also entered in a register kept for the purpose. As soon as the names and residence of one batch were registered and they were given tickets, they were asked what food they would take, and then a memorandum stating the quantity of rice and dal or chura and gurh, or sattu and gurh to be supplied, was given to the modi, who used to deliver the same to the peons in duty, and the travellers were directed to repair to the rest-house, where they had the food of their own choice.

"The food was given on the following scale:—

For an adult—

Rice	1¼ pawa.
Potato	¼ "
or—
Chura	½ seer.
Gurh	½ pawa.
Sattu	¼ "
Gurh	¼ "

For a child—

"Half the above.

"For those who used to take cooked food, oil salt and fuel, &c., were also allowed in proportion.

"The travellers were allowed two meals only, except in cases of illness, or long starvation, when they were allowed to remain for days together till they were able to move. Sick travellers used to be sent to the hospital for treatment.

"Indigent travellers, who were found quite naked, were given a few yards of cloth from time to time.

"To maintain proper check on the subordinates, the travellers of the morning were again directed to attend me in the evening, so that I might personally ascertain the total number to be fed in the night and send order to the modi accordingly.

"I had to do this work twice in the day as a rule, once in the morning before Court and once in the evening on my return from Court; but whenever a fresh batch came either in the evening or at night, I had to do the work again, so that hungry and starving people might not be kept long without food. I used to inspect the rest-house once daily, and whenever there was any row or complaint, I used to go there at once for immediate enquiry and order. For such purposes, I had to go there sometimes even at 11 or 12 P.M. and later.

"The establishment consisted of one cook, one servant and one sweeper, and every attention was paid to sanitation.

"To maintain order and to take the travellers to the rest-house and to escort the supply from the modi's shop to the rest-house, I used to depute two peons morning and evening from the Civil Court staff, so that there might not be extra expenditure of the Famine Fund for these purposes, and to prevent collusion between the modi and peons, two new peons were used to be told off for each day.

"The modi used to submit his bills every fortnight accompanied by the memoranda or vouchers he had received from me for each day's supply. The bills were then compared with the vouchers and signed by me, and the vouchers destroyed by me personally.

"The quality of food supplied by the modi was from time to time tested by me in person, and its price regulated according to the market price for the time being. As the modi had to supply everything I required for the relief-house and did not get cash payments, he was allowed a small commission at 1½ anna on the rupee on the market prices of the articles supplied by him.

"The religious prejudices of the travellers were strictly observed, and this was the chief reason why cooked food was not insisted on in every case. In course of time the rest-house relief became so popular that people outside the district and outside the town used to call it "the Sadabart" after the religious and charitable relief which used to be given to travellers by the ancient Hindu kings of the country.

"The following statement will show the number of travellers, male and female, relieved every month, the montuly cost, the number relieved, the number coming from the Province under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and those coming from the North-Western Provinces being shown separately :—

"My thanks are due to the Secretary, Babu Shivanandan Prosad Singh, for the prompt assistance rendered by him whenever I stood in need of it. The Famine Clerk, Asgar Ali Beg, and my Civil Court staff also rendered me help."

37. In Jessore, where much distress prevailed, though the district was not officially declared to be affected, and no State relief works were opened, over Rs. 22,000 was "expended in doles to paupers who would ordinarily have been on the list of Government relief" The number relieved in this way was 17,573, including those who were incapable of work owing to old age and infirmity, women who had no relations to support them, and whose ordinary occupation of paddy-husking, &c., had temporarily failed, and the like.

In Khulna clothing was given to 3,036 destitute persons. Rs. 1,010 was spent in giving additional food and comforts to 3,064 inmates of Government poor-houses, and Rs. 1,755 in maintaining 1,252 persons in poor-houses supported wholly by the Fund, and Rs. 1,580 in providing for 3,945 starving wanderers. Half a case of Mellin's Food was sent to the Relief Committee of this district from the contribution generously given by the proprietors, and was employed in feeding 100 children.

38. In Faridpur, which, like the neighbouring district of Jessore, narrowly escaped falling within the famine zone, and where there was much local distress, especially in the Goalundo subdivision, money doles were given to 6,172 destitute persons of the lower castes at a cost of Rs. 8,918. Charitable relief was very economically managed in this district by the local Committee, and in some cases the Collector, Mr. Temple, after personal enquiry had to direct that it should be given more freely.

39. In the Patna Division the expenditure under Object I was inconsiderable in the districts of Patna and Shahabad. In Gaya, where it amounted to Rs. 7,786, it was incurred almost entirely in giving relief to wanderers in poor-houses and kitchens, as explained in paragraph 34 of this report. In Saran, Rs. 5,624 was spent on clothing, which was distributed among persons on the Government relief works and the respectable poor; and a small sum was also spent on port wine and brandy, which were given under the orders of the Civil Surgeon in cases of extreme exhaustion admitted to the poor-houses. It is said that there were many such cases.

40. In the three remaining districts of the Patna Division, the expenditure under Object I was on a much larger scale, being Rs. 29,368 in Champaran, Rs. 27,265 in Muzaffarpur, and Rs. 33,138 in Darbhanga. The following extract from the full and interesting report by Mr. Duncan Macpherson, C.I.E., Collector of Champaran, gives a good idea of the way in which the money was utilized in all these districts:—

Expenditure on Object I.

"The relief afforded under Object I (provision of comforts to those in receipt of subsistence rations from Government) has been under four heads—(a) supply of clothes and blankets to persons in receipt of Government relief (Rs. 23,968-11-1), (b) maintenance of a charitable kitchen before a Government poor-house was opened (Rs. 2,276-0-8), (c) supply of comforts to inmates of Government poor-houses (Rs. 2,025), and (d) miscellaneous relief of a similar nature (Rs. 1,098-10-3). Under the first of these heads (a), the expenditure has been Rs. 23,968-11-1, and this was spent in providing 3,323 men, 8,287 women, and 1,606 children, in all 13,216 persons, with blankets or clothing, or both. All these persons were in receipt of gratuitous relief from Government either in poor-houses or kitchens or in their villages, and all of them, except a number of the poor-house inmates, were given this when the Government relief was closing and the cold season approaching. Every man received four yards of plain cloth, every woman six and-a-half yards, and every child three yards. It was not found possible to give blankets also to all these. A sufficient quantity could not be obtained locally, and what had to be got from up-country did not arrive before many of them had dispersed. The delay was due to a hesitation on the part of the District Committee to embark on the expenditure until the prospects of the rice crop, which was in a critical state until the beginning of September in the most distressed part of the district, were assured and until it knew that its funds would be sufficient. Blankets were, however, given in all to 2,835 men, 5,328 women and 1,430 children, in all 9,593 individuals, the children, however, receiving only half a blanket each. The cost of clothing and blankets together average Re. 1-13 per head. Only an insignificant quantity of cloth was purchased from weavers, namely, Rs. 60 worth, but it has been mentioned in an earlier part of this report that there are very few regular weavers in this district. From petty local dealers Rs. 1,754 worth was obtained. The rest of the cloth had to be obtained from Calcutta, as only a limited quantity of a width suitable for native clothing could be got in the Cawnpore Mills. Blankets to the value of Rs. 12,207 were specially obtained through a local dealer from Agra, Hatras and other places in the North-West Provinces."

41. In Darbhanga the money under this head was chiefly spent on clothing and blankets, and in maintaining kitchens. Much attention was paid in this district to the tending and feeding of the children, who would have suffered acutely but for the kindly care of the Collector and his fellow-workers on the Relief Committee. The following extracts from Mr. Carlyle's graphic report are full of interest:—

"This Fund, as already stated, assisted the Government in the working of the poor-houses, especially in Khajouli, where there was a large and popular poor-house. People visiting Khajouli were shown the poor-house as one of the sights of the village. They always remarked how stout the inmates were, and though in many places the natives refused to go to the ghoribkhana, because they thought it was too like a jail, this institution was most popular with those who were reduced low enough to accept relief in a poor-house. The figures ran up to 384 at the end of July.

"In Bohera extras were afforded to the poor-house inmates, with the result that numbers of women and children from the country round came in. In the poor-houses Mellin's Food was used with good results. A poor-house Superintendent wrote:—"I have found that the infant children are in a very bad condition; they cannot suck the mother's body, as no milk is procurable from, on account of starvation. They are now getting food by gratuitous relief. Still it will take some time to recoup their health. We cannot supply the milk to these children to nourish them properly. If they are supplied with Mellin's Food, it would help them much, and the poor children will have the proper nourishment. The preparation of this food is very simple, that is, to mix them up in boiled water. I have enquired in the locality that they would not object to use the same, as they will get great benefit to nourish their children." Mellin's Food was supplied as requested, and was generally used.

"One other fact, illustrative of the poor people forsaking their ancient customs, may be cited. In Khajouli poor-house the water was both boiled and filtered; the filter was the simple charcoal-and sand contrivance. The people quickly took to it, and admitted that it was better than the water they had been used to. This was not in a city, but a village where nothing of this kind had been previously attempted, and the success of this scheme is probably due to the fact of the filtering agents being substances that were used by or known to every one and used as such agents in many public institutions.

"The ration authorized by the Famine Code was not enough to induce any to go but those who were actually starving. The additions supplied by the Fund brought a certain number of people who had no home, and found their weekly dole barely sufficient to keep body and soul together.

"In Warisnagar there were 4 kitchens, at which 2,400 children were fed daily. The kitchen at Muktapur had a thousand of these urchins coming every morning for their meal. The Charge Superintendent here had everything arranged as regularly as a strict disciplinarian in a public school could wish. The children came in from a distance of over two or three miles in many cases, each with his or her ticket and dish, a girl of 12 often carrying a little brother or sister that could not walk, and many anxious mothers coming to see their children fed.

"The mites were arranged in rows of 100 each, and sat down waiting for their breakfast, though every one of the 100 tongues that could wag did so. At 10 o'clock the men appeared with the large trenchers full of rice and filled up the dishes, but the children were not allowed to begin till all had been served, or some would creep round from the front to the rear to get a little more like Dickens' hero. It seemed hard to keep them waiting; at first it could not be done, but after a few days they became quite obedient. It was very hard to keep the tiniest from eating, especially on treacle days, for the treacle mixed with rice formed a bait the baby fingers could not be kept away from. On the command to commence there was a dead silence, and every child was hard at work.

"These children towards the close of the famine were mostly in good condition."

42. In Monghyr a poor-house and kitchen were maintained from May to October under the personal charge of Babu Sivanandan Prosad Singh, Honorary Secretary of the District Relief Committee, and relieved from 150 to 200 persons daily. This was in addition to the travellers' rest-house described in paragraph 36. In Bhagalpur expenditure under Object I was not kept clearly distinct from that under Object III, and it must be admitted that in practice it is frequently difficult to draw the line clearly between the two classes. In the Madhipura subdivision the fund was used to supplement the Government dole, and to give relief to those who, though destitute, "could not be included in the list of recipients of Government gratuitous relief, owing to restrictions having been imposed by Chapter V of the Famine Code." The largest number of persons relieved per diem is said to have been 12,400 during the week ending the 5th June, and the total amount spent was Rs. 30,959. In the Sonthal Parganas a sum of Rs. 21,380 was spent under Object I, mainly in the Deoghur and Jamtara subdivisions, but the information supplied regarding it is not very full. The main feature of the administration of the fund was that it was left largely in the hands of private agencies. There are numerous missionaries working in this district, and these gentlemen rendered valuable service in the distribution of relief. The Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Carstairs, draws attention to the importation of American grain (the gift of the American people, and sent out in the S.S. City of Everett at the cost of the Government of the United States) by missionary gentlemen, "which went a great way to save the lives of many persons, and was greatly appreciated by those to whom it was distributed."

43. In the Chota Nagpur Division kitchens and poor-houses were maintained in Hazaribagh, Lohardaga, and Singhbhum. In the first-named district they were very successfully administered by Babu Adhar Kali Mukerji and Maulvi Wahiduddin, and relieved 1,558 persons from first to last. In Lohardaga, where the kitchens numbered 22 in all, the largest were at Ranchi, Chutia, and Lohardaga. The first named was attended by numbers of children, and at one time apprehension was felt that persons with no claim to charitable relief were taking advantage of it, but steps were taken to prevent this. In Palamau, where the administration of the Fund was carefully supervised by the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Renny, clothing, blankets, and jhulas were distributed to the poor on Government relief, and also to the respectable poor, but distinct accounts were not kept. Provision was also made for the reception of diseased paupers in the local hospital at the cost of the Fund. These were kept entirely separate from the ordinary patients, and on recovery were sent on to the relief works.

OBJECT II.

Orphans.

44. The support of orphans has absorbed only a very small part of the Fund in Bengal. It is a striking feature of the famine of 1897, and evidence of the success which has attended the relief operations in this Province, that the mortality from all causes during the year has not risen in any appreciable degree above the normal rate. The number of deaths directly due to the famine was extremely small, while those indirectly due, so far as it is possible to classify them, were not numerous. The term "orphan," however, has not been restricted to those children whose parents actually succumbed to the famine. It has been regarded as including also those who had lost their parents previously, and had been supported by other relatives or their fellow-villagers, when the latter by reason of the pressure of the famine were no longer able or willing to maintain them. It also includes children who had been deserted by their parents, of whom there were a certain number. After the crisis was over many of these were again claimed by or restored to their former guardians.

45. The following remarks by the Commissioner of Patna illustrate some of the difficulties that were experienced in dealing with orphans:—

"The relief of orphans gave some trouble, since many children were at first put forward for relief who were either not orphans at all or had a parent living capable of maintaining them; this was especially the case in Darbhanga, where, partly from ignorance and partly with intent to deceive, large lists of orphans were prepared, which collapsed on enquiry. Into these cases personal investigations were made by the Circle Officers and the members of Committee, and the original numbers were greatly reduced. The number of orphans who came on to our lists from the death of their parents during the present season was extremely small, but such cases did occur when the parents, often from some distant place, died in our poor-houses and hospitals The vast majority of the orphans supported from the fund were poor children who had lost their parents before, and had been maintained by friends and relations till the necessities of the time and the opportunity of outside support caused them to be temporarily discarded."

46. The total expenditure under this head to the end of October was Rs. 13,505, and the number of orphans shown in the returns as relieved was 8,202. The latter figure, however, is misleading. A large part of it is due to the high numbers returned by three districts—Nadia (3,004), Muzaffarpur (2,021), and Darbhanga (870). In the first-named district many of the relieving agents returned all children as "orphans," and it was not possible subsequently to recast the figures. The same mistake has occurred in some other districts, though to a less extent. The Collector of Darbhanga, Mr. R. W. Carlyle, C.I.E., has made the following remarks as regards that district:—

"Very few orphans have been left on our hands at the close of the famine, as in most cases relations are left who are willing, now that the famine is over, to provide for them.

"A considerable amount of confusion was caused in the return from the fact that in some circles all children were put down as orphans under a somewhat inexplicable misunderstanding of the term. In other cases the parents receiving relief happened to have thought it would be easier to have the children provided for if they were brought up to the Famine Office as orphans. In one thana the Chairman, upon an orphan being brought to him, said it would be supported, and after the famine sent away to an orphanage. When this was announced the orphan turned round to the crowd, where the people were who had brought it, and cried for its mother and father, who at once came out and rescued it. This stopped further attempts to deceive this particular Chairman in this way. But other places

"furnished returns that needed a great deal of revision. Several circles returned all their children as orphans. One circle officer went further and returned his widows as orphans, and many put down as such all who have lost either father or mother or were without any visible means of support. In the former case the Babus seem to have looked up the meaning of the word in their English dictionaries, and found it to mean a child who had lost either parent. A personal inspection of the returns of one large charge, which was reporting 1,600 to 2,200 orphans on its lists, revealed the fact that out of 7 circles 5 in one week put down all their children as orphans, the total coming to 1,508. Another circle reported '641 orphans, including 580 widows.'

"There are no orphanages in the district except one under the charge of a German Missionary in Darbhanga. He has had a few admissions during the year, and many more applications than he could accept, but does not think the number is any larger this year than the average. But the only orphans which were actually supported by public funds were those in the poor-houses. These have been treated as the remainder of the children, and so no details can be given of their life during that period. Near Bohera two children were found deserted and taken to the orphanage. One died soon after, and its sister, which had been a weakly thing, was quite strong and lively, and at the close was adopted by a famine officer. Many orphans were thus found and provided for before the close of the work. But the number thus given was small in comparison with the total numbers under this head. In Khajouli only 5 orphans had finally to be provided for, but the number on the list reached 115 at the end of August. Most of them were taken by their relatives. The Charge Superintendent affirmed that these were all children who were stated to have no father and mother. To actually check this would be a useless waste of time. It is not a large number in a thana containing population of 300,000 people.

"Towards the close of the work they were gradually disposed of. In Darbhanga a Muhammadan gentleman adopted a boy aged eighteen months, who had been in the poor-house for some time, but the nurse of the poor-house, a woman who had been admitted as an inmate, but was very useful in looking after the youngest children and received the handsome salary of Rs. 3 a month for this, flatly refused to let the child go when the order for its adoption came. The child too was much attached to the nurse. The Muhammadan gentleman solved the difficulty by taking the woman into his service: the other orphans declared their intention of going with the nurse too, but they were otherwise disposed of. There has been no lack of people wishing to adopt orphans. The Maharajah of Darbhanga kindly offered to see some provided for, and Deputy Magistrates, clerks, and duftries have all sought these children."

Future maintenance of orphans.

47. According to the constitution of the Fund, it is contemplated not merely to support the orphans during the famine, but also to provide for the future maintenance of those who are not eventually taken over by their natural guardians, or by charitable persons or institutions. In Bengal, however, there will be few calls on the Fund for this purpose. The true number of orphans was small, as already explained; and a large proportion of them have already been taken charge of either by private persons or by various missionary agencies. Instances of these are given in the extract from Mr. Carlyle's report already quoted. It is not expected that the number requiring to be supported by the Fund will eventually exceed 120 in all. The balance in the hands of the Committee is sufficient to provide for these until they reach an age to earn their own living.

Object III.

Relief of the respectable poor.

48. The grant of relief to the respectable poor, the bhadra lok as they are locally termed, and to purdanishin women and their children, absorbed a larger part of the funds allotted to Bengal than any other form of charitable relief. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in his speech at the first and only meeting of the General Committee for the Province, on the 22nd January 1897, laid special stress on this form of relief, the need for which he considered more pressing, at least for the time being, than any other. The total amount expended under this head was Rs. 8,84,908, and the number of persons relieved up to the 31st October was 194,678. The chief forms of relief found suitable in Bengal for the respectable poor were—(a) gifts of clothing, which absorbed Rs. 14,841; (b) the provision of work in various forms, including paddy-husking, cotton-spinning, cloth-weaving, and the making of jute string; these absorbed Rs. 1,62,505; (c) doles of grain, Rs. 1,27,025; (d) doles in money, Rs. 5,18,770; and (e) cheap grain shops, Rs. 7,733. Besides these, there were various miscellaneous forms of relief, of local operation, which cost Rs. 54,030.

49. The chief expenditure on clothing was incurred in Champaran and Darbhanga, while smaller amounts were also expended in Nadia, Murshidabad, and Bhagalpur. The first-named Committee spent the considerable sum of Rs. 11,721 in providing clothing for 2 131 men, 7,818 women, and 2,763 children—12,712 persons in all. Four yards of cloth were given to each man, 6½ yards to each woman, and 3 yards to each child. Blankets were not given to these persons. In Darbhanga clothing was given to 2,477 persons, and in Nadia, Murshidabad, and Bhagalpur to 1,203, 525, and 645 persons, respectively. The sexes of these have not been reported.

Clothing.

50. The instructions of the Central Committee direct that work given as a form of relief to non-professional persons shall be shown under Object III, while work given to professional workers shall be entered under Object IV. It is doubtful whether this distinction rests on any sound basis: but even if it be correct in theory, in practice it has been found to result in confusion and want of uniformity. An attempt has been made to preserve the distinction in the returns; but in the present place it is preferable to deal with all relief given in the form of work, irrespective of the class of persons to whom it was given.

Work supplied to non-professional persons.

51. The chief forms of work resorted to by the Local Relief Committees were paddy-husking, the spinning of thread, the weaving of cotton cloth and silk, the twisting of jute string and rope, and of grass rope, and the grinding of corn flour.

52. In Bankura cotton thread was purchased by the Committee and advanced to weavers, of whom 137 families received relief in this way. The weavers were paid cash wages for their labour, and returned the woven cloth; of the latter a large part was distributed gratis, as a subsidiary form of relief to destitute women and children. Part of it was sold.

53. In Murshidabad, where much attention was paid to this matter by the Collector, Mr. Levinge, the relief of the spinners and weavers of coarse silk was a special feature of the operations. Many other forms of work were also resorted to. The following extract from Mr. Levinge's report is of interest:—

"The relief of spinners and weavers of coarse silk, referred to in the preceding paragraph, is a special feature of the Committee's operations. These persons are among the poorest of the population of the district, and even as early as November last, the possibility of great distress among them was specially brought to my notice. The coarse silks, called matkas, are worn chiefly in the Maharatta country, but owing to the prevalence of the plague in the Bombay Presidency, the matka-weaving industry suffered an almost total collapse. As those weavers are not cultivators, and have no other means of livelihood, the distress among them was very great. The Committee gave continuous employment to 150 families of weavers (consisting of about 700 persons), and through them, directly and indirectly, to 1,200 spinners. To Mr. Mukherjee is due the chief credit of the success of these operations. He induced the weavers to weave coarse silks in imitation of Assam silk, and these have been readily bought up both locally and in Calcutta. The working of this branch of relief has been particularly successful, the total expenditure incurred on matka-spinning and weaving being Rs. 11,423-13-9, and the sale-proceeds of the woven silks amounting to Rs. 10,149-6-6."

54. In Jessore and Khulna, paddy husking and jute-twisting provided work for 2,235 and 188 persons, respectively, most of whom were women. In the former district paddy-husking was not found wholly a success for this purpose. It is said that many of the women had no dhenkies, and it was difficult to get them to combine two or three together to work them. Jute-twisting was more popular. In the neighbouring district of Nadia no attempt seems to have been made to require any kind of work in return for the relief granted.

55. In Rajshahi and Pabna, paddy-husking was provided on a large scale, and in the former district advances of cotton thread for weaving and jute for twisting were also made. The system adopted was for the Committee to purchase paddy, which they advanced to the worker: the latter husked it, and returned a fixed proportion of rice to the Committee, retaining the balance as his remuneration. The rice thus returned was partly used for gratuitous relief either in the form of weekly doles, or as cooked food in the kitchens; but the greater part of it was sold in cheap grain shops, of which there were nine, to selected persons, all of whom were earning less than Rs. 30 per month, on tickets authorizing them to receive from one seer to half-a-seer above the market rate. The money available was thus used over and over again. The whole of the expenditure has been shown under the head of work supplied to non-professional persons, but much of it really falls under other heads. The total sum expended was Rs. 77,100, 3,098 persons were relieved by paddy-husking and jute-twisting; 3,385 persons received grain doles for an average period of 8 months; and 700 families received relief through the cheap grain shops.

In Pabna the arrangements were similar, but on a less extensive scale, the total expenditure being Rs. 58,536. In the Dussuria circle of this district, where the distress was most acute, the arrangements for the distribution of paddy and receipt of rice were in charge of Miss Arnold, a lady missionary, of whose services the Collector and the Local Committee speak in the highest terms.

56. In the Patna Division, Darbhanga was the only district in which the provision of work was seriously undertaken The expenditure amounted to Rs. 2,307, and 3,659 persons received relief. In Warisnagar jackets made by purdanashin ladies were bought by the Fund. In the town of Madhubani, cotton worth 2 annas at a time was issued to each woman, who returned to the Committee thread worth 2½ annas, and received remuneration for her labour. The general system was to issue advances of cotton, or sabai grass, which were returned in the shape of thread or rope, the workers being paid in cash. Spinning-wheels had in some cases to be supplied to the women. Objections were at first raised by the Brahmans to do any work, but they gave way when made to understand that without it they would receive no relief.

57. In Hazaribagh an excellent system was introduced by the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Herald. Each woman received 18 chitaks of cotton. At the end of a week she was expected to return one seer of thread, and would then receive 6 annas (subsequently reduced to 5 annas) as wages. Part of the thread was sold to the jail: but the greater part was advanced to weavers, who wove it into cloth, being paid at the rate of 4½ annas a seer for their work. This amount was considerably below the ordinary market rate of wages, thus avoiding all risk of competition with regular traders. The cloth thus obtained was partly distributed gratis to the destitute poor in poor-houses and on relief works, while a part was sold to persons just removed from destitution for the bare cost of the materials. The system afforded a three-fold measure of relief—to the women who spun the thread, to the weavers, and to those who received or bought the cloth. The arrangements reflect great credit on Mr. Herald and his fellow-workers. The Commissioner of Chota Nagpur has made the following remarks on the subject:—

"In February the Committee set on foot the very useful system of relief by cotton-spinning and weaving, already noticed in paragraph 24 of this report. At Giridih the Rev. Dr. Dyer of the Sonthal Mission and Babus Joy Narain Sirkar, Kolyan Singh, and Satis Chandra Sen at the district head-quarters gave valuable aid. Operations continued, during the hot weather and rains until they were closed in September, a daily average of over 1,400 women of all classes (besides a few decrepit men) being employed during the whole of this time in spinning and some 700 other persons in weaving. Rupees 12,427 were spent in the purchase of raw materials and Rs 13,044 in wages. Maunds 546½ of thread were received back from the persons engaged in spinning, of which Rs. 1,006 worth was sold, the rest being given out to the weavers to make into cloth Maunds 494¼ of cloth were received back from the latter, of which Rs. 6,157 worth is reported to have been sold, and Rs. 5,098 worth distributed in free gifts to 5,209 indigent persons at the kitchens and elsewhere. It is not clear whether there is any balance of cloth in hand."

58. Cotton-spinning was provided also in Lohardaga and Palamau, and to a certain extent in Manbhum. In the first-named district it did not prove a success, as the women were not accustomed to the work, and the sewing of jhulas was substituted. In Manbhum also it was not successful, except in the Pokhuria circle, where arrangements were made by the Rev. Mr. Campbell to provide each woman with a spinning-wheel and instruct her in its use. In Palamau, in addition to cotton-spinning, the grinding of sattu or corn flour was resorted to with great success. The following description of the system adopted is given by the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. R. H. Renny, to whose careful supervision the success of the operations was largely due:—

"The work of chhatu-grinding was conducted on the contract system. Small advances not exceeding Rs. 2 or Rs. 3 were given to the chhattu-grinders. With this they purchased barley, gram, etc., which they pounded into chhatu. It was ascertained that about ⅘ of "the raw materials were turned into chhatu and ⅛ were in husk and refuse. It was found that ⅞ of the chhatu so manufactured sold at a price sufficient to cover the cost of the raw materials; this being so that quantity was sold, and the remaining ⅛ was granted as remuneration to the chhatu-grinder. The earning of each chhatu-grinder ranged from one to one and-a-half annas per diem. Women alone were relieved by this means. On an average 586 women were relieved daily for an average period of 91·27 days at a cost to the Committee of Rs. 305. This expenditure arose from the Committee electing not to realise advances made to women in extreme poverty. The balance of the outlay under this head has all been recovered. It will be observed from the above brief account that this admirably-conceived method of relief was very nearly a self-supporting one."

Doles in grain and money.

59. The largest expenditure under Object III was incurred in giving doles in grain or money to destitute persons of the respectable classes. There were only eight districts in which one or other of these forms of relief was not adopted, these being Jalpaiguri, Rangpur, Bogra, and Purnea, and the four non-affected districts mentioned in paragraph 2. In Midnapore, Pabna, and Chittagong grain doles only were given; in 17 districts money alone was given: and in the remainder both forms were employed. The largest expenditure was incurred in the following districts, all of which are among those most seriously affected:—

				Rs.
Darbhanga	...	...	...	1,31,005
Saran	...	...	...	86,793
Bhagalpur	..	...	...	81,461
Champaran	...	...	...	80,374
Muzaffarpur	...	...	...	65,454
Shahabad	...	.	...	25,387
Khulna	...	...	...	17,895

60. The numbers relieved in each district by doles of grain or money are shown in Appendix D. There is, however, a certain difficulty in dealing with these figures. Most forms of relief, such as gifts of clothing, grants for the purchase of seed or cattle, and meals to destitute travellers, consist each of a single payment: and no element of time enters into them. This is not the case with that form of relief which consists in the maintenance, for a longer or shorter period, of persons who would otherwise starve. To use the words of the Commissioner of Patna—"Relief from the Charitable Fund has been of two kinds, viz., relief which was continuing, and that which has been given once for all: thousands have been fed day by day for months, while other thousands have received a gift out and out, and have passed off the stage." In these cases, a correct idea of the extent and value of the relief given cannot be obtained without taking into consideration the length of time during which each person was supported at the expense of the Fund. The instructions issued by the Central Committee enjoined that the number of separate individuals relieved, for whatever length of time, should be shown, irrespective of the length of time each was in receipt of relief, with the result that a traveller who might have received a single meal would appear side by side with a purdanishin lady, who might have been wholly supported by the Fund for six or seven months. To avoid so misleading a result, the Committee have endeavoured to show in their returns, under the head of persons relieved by grain and money doles, the average monthly numbers relieved in each district. In all the districts chiefly affected, this has been done. In some others, however, the district returns do not admit of such a calculation: and to this extent the provincial totals must be regarded as only approximate.

61. Each District Committee had to consider whether grain doles or money doles were best adapted to the circumstances. The advantages and disadvantages of each method are thus stated by Mr. Carlyle, Collector of Darbhanga:—

"Upon the first point most Committees decided in favour of cash payments. The reasons given were various; in large thanas, where there were many centres of relief, and but few European officers in charge, the cash system was the simplest.

"In Warisnagar, however, with four main centres, the distribution of rice was decided upon, as there were European gentlemen to supervise the work at each centre; each too had a kitchen, and by buying large quantities of grain for both kitchens and gratuitous relief, much peculation was prevented. Where close supervision is possible, the distribution of grain is preferable, but it requires very careful watching, as if the grain is bought in large "quantities from baniahs, unless checked by Europeans direct without native subordinates, considerable sums in the shape of commission will be embezzled in many cases. When the charge was too large to allow of constant check by the Chairman or some members of the Committee, constant abuses were prevalent. Thus grain could be bought by the Darbhanga seer weighing 84 tolas and distributed by the Calcutta seer of 80 tolas. This difference was, I am afraid, often considered by the native subordinates too trifling to appear in the accounts. A sharp and unscrupulous man could also always manipulate the native scales to weigh a seer less or more in twenty seers than there should have been.

"The distribution of money on the other hand, even if supervised as closely as the distribution of rice, was open to the objection that the recipients upon going home with their weekly pittance were often robbed. A man who came to take the dole of a sick person or purdanashin generally demanded one anna out of seven annas, and this could not be avoided, but often as not the poor soul who received the money direct, perhaps a blind old man or aged cripple, would be pounced upon by the chaukidar or punch of the village, and one or two annas taken from him. A person walking back with his dole of rice was not open to such danger. The punch or chaukidar would take enough for his present wants, but he would not rob each of a dozen people of his village.

"At Madhubani Town the Sub-Committee decided that grain was preferable to money, as most of the people were in debt, and when a few native gentlemen were all of the same mind, it was plain that they foresaw how, if money was given, the creditors would obtain it by fair means or foul: they recognised that it was not one of the objects of the Fund to drag people out of debt, but to help them in time of famine."

62. The arrangements made for selecting suitable cases, for bringing the dole to the hands of the recipient, and for ensuring that the relief granted from the Fund should not overlap that given by the State were substantially the same in all districts, though differing in minor points. The following extracts from the report of the Collector of Champaran exhibit the working of the system in a district in which the arrangements were very efficiently managed:—

Relief administered by the Charitable Fund, the complement of that given by Government, and measures adopted to prevent overlapping.

"As almost all the gentlemen referred to were Honorary Circle officers in the chain of Government agencies, the relief administered by the Fund and that given by Government was prevented from overlapping, and at the same time maintained close touch with each other. The objects to which the money granted by the Charitable Fund was to be devoted were clearly defined; and as soon as the local Committees were in full working order, the Government relief officers abstained from taking on to their lists, or retaining on them, individuals and families of high caste and respectable status, and instructed the members of local Committees to relieve all of this class whom they had found deserving of it. The exclusion of such people from the Government lists prevented all overlapping in the administration of relief. The Hindu castes that were considered primâ facie deserving of relief from the Charitable Fund instead of being compelled to accept it under Government arrangements were respectable Brahmans, Babhans, Rajputs, and Kayasths, the female members of whose families almost always live in seclusion. In addition to these Muhammadans of good status and Hindus of other respectable castes, who occupied a position of consideration in their villages, were admitted to relief from the Fund if the purda system obtained in their families. In all cases, of course, the primary qualification was their destitute condition. It was not difficult to comply with this condition. It is an admirable trait in their character that the self-respect of Hindus of the castes referred to makes them extremely reluctant to accept public charity in any form. The difficulty indeed has been to induce them to accept relief rather than starve, and much tact had to be displayed in dispensing it. It was for this reason that every possible endeavour was made to enlist the aid of non-official gentlemen in administering this form of relief, and that the regular famine officers of Government were not at first associated with it in any way. The comparatively small number relieved under Object III of the Fund—16,108 at the maximum period, or a daily average throughout of 7,003—indicates that this form of charity was dispensed with careful discrimination, and test enquiries made in the villages by auditing officers appointed by the District Committees show that relief has been limited to eligible individuals. At the same time it would be an unjustifiable inference from the paucity of the numbers to argue that relief was not brought within the reach of every person in need of it. The vital statistics of the year show that, making full allowance for cholera having been much less than usual, the mortality of the whole period during which famine has prevailed has not been above the normal. The remarks I have made apply to relief granted under Object III. Precautions of a similar nature were taken which prevented orphans receiving relief simultaneously from Government and from the Fund. Comforts granted under Object I were given only in poor-houses, and under the direction of the Government Medical Officers in charge of these. Donations under Object IV were all granted by Government Relief Officers, who prepared the lists of recipients simultaneously with those of persons who were to receive loans from Government for similar purposes, as will be explained more fully in discussing relief under that head in Part III of this report. All this relief given in this district from the Fund was purely gratuitous. From my knowledge of the working of the measures adopted, I have no hesitation in giving the assurance, that the operations of the Fund and of Government in no way overlapped, and that both systems at the same time maintained close touch with each other.

"The main form of the relief given to the respectable poor has been the grant of cash doles to the families and individuals selected for it. The amount thus expended was Rs. 79,701-10-1, and with this an average of 7,003 persons were relieved every month at a cost of Re. 1-6-9 per mensem, or 8·8 pies per diem. For the most part the grants were made monthly, but one local Committee gave them weekly and other two fortnightly. The arrangements under which this form of relief was administered have been described already in paragraph 18 of this report. The District Committee instructed local Committees that a fair rate to go by would be to give up to Rs. 2-8 a month for an adult and Re. 1-4 for a child as a maximum, omitting from the calculation children under 5, where there were several, and that in a large family an allowance of Re. 1-8 a head all round might suffice. The average rate, as has been stated, works out to Re. 1-6-9, so that the instructions issued must have been followed. I may mention that in the case of every Committee where relief under this head has not been given under the personal supervision of a European planter living in the midst of those who received it, inspecting auditors, specially appointed by the District Committee for the purpose, have tested the lists and amounts shown in the accounts as distributed, and in every case the accounts rendered were proved correct by the admission of the recipients. In the case of one local Committee, however, many of the recipients at first acknowledged a sum less than what was in the accounts; but it was found that they had misunderstood a notice that had been issued shortly before that those who had received Government loans would have to pay up this year; and when the auditor went round next day to correct this impression, the true amounts were acknowledged."

Money doles.

63. Cheap grain shops were opened in Patna, Saran, Rajshahi, Hazaribagh, and a few other districts. In Appendix F is given an extract from the report of the Collector of Saran, Mr. Chapman, containing a clear and interesting account of the Chapra cheap grain shops. These were under the personal management of Mr. Mazharul Haque, Honorary Secretary of the District Relief Committee, to whose care and indefatigable attention their marked success was mainly due.

Cheap grain shops.

64. Of the miscellaneous expenditure recorded under Object III, it is sufficient to say that for the most part it consisted of relief given to persons who would have been in receipt of gratuitous relief from the State, had such relief been organised in the districts where it was concerned.

Miscellaneous expenditure under Object III.

OBJECT IV.

65. The expenditure under Object IV, though large in itself, bears a smaller proportion, 41·6 per cent., in Bengal to the total expenditure than in other severely affected provinces. The reasons for this are two. In the first place, the mortality among the cattle in Bengal, whether from disease or from want of water and fodder, was happily less than elsewhere, and the grants required for providing the cultivators with fresh cattle were comparatively small. Secondly, some delay was occasioned in consequence of the different views held by the Provincial Committee and the Central Committee as to the propriety of giving relief under this head in the form of charitable loans. Acting on the recommendation of the Commissioner of Patna, the Committee authorized the employment of their funds in this manner with the view partly of sifting out undeserving applicants and partly of lessening the risk of demoralizing the people by wholesale gifts of money. The intention was that loans, carrying no interest, should be granted from the fund to cultivators who had come to the end of their resources, and had no security, or only insufficient security, to offer, and who were therefore not eligible to receive advances from Government under the Agriculturists' Loans Act, but who nevertheless were not without a reasonable expectation of being eventually able to repay the money. In such cases the Provincial Committee held that to grant relief in the form of a charitable loan, rather than in that of an out and out gift, would enable the recipient to preserve his self-respect, and was a truer form of charity than if the money were given him outright. The Central Committee, however, took exception to the proposal, mainly on the ground that loans were not in accordance with the purposes for which the fund had been established. The discussion which ensued occupied so much time that eventually, in July 1897, to avoid further delay the Provincial Committee decided to grant no more loans for the future, leaving each Divisional Commissioner to exercise his own discretion in respect of those loans which had already been issued. Partly owing to this regrettable delay, and partly to the disinclination of many district officers to make gifts where loans would have been preferable, the total sum spent was less than it would otherwise have been.

66. The chief forms in which relief was given under Object IV were (a) the provision of work for professional labourers and artizans; (b) grants for the rebuilding of houses; (c) grants of money (and in a few cases, in kind) to enable cultivators to procure seed-grain and plough-cattle; (d) loans for the same purpose; and (e) valedictory doles. The first of these has been dealt with in paragraph 51 of this report, and the second is not important.

67. By far the largest expenditure was under the head of grants for the purchase of seed and cattle, which absorbed Rs. 5,20,265 out of a total of Rs. 8,09,947. It was largest in Darbhanga (Rs. 1,54,438), Saran (Rs. 1,29,147), Muzaffarpur (Rs. 1,02,329), and Champaran (Rs. 87,531); and was also considerable in Nadia and Jessore. The number of payments made in these four North Bihar districts was 23,482, 32,040, 29,857, and 16,883 respectively; each payment represents the relief given to one household, and the number of individuals who benefited thereby was at least five times as great.

Grants for the purchase of seed and cattle.

68. The administration of this branch of charitable relief, and also of the grant of charitable loans, was conducted through the agency of Government officers to a greater extent than was the case with any other form of relief from the fund. The chief reason for this was that, before the time came for the issue of gifts or loans for the purchase of seed and cattle, enquiries had been proceeding for some time into the applications submitted everywhere for advances from Government under the Agriculturists' Loans Act; and a great mass of information had thus accumulated in the hands of the district officers. This information to a great extent governed the grant of relief from the Fund: and it was manifest that it could be more expeditiously and efficiently applied by the District Officer at first hand than by the Relief Committee at second hand. The Committee are again indebted to Mr. Duncan Macpherson, Collector of Champaran, for the following clear account of the system observed in selecting suitable cases and distributing the money.

"The principal expenditure of the fund has been on object IV (aid given to those who lost all to enable them to make a start in life again). It took three forms—(a) grants for purchase of seed-grain (Rs. 87,531-5-4), (b) valedictory money doles to those who were in receipt of gratuitous relief from Government or the fund (Rs. 21,062-10-11), and (c) assistance in rebuilding houses destroyed by inundation (Rs. 304). The total amounted to Rs. 1,08,898-0-3. All relief on this object (except a few grants to the respectable poor made by the Bettiah Committee) has been distributed under the personal supervision of the officers of Government, who also prepared the lists of eligible recipients.

Expenditure on object IV (enabling the poor to make a fresh start in life.)

More than six-sevenths of the seed grants was distributed in the end of May and during June, the time when seeds for the rains crops and winter rice is required, and 70 per cent. of this was given out in the Hardih and Bagaha thanas in the north of Bettiah, where the people were in the worst plight of all. Elaborate arrangements were made for ascertaining who were fit recipients for this form of relief and for distributing the grants. The work was entrusted to the Government Relief Superintendents and their assistants, who were all either gazetted officers or of equivalent status. These officers were at the same time charged with the preparation of lists of persons who were to receive loans from Government for similar purposes, and the enquiries were conducted simultaneously. In each village, in consultation with the principal residents and others who knew their circumstances, a list was prepared of all on the rent-roll, except those who were excluded as being sufficiently well off or able to procure loans from private sources. This list was prepared in three parts:—

(1) For bhadoi and aghani seed.

(i) Cultivators unable to borrow privately, but from whom there would be a reasonable prospect of recovering the grants, and who had security to give for this.
(ii) Cultivators unable to repay loans or to give sufficient security, but who have not had to resort to relief works.
(iii) Cultivators who were reduced to earning a living by coming on to relief works.

Class (i) were to receive loans from Government. Classes (ii) and (iii) were to receive donations from the Charitable Fund, but as it was understood at the time the arrangements were made that the Bengal Committee had approved of a recommendation of the Commissioner that a large portion of these grants should be given by way of loan, instructions were issued that those in class (iii) should be given to understand that they would be liable to repay the grant without interest, when they might be able to do so, and an acknowledgment to this effect was to be taken from them. Eventually, however, classes (ii) and (iii) were put on the same footing, all receiving out and out free grants. The two classes were distinguished only in view of the proposals understood to be pending. The result is that no loans at all have been granted from the fund in this district. Careful "rules were laid down by me for adequate enquiry by a responsible officer, for regulation of the maximum sums to be given for payment of the grants in his immediate presence, and for the submission of detailed lists of payments vouched for by a couple of leading residents of the village concerned; and I am in a position to give the assurance that the whole of this money has been properly expended on the object for which it was granted. It is true that the auditor deputed by the Bengal Committee reported to it that my instructions had not been observed by the Bettiah Local Committee; but such grants were not made through its agency at all, and what the auditor referred to were a very few cases in which the Bettiah Committee supplemented the monthly dole to the respectable poor by special grants to enable them to procure seed. It is important that I should mention this matter here to correct the unfavourable impression the auditor's report no doubt created. Altogether 16,883 heads of cultivating families have received seed grants from the fund, the payment to each averaging only Rs. 5-2-11, so that the instructions issued limiting the grants to what was absolutely necessary were rigidly complied with."

Charitable loans.

69. Charitable loans were chiefly given in the Chota Nagpur Division and in the districts of Khulna and Monghyr, and aggregated in all Rs. 1,10,249. The experienced Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, Mr. Arthur Forbes, C.S.I., who paid great attention to the subject of loans, has expressed regret at the decision of the Provincial Committee regarding them, the reasons for which have been briefly explained in paragraph 65. In Appendix G will be found an extract from Mr. Forbes' report, which contains some instructive criticisms and suggestions. The Committee are of opinion that Mr. Forbes' remarks should receive attentive consideration if charitable relief should be undertaken on a future occasion.

70. The system observed in Lohardaga, where about Rs. 25,000 were advanced in the form of loans, is described in the following extract from the report of the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Streatfeild:—

"Charitable loans under object IV.—The grant of the Provincial Committee has been of the greatest use in this district. As already noticed in section (b), the bulk of the grant has been advanced in the interior through the agency of missionary and other gentlemen. Rupees 26,425-14 have been advanced in all to agriculturists, but as accounts have not been received for Rs. 1,500 disbursed by the Munsif of Lohardaga, Rs. 24,925-14 only have been shown as disbursement in the statements A and B. Out of this amount only Rs. 4,994 were advanced at head-quarters. The following is the substance of the instructions which I issued for the guidance for those gentlemen:—(1) Care should be taken that loans in no case exceed the actual requirements of the borrower for the sowing of his own land. (2) Loans should not be made to those who have means to buy seed-grain, or sufficient credit to borrow such means on reasonable terms. (3) An agreement should be executed by those taking loans in a form prescribed by me (a copy of it is annexed to this report) stipulating that the loan would be recoverable from them under the Public Demands Recovery Act. No other security has been taken, as the loans have been as a rule given in small sums. They have been made repayable on or before the 31st January next. In the case of loans distributed at head-quarters, enquiries were made by Government officers before the loans were actually granted. Lately when the sowing season had passed, these loans were given for the support of cultivators during the agricultural season. As I have observed in my report on Government famine operations, the great advantage of the Relief Fund loans was this, that I was not bound by strict rules as to their distribution, and was therefore able to distribute them through missionaries and other local sources, thus saving the applicants from a tiresome and expensive journey to Ranchi, at a time when they had scarcely the means to live at home, as well as a troublesome enquiry by a Government officer and a long wait for the money. I found it impossible in this district to distribute the sums placed at my disposal in free gifts, or even in loans without interest. The people are quite incapable of distinguishing between grants from Government and those from charitable funds, and those assisted by Government would have been unable to understand why they were granted less easy terms than others relieved from the Fund, and would have given me great difficulty in collecting the sums due from them. I was therefore compelled to grant all loans from both sources on the same terms. In collecting sums due to the Relief Fund the greatest leniency will of course be shown, and to ensure that no unnecessary harassment is caused to the debtors of the Fund, I propose to collect, as far as possible, through the gentlemen who originally paid out the loans."

71. In Khulna, where over a quarter of a lakh of rupees was advanced, the loans are said to have been very useful in extending the cultivation of aus rice and thus shortening the period of distress. The following extract from the report of the Collector, Mr. Vincent, is interesting.

"The advantages derived from this wise step were immense. Aus paddy used to be grown in very small quantity in the affected area, and though there were lands fitted for "its cultivation they were kept fallow. When it was given out that loans would be given for cultivation of this early crop, people were enthusiastic and commenced to till their lands, with the result that not less than three times the land which used to be cultivated in ordinary years was sown down. Even those to whom no advances were given caught the contagion as it were, and brought their lands under cultivation. The effect was that, when the aus paddy came into the market, prices became easier and the pinch of distress was almost over."

Valedictory doles.

72. A very useful form of relief under object IV was suggested by the Commissioner of Patna, and employed mainly in the affected districts of the Patna and Presidency Divisions, and the Manbhum district. This was the grant of a small sum of money, usually Rs. 2 a head for adults, to each person who was still in receipt of gratuitous relief in any form at the close of the relief operations. These payments were intended to enable these poor people to live, with the help of such charity as their fellow villagers could give them, till the ripening of the next harvest, or till they found some other means of earning a living. They also served incidentally another purpose, by marking the end of outside relief, in a manner which was recognized and understood by the people.

The Chittagong cyclone.

73. One special item of expenditure may be noticed in this place. This is the grant of sums aggregating Rs. 50,000 to the Chittagong district for the relief of sufferers by the cyclone of the 24th October 1897. By this calamity a tract of 193 square miles of country was submerged by a storm-wave; the growing crops over a still larger area were almost totally destroyed; all houses and personal property were wrecked, and great numbers of cattle were drowned. The loss of human life is not yet accurately known, but is believed to exceed 10,000. Immediately after the occurrence, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal requested the Committee to place funds at the disposal of the local authorities for the relief of the sufferers; and during the following fortnight grants, amounting in all to Rs. 50,000, were accordingly remitted to the Commissioner of the Division. No detailed accounts have yet been furnished of the expenditure incurred, but these will be incorporated in the final balance sheet. Expenditure of this kind does not fall strictly under the head of famine relief, but the Committee were of opinion that the subscribers to the Fund would approve of the application of the money to the relief of sufferers from such a calamity as a cyclone; and this view has also been accepted by the Central Committee.

Final balance sheet.

74. The present report covers the whole of the operations of the Fund in Bengal down to the 31st October 1897. By that date, charitable relief had come to an end everywhere, except in Champaran, Manbhum, and to a very small extent in one or two other districts. It is therefore not proposed to issue any further report. All that remains to be done is to settle outstanding claims; to withdraw from the District Relief Committees their unspent balances, except such as were specially subscribed for district expenditure; to transfer to the Local Government the funds to be applied to the future maintenance of famine orphans; and to refund any surplus that may remain to the Central Committee. All necessary steps have been taken for those purposes, and it is probable that the final balance sheet of the Bengal Branch of the Fund will be issued at a very early date.

75. Of the blessings which the Charitable Relief Fund has carried to the people of this province, it is not necessary to say much. It has fulfilled the purpose for which it was raised. It has lightened the burden of suffering in multitudes of simple homes. It has stretched out a friendly hand to thousands who held aloof from the colder and more formal charity of the State. And if the gratitude of these has not been loudly proclaimed, it is none the less sincere and abiding. The donors of this munificent charity need feel no fear that their splendid gift was unneeded or unwelcome, or that it has failed to bring forth its full fruit in due season; for "in charity there is no excess, neither can angel or man come in danger by it."

Acknowledgment of services.

76. In conclusion, the Committee desire to express their appreciation of the services of the numerous ladies and gentlemen who have assisted in the administration of the Fund. Their acknowledgments have already been expressed in paragraph 23 of this report to the Commissioners of Divisions for the care and judgment with which the funds placed at their disposal were distributed; and in particular their thanks are due to Mr. J. A. Bourdillon, C.S.I., Commissioner of Patna, who in the midst of pressing anxieties and overwhelming duties yet found time to actively supervise the management of charitable relief. Their thanks are also due to the Collectors of all the affected districts, and especially to Mr. Duncan Macpherson, C.I.E., of Champaran, Mr. R. W. Carlyle, C.I.E., of Darbhanga, Mr. Earle and Mr. Chapman of Saran, and Mr. Hare and Mr. Maude of Muzaffarpur, each of whom, as Chairman of the local Relief Committee, has been the mainspring of action, and guided the proceedings throughout.

They also desire to acknowledge the great services rendered by the gentlemen, both official and non-official, who have discharged the duties of Honorary Secretaries of the respective Relief Committees, and especially by Mr. Mazharul Huq and Babu Raghubans Sahai of Saran, by Mr. H. Wheeler, C.S., by Mr. J. M. Wilson of Muzaffarpur, by Babu Sri Nath Gupta of Khulna, Babu Shiva Nandan Prasad Singh of Monghyr, Babu Nagendra Nath Sarkar of Bhagalpur, Rai Jadu Nath Mukerji Bahadur of Hazaribagh, and Dr. R. M. Banerji of Palamau.

Lieutenant M.F. Harding, 19th Madras Infantry.
" G. R. Casells, 35th Sikhs.
" B. M. Battye, 6th Bengal Cavalry.
" H. L. Hole, 19th Madras Infantry.
" W. M. Grimley, 20th Panjab Infantry.
" J. H. Hudson, 22nd Madras Infantry.
" R. B. G. Strong, 1st Madras Lancers.
" S. K. B. Rice, 35th Sikhs.

Their thanks are also due to the Military Officers who were employed on famine duty, and in particular to Lieutenant Hudson and the other gentlemen marginally noted whose names have been singled out by the District Officers for honourable mention on account of the excellent service which they rendered as Chairmen of Committees or otherwise.

Very valuable aid has been rendered in many districts by the members, both ladies and gentlemen, of various missionary bodies. Among these may be mentioned Miss Arnold of Pabna, Dr. and Mrs. Morrison of Rajshahi, the Rev. Dr. Dyer of Giridih, the Rev. A. Campbell of Pokhuria, the Rev. D. G. Flynn, the Rev. W. Norman, S.J., the Rev. F. Hahn, and the Rev. W. Kiefel of Lohardaga. The Committee also desire to express their obligations to the following gentlemen who have rendered very useful and active service in connection with the famine operations:—Mr. Allen Peppe, Manager of the Chota Nagpur Estate, Swami Akhananda of Murshidabad, Babu Tarini Pershad of Rohini, Monghyr district, Babu Lutchmi Pershad Singha of Sakarpura, Monghyr, Mahashoy Tarak Nath Ghose of Bhagalpur, and Mr. E. Milne of Jagdispur.

The Commissioner of Patna and all the District Officers of North Bihar have referred to the great assistance rendered by the indigo-planters, who in spite of a disastrous indigo season, and notwithstanding the great losses entailed on them as landlords by the famine, nevertheless spent large sums on relief works, and devoted a great deal of time and energy in assisting in the administration of relief and in supervising the operations of the Fund. The gentlemen whose names have been specially brought to notice by the Commissioner are Mr. G. R. Macdonald of Moniira, Mr. T. R. Filgate of Bahrauli, Mr. H. H. Macnamara of Ramkola, Mr. J. Rutherford of Cheyton Pursa, Mr. H. Murray and Mr. W. H. Christien of Bagaha, Mr. C. Still of Ramnagar, Mr. F. A. Hudson of Seraba, Mr. G. H. Dalrymple Hay of Jagaolia, and Mr. Hey Webb of Muktapore.

The list of zamindars, merchants, pleaders and other private gentlemen whose services have contributed to render the operations of the Fund successful is so long that the Committee cannot attempt to single out any names from among those who are most prominently mentioned in the divisional reports. A list of these is given in Appendix II. To one and all of these, and to very many other gentlemen, official and non-official, European and native, in all ranks and conditions of life, the warm thanks of the Committee are due, for the time, the labour and the energy which they have ungrudgingly devoted to the work.

APPENDICES.

APPENDIX A.

Statement of the objects to which private subscriptions may legitimately be devoted.

GOVERNMENT fully accepts general responsibility for saving the lives of the people in tracts in which famine prevails; and it is essential that private charity, while working side by side with, should not interfere with or overlap the operations which are organised for this purpose. There is, however, ample scope for its exercise in supplementing these operations, in mitigating suffering, and in relieving distress which falls just short of absolute destitution. Especially private contributions might usefully be expended on the following objects:—

Firstly: in supplementing the subsistence ration which alone is provided from public funds, by the addition of small comforts, whether of food or of clothing, for the aged or infirm, for the patients in hospitals, for children, and the like.

As guardian of the public purse, and in view of the magnitude of the calamity, Government is obliged to limit its assistance to what is absolutely necessary for the preservation of life.

Secondly: in providing for the maintenance of orphans.

Every famine leaves behind it a number of waifs who have lost or become separated from those who should be responsible for them, and for whose maintenance it is necessary to provide till they are of an age to support themselves.

Thirdly: in relieving the numerous poor but respectable persons who will endure almost any privation rather than apply for Government relief, accompanied as it must be by official enquiry into, and by some kind of test of the reality of the destitution which is to be relieved.

The feeling of the sacredness of the "purdah" or domestic privacy is intensely strong in India; and it is most difficult for any official organisation to reach, or even to ascertain with certainty the existence of, distress of this nature.

Fourthly: in restoring to their original position, when acute distress is subsiding, those who have lost their all in the struggle, and in giving them a fresh start in life.

The peasant cultivator may often thus be saved from losing his holding, through sheer inability to cultivate it, and from sinking to the position of a day-labourer.

APPENDIX C.

Circular No. 1, dated Calcutta, the 29th January 1897.

From—E. N. BAKER Esq., Honorary Secretary, Bengal Provincial Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund,

To—The District Magistrate or Deputy Commissioner of

I AM directed by the Executive Committee for Bengal, of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund, to invite your attention to the proceedings of a public meeting held in Calcutta on the 14th instant, over which his Excellency the Viceroy presided, and at which the Resolutions quoted in the margin were unanimously passed. The proceedings of that meeting have been reported in the public press, and will doubtless have been perused by you.

Resolution :—That the meeting recognises the fact that the time has come when a Charitable Fund should be formed for the relief of distress in the famine-stricken districts of India, such relief being supplementary of the operations of Government and designed to meet cases not clearly or adequately covered by those operations, and that to this end, subscriptions should be invited from the well-to-do throughout this country, and contributions from abroad be thankfully received.

Resolution :—That this meeting accepts the statement of the objects to which private subscriptions may legitimately be devoted, as set forth by Government in the Gazette of India of the 9th January, and the organization there suggested for the collection and administration of subscriptions to the Fund: and resolves that a General Committee composed of the following gentlemen* be appointed, with power to add to their number, and to appoint an Executive Committee to administer the Fund.

* Vide list annexed.

2. At the instance of the Central Executive Committee which was appointed under the second of the two Resolutions referred to, a meeting was held on the 22nd instant, under the presidency of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, at which it was resolved to form a Provincial Committee for Bengal, composed of the gentlemen named in enclosure A of this letter; and an Executive Committee composed of the gentlemen named in enclosure B was appointed to administer the Charitable Relief Fund in Bengal.

3. The Executive Committee for Bengal would now request that steps may be taken for the formation of Local Committees in each district of the Province, and for the raising of subscriptions to be administered by those Committees, in accordance with the principles approved by Government and accepted by the Central Committee. Enclosure A contains the names of gentlemen resident in your district who are on the Provincial Committee, who it is thought may appropriately be invited to serve on the Local Committee for (   ) with any others who may be co-opted by them. It will be understood that this list is a nucleus only. The Executive Committee have no doubt that in the district of (   ) there are many other gentlemen of good position who will be willing to serve, and they regard it as important that the co-operation of all such should be secured, in order that the Local Committee may be as strong and representative as possible. In the opinion of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, in which the Executive Committee fully concur, the Local Committee should be essentially non-official in character, and this should be borne in mind when determining its composition. It should, however, be associated with the district and subdivisional officials. This is considered desirable in order to ensure that funds supplied by private charity shall not interfere with or overlap the operations of Government officers, who are responsible for doing all that is necessary to save the lives of the people in tracts in which famine prevails. The Executive Committee hope that no time may be lost in arranging for the appointment of a Local Committee for (   ) in accordance with these suggestions, and they request that, when this has been done, the names of the gentlemen of whom it is composed may be communicated to them. Any changes in its composition from time to time should be similarly reported.

4. In addition to the Local Committee for the district, it will probably be desirable to form one or more Sub-Committees to deal with subdivisions or other smaller areas. This is a point on which your experience and the views of the leading residents will be the best guide. If you should consider this course desirable, the same principles which have been indicated in respect of the district committee should, mutatis mutandis, be observed. The Executive Committee would be glad to be informed what course is decided on in this matter.

5. As soon as the Local Committee has been appointed, it is desirable that a meeting should be called, at a very early date, at which you should explain the place which it will hold in the machinery for dispensing charitable relief, the objects with which it has been formed, and the principles to be observed by it in the discharge of its functions. In this connection, your attention is invited to enclosures C and D of this letter. The first of these contains a sketch of the organization which has been devised for the collection and administration of private subscriptions: the second is a statement of the objects to which private subscriptions may legitimately be devoted.

6. The primary objects with which it is proposed to establish Local Committees are (a) the raising of subscriptions, and (b) the detailed administration of the relief funds raised by private charity in concert with the local authorities. With regard to the former, the Executive Committee suggest that subscribers should be informed that their subscriptions can be devoted (i) to the needs of all parts of India which may be distressed, or (ii) specially to meet the needs of the province of Bengal, or of any particular district or area. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has expressed the opinion that, having regard to the circumstances of the case, it is preferable that subscriptions raised in Bengal should be applied to the relief of distress in this province, and the Executive Committee desire to endorse this view. Effect will, however, be given to any wishes that may be expressed by individual subscribers in this matter. The local knowledge and influence of the District Committee should be invaluable in inviting subscriptions and administering the funds; and the executive Committee rely confidently on their assistance in making the appeal successful. The authority of Government has been obtained to depositing all sums received in the district treasury to credit of an account to be entitled the "(   ) Branch, Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund." An account should be submitted at the end of each fortnight, beginning from the 1st February 1897, in the form hereto annexed (enclosure E), showing the amounts collected from time to time. Each Committee should keep a register in a suitable form, showing separately all sums received by it under each of the three heads of enclosure E, and the corresponding remittances to the Executive Committee, and other expenditure. At the end of each fortnight, all sums designated by the subscribers as devoted for the needs of India generally, or to those of the province of Bengal, should be remitted to the Executive Committee by Remittance Transfer Receipt.

7. The funds to be administered by the Local Committee will consist of (i) subscriptions designated by the donors as intended for the relief of distress within the district: and (ii) sums allotted by the Bengal Executive Committee. The objects on which these funds may properly be expended are set forth in enclosure D of this letter and are four in number. It is considered that the Local Committee should have a free hand in the administration of these funds, and there is no intention to dictate any course of action, beyond laying down the general injunction that the principles formulated in enclosure D should be observed. I am directed, however, to invite special attention to the third clause of the enclosure, which runs as follows, viz:—"In relieving the numerous poor but respectable persons who will endure almost any privation rather than apply for the Government relief, accompanied as it must be by official inquiry into and by some kind of test of the reality of the destitution which is to be relieved." His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor and the Executive Committee believe that, in present conditions, the funds at the disposal of the Local Committee can be most usefully laid out in this manner, and I am to suggest that applications for aid under the three other permissible heads may properly be deferred until the Committee has dealt with all reasonable claims on behalf of the respectable poor, and of purdah ladies and other persons who, by the custom of the country, are unable to apply for Government relief.

8. In order to ensure that, as far as possible, no case of these kinds shall be overlooked, I am to suggest that each member of the Local and Sub-Committees should be invited to take personal charge of a suitable area, and that he should arrange to visit, either in person or through some reliable agent, every village in such area at frequent intervals. For this purpose, the Committee will, no doubt, be able to enlist the services of members of Local and District Boards and Union Committees, members of panchayats, and the like. It cannot be doubted that such visits will bring to light many persons whose caste, usages and feelings preclude the application of a labour test—women of good family and others—who may be in great, though silent, distress. In dealing with cases of this class, the Local Committee may find it advisable to provide light forms of employment, such as spinning, weaving, and the husking of rice, occupations which can be carried on in the people's own homes. In some cases, relief might most conveniently take the form of selling grain, under due precautions, at less than cost price. This system should, however, it is considered, only be sparingly resorted to. Grain should not, of course, be sold in this way to the public generally, but only to persons of the class described in this paragraph, i.e., to the respectable poor and to ladies, who, in the opinion of the Local Committee, are unable to come on to the State Relief Works.

9. The extent and intensity of distress vary in different districts of Bengal, and are greater in some places than in others. If your district is among those which are more severely affected, it is probable that whatever sums may be subscribed within it, and more, will be required for local expenditure. If, on the other hand, it is happily among those which are more fortunately circumstanced, the Local Committee will, it is hoped, recognize the justice of setting free much of what they are able to collect for the relief of more pressing necessity elsewhere. Even in those districts which are least affected by the failure of the rains, the high range of prices must be the cause of some distress, and occasions will still arise for the issue of relief in the manner described above.

10. In addition to the fortnightly statement of subscriptions collected (enclosure E), the statements in the annexed forms F and G should be submitted at the end of each fortnight, beginning from the 1st February next. These are required for transmission to the Central Committee.

11. An early opportunity should be taken by each Local Committee to appoint office-bearers, including a Chairman, Secretary, and Treasurer, who will be responsible for the keeping up of the necessary accounts, for submitting the prescribed returns, and making the authorised disbursements.

ENCLOSURE C.

Sketch of the Organisation which is suggested for the Collection and Administration of private Subscriptions.

(1) A Central Committee, to be termed the Indian Committee for the provision and administration of charitable relief, to be established in India. The General Committee to be unlimited in numbers, and nominations of representatives from each Province likely to be affected by famine to be invited.

The General Committee to nominate an Executive Committee consisting of not more than members to undertake the actual administration of the business of the Committee.

The head-quarters of the Committee to be at Calcutta. The functions of the Central Committee will be—

(a) to receive moneys transmitted from England or other countries, and also moneys that may be subscribed in India for the general purposes of the Committee. The fund so created to be termed "The Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund, 1897;"

(b) to apportion these moneys between the different Provinces;

(c) to arrange, in concert with the Government, the system upon which charitable relief is to be applied.

(2) A Committee to be formed in each Province, which will receive the moneys apportioned to that Province by the Central Committee, and also any moneys subscribed specially to meet the needs of the Province, will distribute these moneys to Local Committees, and will generally direct the action of the Local Committees. The Provincial Committee will act in concert with the Local Government, and will be responsible for seeing that the money allotted by the Central Committee is spent on the declared objects of the Fund and with the approval of the Local Government.

(3) Local Committees to be formed as the Provincial Committees may determine. The detailed administration of the Relief Funds will be in the hands of these Local Committees acting in concert with the local authorities.

(4) The collection of money in England to be in the hands of a Committee or other agency which will be set on foot in such manner as the Secretary of State may deem advisable.

APPENDIX F.

An extract from the report of the Collector of Saran, No. 240F.C., dated 24th November 1897.

"10. Three cheap grain shops were open in the Chapra town from the 29th June to the 10th October. Rice was sold at them at two seers per rupee cheaper than the prevailing rate. The average number relieved at them was 8,848, and included not only inhabitants of the town, but residents of villages within a radius of 6 to 8 miles, one of the most distressed tracts in the district. Their organisation was as follows.

"11. They were managed by a Sub-Committee of six members. The shops were opened on the 29th June 1897 with a capital of Rs. 10,000. Subsequent purchases were made with the sale-proceeds. The total quantity of rice purchased was 6,161 maunds 7 seers 1 chitak for Rs. 29,851-6. The total quantity of rice sold was 6,161 maunds 7 seers 1 chitak. The cost price thereof was Rs. 30,417-12-3, and their sale-proceeds Rs. 24,221-10-3. The loss to the Committee, amounting to Rs. 6,196-2, represents the amount actually given away in relief. Sales were allowed at the rate of 4 chitaks for each child, 8 chitaks for each woman and 12 chitaks for each man per day. The number of persons in the families relieved, 1896, consisted of 4,308 males, 5,139 females and 3,938 children, total 13,385.

"12. The applications for purchase were made to the Chairman of the Sub-Committee in a printed form, stating (1) the name of the applicant with residence and profession, (2) number of males, females and children to be relieved, (3) quantity of grain required by them for their daily use, and (4) reasons for their seeking relief in this shape. The application was to contain a report of a Municipal Commissioner or of a member of the Relief Committee, or of some gentleman residing near the applicant's house as to the correctness of the statements made therein. In case of applicants residing in villages, the report was made by the punch, patwari, zamindar or Government Circle Officers. Most of the applications were again enquired into by the Chairman or some member of the Sub-Committee.

"13. If the applicant was found fit for relief, a pass was issued to him, and his name registered in a register kept by the Chairman, which contained the name, caste, profession and residence of the purchaser, the quantity of grain he would be allowed to purchase every week, the number of males, females and children for which the purchase was allowed, the name of the shop from which the purchase would be made, the number of the shop register, the date of issue of the pass and the signature of the Chairman. A pass was then granted to the applicant under the signature of the Chairman, showing the number of the pass, the name, caste, profession, residence of the purchaser, the quantity of rice he was allowed to purchase every week, the name of the shop from which he was to purchase, and the number of the shop register. At each shop also was kept a register called the shop register, which showed the names of the purchasers, the quantity they were allowed to purchase every week, and their number in the register kept by the Chairman. A sale-book was kept at each shop in which the quantity of grain sold and the price received were entered. The entries were totalled every evening. Another book, called the Jama Kharach Bahi (register of receipts and expenditure), was also kept at each shop, in which were entered the quantity of rice received for sale from the goladar by the shopkeeper, the quantity sold during the day, and the price received.

"14. The establishment for the grain-shop consisted of a goladar on Rs. 15 a month, four chaukidars on Rs. 5 a month, three clerks (one for each shop) at Rs. 8 a month, and three shopkeepers on Rs. 3 a month. The goladar kept accounts with dates of the grain purchased and of the grain given to the shopkeeper for sale. Every evening the goladar took from the shopkeeper the sale-proceeds of the day after examining the sale-books, and gave them receipts for the money. The goladar then remitted the money to the Chairman, who granted a receipt for it. The Chairman entered the amounts in his cash-book, and remitted the money periodically to the Secretary, who deposited it in the treasury.

"15. When a purchaser went to a shop, he presented his pass to the clerk of the shop. The clerk compared the pass with his shop register, and entered in the pass and in the sale-books the date, the quantity of rice the purchaser wished to buy (not being more than he was allowed to buy), and the price. The purchaser then went to the shopkeeper, and the shopkeeper sold the quantity noted on the pass on receipt of the price thereof. Although purchasers could buy at one time the whole quantity allowed to them for a week, many of them could not afford to do it. Many purchased twice and thrice a week and some twice a day. The last class of purchasers generally belonged to the labouring classes."

APPENDIX G.

An extract from the Commissioner of Chota Nagpur's letter No. 1890F., dated 8th January 1898, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

"There was for some time considerable uncertainty in respect of the conditions under which payments should be made to distressed cultivators from the allotments by the Charitable Fund, and in the end an unfortunate decision was come to, viz., that all such payments should be made either in the shape of merely nominal loans, without security or interest, or in free and unconditional gifts. There can be no doubt that a much more useful manner of applying this money would have been in making advances on exactly the same terms as to interest and liability to repay as in the case of ordinary Government loans, with the instruction to district officers added that close scrutiny into the validity of the security offered need not be made, and that applications should not be rejected merely on the ground of the security being doubtful, and with the further proviso that all recoveries should go to a "reserve fund" for the help of such cultivators as might, in the end, be found to be unable to repay their loans from the Government fund, and were therefore liable, under the rules, to have distress warrants executed against them. An enlarged scope for charity would thus be offered in saving insolvent debtors from being sold up; while there would be a distinct advantage in the district officers being able to make advances from Government funds with greater freedom and rapidity (an important point), with the knowledge that he had this reserve at his back. Government would probably also feel itself justified in making more liberal allotments, without fear of injury to the interests of the general taxpayer. Moreover, there would be a decided advantage, from an administrative point of view, in all payments being made in the first instance on one and the same system and with similar conditions attached, to say nothing of the demoralising effect likely to be caused by the inevitable scramble for free gifts. In the result, the disbursing officers found themselves much embarrassed by the diversity of practice which was insisted on. The hope held out of getting relief unconditionally necessarily acted as a direct incentive to the fraudulent concealment of real circumstances, and a new difficulty was thus created. It was not reasonable to suppose that the disbursing officers could discriminate in the rush of applicants, and without time to test the numerous claims for exceptional treatment, and there can, I fear, be little doubt that a considerable portion of the charitable subscriptions have gone to persons who could have repaid, at least in part, without any hardship, and that others no better or not so well off have had to be denied. Amongst the unsuccessful applicants there was naturally much heart-burning. They could not understand there being any difference in the treatment of cases, and it was not possible for the disbursing officers to avoid making mistakes. The fact is that the decision referred to required the test to be made at the wrong time. The merits of each case of the kind cannot be foretold by instinct. The only practical test, where applications are numerous and time is short, is the after-test, viz., when recovery proceedings are taken; and it needs, I think, little demonstration to show that if the charitable grants had been used in the manner suggested, the combined funds (Government and charitable) would have gone much further, and with more equal results than was possible under the restrictions imposed. Advances could have been made with liberality and rapidity, and the application of the test at the proper time (i.e., in the shape of recovery proceedings) would have resulted in the distribution of the charitable allotment exactly when it was needed and without any waste. I am glad, however, to say that the greater part of the grants to this Division had been disbursed in the manner suggested before final orders had been received. To those who prove to be unable to repay in whole or part, the necessary remissions will be made; and the recoveries will be used in saving other insolvent debtors from being sold up."

REPORT ON THE STATE OF THE SALT MARKET FOR THE THIRD QUARTER OF 1897-98.

No. 131B., dated Calcutta, the 14th February 1898.

From—E. V. LEVINGE, Esq., Offg. Secretary to the Board of Revenue, L.P.,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

SALT.

THE HON'BLE MR. W. H. GRIMLEY.

I AM directed to submit the following report on the state of the salt market for the third quarter of 1897-98, comprising the months of October, November and December 1897.

2. The quantity of salt of every description cleared during the quarter under review amounted to 25,13,815 maunds, as compared with 28,27,693 maunds in the previous quarter, and 24,40,628 maunds in the corresponding quarter of the previous year; and the net amount of duty levied thereon was Rs. 58,09,049 against Rs. 66,79,141 in the previous quarter, and Rs. 57,12,378 in the corresponding quarter of the previous year. In all cases fractions are omitted.

3. The quantity of locally-made salt removed from the golas in Orissa during the quarter under review, and the quantity which remained in store at the close of the quarter, are shown in the table (I) below:—

The total sales of locally-made salt during the quarter under review amounted to 5,255 maunds, as compared with 4,100 maunds in the previous quarter, and 9,272 maunds in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

4. The subjoined table (II) shows in detail the importations into the port of Calcutta and the total clearances of sea-imported salt during the quarter under review, as compared with the figures of the corresponding quarters of the last two years:—

No. 239*I*.

Government of Bengal.

IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

IRRIGATION.

Dated Calcutta, the 18th February 1898.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Embankment and Drainage Reports for the year 1896-97.

The expenditure incurred during the year on embankments and drainage and other miscellaneous irrigation works in Bengal, which are not dealt with in the Canal Revenue Report, is shown below:—

	Rs.
I.—Embankments, Class A, in Orissa	1,04,544
Ditto, do. B, Schedule D, and other Government embankments ...	1,76,846
Ditto, do. C, maintained under contract ...	99,861
Ditto, do. D, maintained by annual apportionment of charges	16,718
II.—Works carried out by Civil Officers in Government or temporarily-settled estates	28,891
III.—Works undertaken under the provisions of the Drainage Act	19,652
IV.—Drainage works carried out at the cost of Government	9,267
V.—Drainage works carried out under the Embankment Act	1,44,924
Total ...	6,00,703

2. I.—Embankments maintained by the Irrigation Department.—The public embankments in Bengal are divided into two classes—

1st.—Embankments the property of Government which are maintained at the public expense.

2nd.—Embankments maintained by Government officers at the cost of the persons interested.

A.—The embankments in Orissa which are maintained under Act XXXII of 1855.

B.—The embankments enumerated in Schedule D of Act VI (B.C.) of 1873, among which are included those of the Burdwan Raj estate taken over by Government in 1804, and some additional lengths which have at various times been added to the schedule under the provisions of section 43 of Act II (B.C.) of 1882, as also two small embankments in the Pabna and Bogra districts.

In the second class there are—

C.—The embankments of which the cost of maintenance is recovered from the persons interested by the payment of a fixed annual charge under a contract extending over a term of years not exceeding 30, as provided for in sections 63—68 of Act II (B.C.) of 1882.

D.—The embankments of which the cost of maintenance is recovered from the persons interested by an annual apportionment of the actual charges.

Embankments A in Orissa are also, for departmental purposes, further classed as follows:—

Class I.—Capital or Canal embankments constructed and maintained as part of the Orissa Canal system and intended to be above high flood-level.

Class II.—Ordinary or Agricultural embankments on large rivers above high flood-level to be maintained permanently at their present height.

" III.—Embankments of local importance, such as marginal embankments outside canal embankments which will probably be eventually abandoned.

" IV.—Embankments of doubtful utility and harmful effect which it is undesirable to retain.

" V.—Embankments which have been abandoned and are not repaired.

The capital embankments, Class I, are not treated of in this report.

3. Lengths of embankments.—The lengths of embankments in each class are shown below:—

	Miles.	Feet.
Embankments the property of Government maintained at the public expense—
Class A.—In Orissa	*552	3,894
Class B.—Schedule D and other Government embankments ...	1,117	3,621
Embankments not the property of Government maintained at the cost of the persons interested—
Class C.—Maintained under contract	473	1,812
Class D.—Maintained by annual apportionment of charges ...	78	4,964
Total for 1896-97 ...	2,222	3,731
Total for 1895-96 ...	2,219	3,230
Difference (increase) ...	3	501

* In addition to these there are 168 miles of effective flood banks maintained in connection with the Orissa Canals.

In Class A embankments there was no change.

In Class B embankments there is an increase of 1 mile 4,911 feet. In the Hooghly district there is an increase of 2 miles 1,539 feet, while in the Midnapore district there is a decrease of 1,908 feet. These alterations in the lengths were found by remeasurement of the embankments made during the year.

In Class C embankments there was no change.

In Class D embankments there is an increase of 1 mile 870 feet. This increase was caused by the addition of the Daudpur embankment, along the Bur Gandak river, in the Muzaffarpur district.

4. Floods.—In the Orissa Circle the flood of July-August 1896 in the Mahanadi river was very high. The highest reading of the gauge at Naraje was 92·10, which is just the same as the highest readings of the floods of 1872 and 1892. The most striking feature of this flood was its unusual duration which caused a considerable number of breaches, and put under water large areas of country which are protected from ordinary floods. There were also very high floods in the Brahmini and Byturni rivers. Several breaches occurred, but the damage done to the canal works was not serious.

In the South-Western Circle there were several floods, most of which were of ordinary character. The floods which occurred in the Cossye river at the end of August were high, and did considerable damage to the marginal embankment on the right bank of the Midnapore Canal below Panchkura, and breached the Kherai embankments. Considerable damage was also done to the Amersee embankment on the Kaliaghye river by the waves caused by a strong north wind during the floods of July—August 1896. The Selye river was in high flood in August, and several breaches occurred in its embankments. The flood in the Nadia rivers was abnormally low, and caused no serious damage to the embankments. In the Bhagirathi river the highest reading of the gauge at Berhampore on the 27th August was 25·33, which was nearly 6 feet below the highest recorded flood level in 1890. The floods in the Hooghly river were of ordinary nature. There was a very high flood in the Damodar river on 22nd July, which did considerable damage to the spurs and embankments on its right bank. The erosion of the Bidyadhari river at Bansra continued throughout the year, and it appears that the Eastern Bengal State Railway line will have to be retired further back. There were no floods in the Haldi and Panchpara rivers. The Mutai and Subarnarekha rivers were in high flood, and the latter badly damaged the Bhograi embankment, which the flood of the Burrabollong river was not above the average.

In the Northern Circle there were no high floods in any of the rivers.

In the Sone Circle, the floods being of ordinary character, very little damage was done to the river protective works, and no breaches occurred in any of the embankments.

5. Original works.—There were no original works undertaken or executed in the Orissa, Sone, and Northern Circles during the year. In the South-Western Circle, the only work started was the construction of a retired line of embankment at Bhagwangola at an estimated cost of Rs. 1,35,610. Two miles only of the embankment were taken up as a famine test-work and carried out by piece-work contractors with local labour. As the rates were too low and the scarcity was not so intense as to compel the villagers to undertake the earthwork at such rates, little progress was made with the work.

6. (a) Ordinary repairs.—The cost of ordinary repairs to the Government embankments in the Orissa Circle was Rs. 33,975, against Rs. 40,210 in the preceding year, showing a decrease of Rs. 6,235. The average of the nine years ending 1895-96 was Rs. 64,320. In the South-Western Circle the expenditure incurred under this head was Rs. 1,36,293, against Rs. 1,38,428 in the previous year, showing a decrease of Rs. 2,135. The Orissa embankments in the Balasore district were maintained in good order at a cost of Rs. 10,083, against Rs. 4,493 in the previous year. The increase of Rs. 5,590 during the year is due to the cost of repairing the damages caused to the embankments by floods and of closing the breaches in the Bhograi embankment. Of the total outlay of Rs. 1,36,293 on repairs, Rs. 90,592 was expended on embankments protecting the Burdwan Raj estate in the districts of Hooghly, Burdwan, Birbhum and Midnapore, against Rs. 78,459 in the previous year. In the Midnapore and Burdwan districts Rs. 6,097 and Rs. 2,919, respectively, were expended on flood damage repairs in addition to the expenditure of Rs. 50,365 and Rs. 19,242 on ordinary repairs to embankments. All the embankments in the circle were maintained in an efficient state. In the Sone Circle, where there are no Government embankments, the expenditure was incurred on the maintenance of the C and D class embankments. The amount expended during the year on the C class embankments was Rs. 60,033, against Rs. 44,107 in the previous year. The expenditure on the Saran embankment was Rs. 38,590, or Rs. 20,133 more than last year. This increase is due to the construction of three retired lines at a cost of Rs. 25,579. In the Tirhut embankments, there was an increased expenditure of Rs. 2,308, while there was a decrease of Rs. 6,515 in the Champaran embankment, due to the heavier payments on account of the Dekaha retired line having been made in the previous year. The expenditure on the D class embankments was Rs. 15,259, or Rs. 5,411 more than the previous year. In the Northern Circle, Rs. 712 were expended on repairs to the Chandan embankment in Bhagalpur district, Rs. 288 on the Belwa bund in Purnea district, Rs. 634 on the Malda embankment in Malda district, and Rs. 175 on the Pabna embankment in Pabna district. There was no expenditure on the Chota Manika embankment in Bogra district, as no repairs were necessary.

(b) Breaches and retired lines.—In the Orissa Circle, the expenditure incurred on repairs to the revetments of river banks and the river-improvement works, and for constructing retired lines and filling in of breaches was

Rs. 60,486, against Rs. 57,420 in the previous year. The average of the nine years ending 1895-96 was Rs. 45,574. More than two-thirds of the expenditure was on repairs to the revetments and river-improvement works. The most important works carried out were—(1) in the Mahanadi Division, the groins and revetment at Bogla on the left bank of the Katjuri river for protecting a portion of the Machgong Canal, and the rubble stone revetments for arresting erosions, &c., at various places on the Katjuri, Dhowria and Bhargovi rivers and on the Puri road which were maintained at Rs. 5,247, and Rs. 12,679 respectively; (2) in the Brahmani-Byturni Division, the extension of the revetment at Nilkantapur, on the right bank of the Brahmani river, which necessitated a short length of the Pattamoondi Canal being retired; and (3) in the Acquapada-Jajpur Division, the renewal of the portions of the revetment on the right bank of the Brahmani river, which were injured by the high flood and slipped into the river, and a small extension of the revetment to a little above the site of the railway bridge which was being constructed. In the South-Western Circle, several breaches occurred in the Schedule D embankments in the Cossye Division, owing to the high floods in the Cossye and Selye rivers and much damage was done. There were no breaches in the Rupnarain and Damodar embankments or in the embankments in the Nadia rivers and Northern Drainage and Embankment Divisions. In the Balasore Division, the Bhograi embankment was badly damaged by the high flood in the Subarnarekha river. The expenditure incurred in constructing retired lines was Rs. 40,811, against Rs. 23,133 in 1895-96, as detailed below:—

			1896-97.	1895-96.
			Rs.	Rs.
In Murshidabad district	...	...	17,823	10,952
„ 24-Parganas „	...	...	1,719	1,959

„ Hooghly „	...	...	21,269	7,732
„ Burdwan „	...	...	...	298
			40,811	23,133

In the Sone Circle there were no breaches in any of the embankments. Three retired lines in the Saran embankment were constructed at a total cost of Rs. 25,579, in addition to the river protective works on the Saran, Champaran and Tirhut embankments on which Rs. 13,972 was expended during the year. The Sagrampur retired line was started by famine labour owing to serious damages caused to the Champaran spurs. The protective works on the Turki, Bazitpur and Monghyr embankments and those along the Bur Gandak river for the protection of the Secundrapur maidan at Muzaffarpur were maintained at an aggregate cost of Rs. 4,179.

During 1895-96 the Bur Gandak river encroached considerably, and threatened to breach the municipal embankment in Muzaffarpur, known as the "Daudpur bund." On the representation of the Municipality, the Irrigation Department agreed to undertake the construction of protective works for the protection of the bund and of a retired line behind them in case the protective works fail to protect completely the town of Muzaffarpur and neighbouring villages from floods, and to charge the expenditure to takavi (vide Bengal Government letter No. 32T.—I., dated 6th June 1896, to the Superintending Engineer, Sone Circle). During the year a retired churki and special protective works were constructed at a cost of Rs. 3,204 and Rs. 5,495, respectively, to stop the encroachment of the river.

7. Financial.—The cost of repairs to the Orissa embankments (Class A) was Rs. 1,04,544, against Rs. 1,02,123 in 1895-96, the rate being Rs. 189 per mile, against Rs. 184. The amount expended on Class B embankments was Rs. 1,76,846, against Rs. 1,61,633, or at the average mileage rate of Rs. 158, against Rs. 144 in the previous year.

As regards Class C embankments maintained by Government under the contract system, the actual cost incurred was Rs. 99,861, against Rs. 79,896, showing an increase of Rs. 19,965, the average rate per mile being Rs. 211, against Rs. 168 in the previous year. The expenditure exceeded the contract rate only in the case of the Saran embankment, owing to the construction of three retired lines necessitated by the threatened encroachment of the Bur Gandak river.

The sums payable under contract for this class of embankments, compared with the maintenance charges, including book charges for Establishment and Tools and Plant, are shown in the following table, together with the amount recovered during the year and the balance remaining to be recovered:—

* Details not obtainable.

It will be seen from the above figures that Government is a loser by Rs. 26,255 on the working of the year, and that the outstanding balance to be recovered from the persons interested amounts to Rs. 55,024.

The loss to Government in 1895-96 was Rs. 18,280, and the average annual loss for the nine years ending with 1895-96 was Rs. 33,502.

In the Midnapore district the amount payable under contract for the takavi embankments is ordinarily quite sufficient for the maintenance of the embankments. There was excess expenditure over the contract amount in five years only since the introduction of the contract system in 1881-82. In 1882-83 the excess was Rs. 11,320, in 1892-93 Rs. 87, in 1893-94 Rs. 18,983, in 1894-95 Rs. 15,635, and during the year under review Rs. 1,351. It was mainly due to the cost of repairing damages caused to the embankments by floods.

As regards the Saran, Champaran and Muzaffarpur embankments, the maintenance charges are generally in excess of the contract amounts. They were less only in four years in Saran, two years in Champaran and one year in Muzaffarpur since the introduction of the contract system there. The excess is chiefly due to the heavy cost of constructing retired lines and protective works for preventing encroachments of rivers.

On embankments of Class D (Appendix C) the actual outlay incurred during the year was Rs 20,649, and the amount outstanding from the previous year was Rs. 16,721, while the recoveries and adjustments made by the Civil Department were Rs 17,548, the balance unadjusted at the end of the year being Rs. 19,822. Compared with the figures supplied by the Board of Revenue (Appendix B), it will be seen that the collections of the year were Rs. 43,584, or Rs. 26,036 in excess of those reported by the Superintending Engineers. No explanation of this discrepancy has been given by the Board of Revenue. The figures given in the Board's return (Appendix B) include only the amounts which have been accepted and apportioned by the Civil Department, and hence no comparison can be made between the "advances" and "outstanding balances" as reported by the Board and as given by the Superintending Engineers.

The figures supplied by the Board (Appendix B) are shown in a more concise form in the following statement. The recoverable amount or demand falling due within the year was Rs. 77,298, the amount collected was Rs. 43,584 the recoveries falling short of the amount of the demand were therefore Rs. 33,714 :—

The Joki Embankment (Class D) in the Midnapore district shown in Appendix C has been brought under the contract system for five years, from the 1st April 1896, the amount payable for the period being fixed at Rs. 2,000. It was maintained during the year at a cost of Rs. 197 only against Rs. 647 in the previous year.

8. Agricultural public works and miscellaneous and sanitary improvements carried out in Government or temporarily-settled estates in Bengal by Civil Officers from the grant placed at the disposal of the Board of Revenue.—The amount expended during the year was Rs. 28,891. The principal works of construction and repairs to embankments for agricultural improvements carried out in the Government estates were (1) the bheris and embankments in the Diamond Harbour subdivision and embankments and sluices in the Port Canning estates in the 24-Parganas district, on which Rs. 2,396 was expended, and (2) bunds in the Singhbhum and Hazaribagh districts, which cost Rs. 2,288 and Rs. 463, respectively.

In the Jalpaiguri district Rs. 1,000 were expended on an irrigation channel, and in the Bogra, Backergunge, Malda and Lohardaga districts the expenditure of Rs. 1,173, Rs. 1,402, Rs. 750 and Rs. 847, respectively, was incurred mainly in constructing and repairing bunds, tanks, khals, pynes and wells. In the Noakhali district a sum of Rs. 250 was expended in conducting experiments for the cultivation of potato, gram, wheat and some English vegetables.

In the Patna district Rs. 1,800 were expended mostly on earthwork in 18 estates and on the construction and repairs of wells and culverts, while in the Gaya and Shahabad districts the expenditure of Rs. 4,865 and Rs. 3,009, respectively, was mainly confined to the construction and repairs of ahars, wells and pynes. In the Saran district a sum of Rs. 200 was expended on the construction of wells only.

In the Puri and Balasore districts the expenditure of Rs. 6,831 and Rs. 450, respectively, was incurred solely on the construction and repairs of bunds, wells, tanks, bungalows, boarding-houses and roads. Besides these, Rs. 443 was expended on works for sanitary improvements, such as clearing old tanks and jungles, &c., in the Bogra, Bhagalpur and Malda districts.

9. Works undertaken under the provisions of the Drainage Act, VI (B.C.) of 1880.—The drainage works (five in number) lie in the southern parts of the Hooghly district in the South-Western Circle. Four of them, viz., the Dankuni, Howrah, Rajapur, and Burrajolla, have been completed, and the costs of their maintenance have been capitalized. The fifth (Ampta project) is still under consideration. Regarding this the Superintending Engineer, South Western Circle, writes:—

"This basin is different from that of the other drainage schemes, in so far that the bheel land is higher, and that it has direct connection for drainage into the Hooghly through the Purana khal. With these advantages it is only in years of exceptional rainfall that the crops in the Ampta swamp suffer; and as this only happens once in six or seven years, in my opinion any further consideration of this project may be indefinitely postponed."

The following is an account given by the Superintending Engineer of the expenditure incurred on the construction of the drainage schemes, inclusive of charges for Establishment and Tools and Plant:—

		Rs.
(1) Dankuni Drainage Works	... ...	4,04,159	(completed.)
(2) Howrah ditto	... ...	2,72,062	(ditto).
(3) Rajapur ditto (4) Burrajolla ditto	}	9,10,286	(ditto).

10. The lengths of the schemes, their channels, and the areas drained by them are the same as given in the previous years' reports. The maintenance charges of the Dankuni and Howrah drainage schemes were capitalized at an annual cost of Rs. 4,390 and Rs 2,000, respectively, in the years 1891-92 and 1893-94, and those of the Rajapur and Burrajolla Drainage schemes were capitalized in the year 1896-97 at an annual cost of Rs. 5,000.

11. The Dankuni drainage works were efficiently maintained at a cost of Rs. 7,511, against Rs. 2,527 in the previous year. These charges include a portion of the Drainage Deputy Collector's salary, amounting to Rs. 900. The increased cost is mainly due to silt-clearance on which more than Rs. 5,000 was expended.

12. The Howrah drainage works were maintained in good order at a cost of Rs. 4,108, against Rs. 3,299 in 1895-96. This sum includes a portion of the Drainage Deputy Collector's salary amounting to Rs. 2,400.

13. The Rajapur drainage scheme was efficiently maintained during the year at a cost of Rs. 7,407, against Rs. 4,259 in the previous year. The maintenance charge of the Burrojolla scheme was Rs. 626, against Rs. 1,422 in 1895-96. Portion of the Drainage Deputy Collector's pay charged to these schemes amounted to Rs. 4,423.

The Board of Revenue supplies the following figures regarding the Dankuni and Howrah Drainage projects—

	Rs.
Demand of the year recoverable out of sums advanced by Civil Department	1,53,852
Collections of the year	59,278
Outstanding balance at end of year	94,574

No figures are given by the Board for the Rajapur and Burrojolla projects.

14. Efficiency of the Drainage Works.—The drainage schemes have proved very successful, as they have not only reclaimed large tracts of lands lying in their basins, but have also efficiently drained them and the high lands surrounding. In seasons of drought and scanty rainfall they contribute towards irrigating these lands by taking in water from the river Hooghly.

15. Drainage works carried out at the cost of Government.—On the Baliaghye main drain four culverts were completed during the year at a cost of Rs. 1,430, and a dock and four sidings were constructed for Rs. 943 and Rs. 459, respectively. The Surpai sluice channel bund was cut at a cost of Rs. 116 and reconstructed at Rs. 589. Dredging was started on the Sadar khal to remove silt and improve it, but, owing to a break down of the dredger, little work was done. Silt was also cleared from the Mirzapur, Panipia, Aucknagurea, Barunda, Narainduri, Kalabaria, Talpati, Harikhali, Sadar and Udbadal khals, at an aggregate cost of Rs. 2,651. For repairing the Bulli Bhil drainage works Rs. 3,079 were spent during the year.

16. Drainage works carried out under the Embankment Act, II (B.C.) of 1882.—Applications being submitted under section 18 of the Act by the Manager of the Bhowanipore Wards' Estate, three drainage sluices at Satpukur, Bindal and Kulpi in the Diamond Harbour subdivision of the Northern Drainage and Embankment Division in miles 113-114, 52-53 and 69-70 of the Schedule D Embankments Nos. 77, 68 and 71, were sanctioned during the year for Rs. 1,14,141, Rs. 34,130 and Rs. 66,289, respectively, and their construction was commenced in February 1897. The sluice at Satpukur is of six vents, that at Bindal of two vents, and that at Kulpi of three vents, and they will drain an area of 59 square miles of land. The expenditure incurred on them till the end of March 1897, when more than half of each was completed, was Rs. 51,835, Rs. 13,512 and Rs. 42,434 respectively. These sluices have contributed much towards the improvement of the drainage of the southern portion of the 24-Parganas district. Another application being submitted by Babu Radha Kissore Ghose and others of 24-Parganas district, an irrigation sluice at Tellary between the 19th and 20th miles of Schedule D, Embankment No. 61, was sanctioned in September 1896 for Rs. 6,978, and its construction was started in January 1897, and by the end of March 1897 it was nearly completed. The sluice will irrigate an area of 5,000 bighas. The Tangrabichi sluice in 24-Parganas district, which was referred to in last year's report, was completed at a cost of Rs 46,550, the expenditure during the year being Rs. 24,259. The Churrial khal drainage scheme in the district of 24-Parganas was maintained during the year for Rs. 809, against Rs. 929 in the previous year. The total expenditure up to 31st March 1897 amounts to Rs. 1,42,069. Of the 14 small sluices in the Government Schedule D Embankments in the district of 24-Parganas, 8 were repaired during the year at an aggregate cost of Rs. 727. The Kumrul sluice in the 53rd mile of the Damodar Left Embankment, together with its channel, was repaired and maintained during the year at a cost of Rs. 360, against Rs. 816 in the previous year. A small masonry stop dam and regulator was built during the year in the middle of the Kumrul irrigation sluice channel in the 50th mile of the Damodar left embankment for the irrigation of the high lands situated on the banks of the channel at a cost of Rs. 517, exclusive of Tools and Plant and Establishment charges. Plans and estimates for rivetting the bank of the Burabullong river, near the Nulcool lock, are under consideration of the Superintending Engineer, as also the project regarding the drainage of the Dubda jheel in Range III of the Orissa Coast Canal. The management of the Kalabaria khal from the head of Barunda and Naraindari khal to its junction with the Sadar khal was made over to the Burdwan Raj Estate for a period of 10 years on the 1st February 1897.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution and of its appendices (A to C) be published in the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette, and submitted to the Government of India, Public Works Department, for information.

Ordered, also, that copies of this Resolution and of its appendices (A to C) be forwarded to the Secretaries to the Government of Bengal in the Revenue and Financial Departments, Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, Commissioners of the Patna, Bhagalpur, Rajshahi, Presidency, Burdwan, and Orissa Divisions, Superintending Engineers of the Orissa, South-Western, Sone, and Northern Circles, and Examiner of Public Works Accounts, Bengal, for information.

PRELIMINARY NOTE ON THE WHEAT CROP OF BENGAL IN 1897-98.

THE following is published for general information.

M. FINUCANE,
The 21st February 1898. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Preliminary Note on the Wheat Crop of Bengal in 1897-98.

Explanatory.—In previous years, only the principal wheat-growing districts furnished this Department with returns of the wheat crop; but, as all wheat-growing districts showed the area under wheat in their forecasts of the rabi crop, it has been thought advisable to include their returns in the present note, so as to bring the figures in it into accordance with the figures which will appear in the rabi forecast to be issued by this Department later in the year.

The figures for normal area have been revised on the basis of the returns of actual cultivation submitted during the past five years. Further enquiries are being made with a view to ascertaining the correct figures to be given under this head. Where a cadastral survey has been completed for the whole of a district, the figures compiled in the course of that survey have been adopted.

2. Character of the season.—The column of remarks in the district returns shows that all the districts had sufficient rainfall during the season, except Murshidabad, Shahabad, and Balasore; but even in these districts the outturn will not be materially affected by the deficiency. There was copious rainfall over the greater part of the Province in September and October. This chiefly accounts for the larger area under wheat this year. December and January have been, however, practically rainless, and this may have a prejudicial effect on the outturn. There was no rain in the Patna Division in the months of November, December, and January; while in the Bhagalpur Division there was only scanty rainfall in November, and no rainfall in December and January. As these are the chief wheat-growing Divisions, the condition just described will have considerable effect on the general outturn.

3. Area sown.—The area sown this year (1,573,900 acres) is much larger than that sown last year (1,361,600 acres). The increase is 212,300 acres, or more than 15 per cent. over last year's area. The wheat-growing area in the Patna

Division is 791,100 acres, or about half, and in the Bhagalpur Division 409,000 acres, or about one-fourth of the whole wheat-growing area of these Provinces. The only important wheat-growing districts in Lower Bengal are Murshidabad, Rajshahi, Nadia, and Rangpur, which show 150,500, 76,900, 31,400, and 30,700 acres, respectively, under this crop in the present year.

4. Estimated outturn.—From the district returns, it will be seen that with the exception of Jessore, where the area under wheat is very small, all the districts expect at least a 10-anna crop; Champaran returns a bumper or 20-anna crop; 13 districts return an average or 16-anna crop; Patna and the Sonthal Parganas return a 15-anna crop; the remaining districts return an outturn varying from 14 to 10 annas.

Estimating by Divisions, the Patna Division expects some thing over an average crop, the Bhagalpur Division a 15½-anna crop, and the rest of the Divisions together about a 13-anna crop. The general outturn may be estimated at 15 annas against 10 annas, the estimated outturn of last year.

N. G. MUKERJI,

Asst. Director of the Dept. of Land Records and Agriculture, Bengal.

(Countersigned.)

P. C. LYON,

Director of the Dept. of Land Records and Agriculture, Bengal.

	Birbhum ...	5,000	100	5,400	4	14	There has been very little rain since November 1897; but as the lands under wheat crop are, in a great measure, irrigated from tanks, a 14-anna crop is expected.
	Bankura ...	5,500	2,800	6,000	6	14	The weather has been very favourable for the cultivation and growth of this crop, and consequently a large area has been cultivated during the year. The outturn may also be estimated at 14 annas if the weather continues favourable.
	Midnapore ...	2,100	1,600	2,600	11	13½	Owing to timely rainfall during the ploughing and sowing season, a larger area has been brought under cultivation, and the outturn is expected to be better this year.
	Hooghly ...	100	85	100	7	16	The season being favourable, a large area has been sown with wheat, and the outturn is expected to be 16 annas. In Jehanabad, however, the rains in October were considered unfavourable to the cultivation of wheat.

Presidency.	24-Parganas ...	300	100	200	5	16	The increase in the area under wheat crop this year as compared to that of last year is due to favourable rainfall. The same cause also accounts for the increase in the estimated outturn of the present year.
	Nadia	35,000	6,600	31,400	2½	11	The increase in the normal area is owing to the fact that the Subdivisional Officers of Meherpur and Chuadanga have this time furnished separate and revised figures after fresh enquiries. Revised figures have also been furnished for the Sadar subdivision. The increase in the area sown this year as well as in the outturn is due to the seasonable rainfall.
	Murshidabad	130,000	92,600	150,500	3	11	The increase in area as compared with that of the previous year is due to the favourable rains of the year. The crop will not be a 16-anna one on account of want of rain in December.
	Jessore ...	1,600	1,700	1,800	2	4	... .	The low estimate of outturn has not been explained.
Rajshahi.	Rajshahi ...	75,000	69,400	76,900	6	13	The increase both in the area sown and in the estimated outturn is due to sufficient moisture in the land on account of flood and rain.
	Dinajpur ...	1,800	1,800	1,600	11	13
	Jalpaiguri ...	3,200	4,000	2,400	5	11	The decrease in area sown this year is due to the fact that owing to the failure of the paddy crop last year, a large area was brought under wheat cultivation as an experimental measure in the Alipur subdivision, but during the current year no such cultivation has been made there. The increase in outturn is due to more favourable weather than that of last year.
	Darjeeling ...	5,100	5,100	5,100	8	11	Seasonable rainfall accounts for the increase in the outturn.
	Rangpur ...	34,000	33,700	30,700	11	14	The decrease in area sown is due to the late flood in the Gaibanda subdivision. On the whole, the prospects of this crop appear to be fair, and a better outturn is expected.

RAJSHAHI.	Pabna ...	16,000	11,600	16,900	8	16	The cultivators got a good season for sowing, there being sufficient moisture in the soil, due to a comparatively high flood and fair rainfall; hence the increase in the area sown. The outturn is also likely to be better for the same reason.
DACCA.	Mymensingh	8,000	8,000	8,000	8	10	The increase of two annas in the estimated outturn is due to the recent rainfall.
	Faridpur ...	2,000	2,200	1,800	5	10	The prospects would have been much better had there been rain in November and December 1897.
PATNA.	Patna	105,000	102,000	106,400	12¼	15½	The increase in the area sown and the expected outturn is due to seasonable rainfall at the time of ploughing and sowing.
	Gaya	131,500	132,200	142,200	16	16
	Shahabad ...	120,000	153,500	120,000	10¾	14	The normal area has been revised. Want of rain early in January and more rain at the sowing will affect the outturn to a certain extent.
	Saran	130,000	89,500	123,900	13	16¾	Owing to favourable rain this year, the crop appears to belsharing the good prospects of all rabi crops.
	Champaran ...	118,000	87,000	118,000	12	20	The areas have been corrected throughout according to the final results of the cadastral survey. There is good moisture in the soil owing to copious rain in the beginning of October, and this gives promise of a bumper crop. The area sown would have been greater but for lack of seed.
	Muzaffarpur	71,000	71,000	71,000	11	16	The normal area has been revised on the basis of the Settlement Department figures; hence the areas in columns 4 and 5 differ from the figures reported in the forecast for 1896-97. The increased outturn may be attributed to the favourable rainy season of the year.
	Darbhanga ...	100,000	90,000	109,600	12	16	The increase in area and outturn is due to the soil retaining sufficient moisture during the sowing season.
BHAGALPUR.	Monghyr ...	100,000	97,200	99,900	11¾	14	Owing to timely rainfall a larger area has been sown and a better outturn is expected.
	Bhagalpur ...	193,000	199,900	190,200	13	16	Owing to excessive moisture, a portion of the area could not be sown in Supaul, and hence the decrease in column 5, but the rainfall has favourably affected the prospects of the crops.
	Purnea ...	24,000	24,500	21,500	11	14	The prospect of outturn this year is better, but on account of the high price of seed-grains, many fields have been left uncultivated.
	Malda ...	60,000	47,000	85,500	12	16	The conditions of weather and moisture have been good, and so a fairly good crop is expected.
	Sonthal Parganas.	14,000	8,300	11,900	8	15	The distribution of rainfall was favourable this year; hence the better outturn.
ORISSA.	Cuttack ...	1,500	1,000	2,100	4	13	Rain in November damaged the prospects of the crop; hence the outturn is expected not to be more than 13 annas.

NOTE ON THE LATE COTTON CROP IN BENGAL FOR THE YEAR 1897-98.

THE following is published for general information.

M. FINUCANE,

The 21st February 1898. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Note on the Late Cotton Crop in Bengal for the year 1897-98.

[N.B.—Returns have been received from all districts, except Manbhum.]

Explanatory.—The present report furnishes estimates of the area and outturn of the late cotton crop of these Provinces which is sown at the close of the rainy season and harvested in the hot weather. The report on the early cotton crop was published by this Department on the 20th December 1897.

The averages of the areas sown during the five years ending 1897-98 have been taken to represent the normal areas in column 3 of the appended statement in the case of all districts, except Champaran and Muzaffarpur, where the figures returned by the District Officers are those which have been ascertained in the course of the cadastral survey.

2. Character of the season.—At the time of sowing in October, the rainfall in every district shown in the appended statement was considerably above the normal. In November Saran, Champaran, Muzaffarpur and Darbhanga received no rain, and the rainfall elsewhere was below the normal, except in Monghyr, where it was slightly in excess. In December, with the exception of Bankura and the districts of the Orissa Division, where the rain received, was below the normal, the late cotton-growing districts received, no rain. In January, rain fell in parts of Bihar. The season, on the whole, was favourable to the cultivation of the late cotton crop of these Provinces.

3. Area sown.—The total area sown with late cotton this year in the 14 districts, from which returns have been received, amounts to 71,500 acres against 70,900 acres sown in 1896-97. It seems probable, however, that the area sown with late cotton in 1896-97 was overestimated. The normal area under late cotton in these 14 districts, as now estimated by the Department, amounts to 73,560 acres.

4. Character of the crop.—An average outturn of 16 annas is reported from Champaran, Darbhanga, Bhagalpur, Cuttack, Balasore, Angul and Khondmals and Singhbhum; Bankura and Puri return 14-anna crops; and Monghyr returns a 13-anna crop; 12-anna crops are reported from Saran and Muzaffarpur, and 11 and 10½-anna crops are reported respectively from Midnapore and Patna.

A comparison of the present year's estimated outturn with that of the previous year will show that of the 14 districts, 11 report better crops, 2 equal crops, and 1 a worse crop. The arithmetical mean of the estimates of anna outturn this year, calculated with reference to the area sown, amounts to 13½ annas. This estimate may be accepted as the probable average outturn of this year's crop. The corresponding estimate for last year was 11 annas only.

5. Gross outturn.—The estimated yield of the late cotton crop of the present year of the 14 districts which have furnished returns amounts to 4,014,000 lbs. against 3,001,200 lbs. estimated for 1896-97. The average yield of the three preceding years, i.e., 1893-94, 1894-95, and 1895-96, amounts to 4,372,300 lbs.

	Midnapore ...	2,300	2,000	2,100	9	11	Owing to seasonable rain, the area brought under cultivation this year has been slightly greater than that of last year, and the outturn is also likely to be better.

T. HESKETH BIGGS,

Accountant-General, Bengal.

PILGRIMAGE TO THE HEDJAZ.

MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT—MEDICAL.

RESOLUTION—No. 1090Medl.

THE following report submitted by the Inspector-General of Police, Lower Provinces, on the arrangements made by him for despatching pilgrims bound for the Hedjaz during the current season, is published for general information. It will be seen that 708 pilgrims have been shipped per S. S. Jubeda from the port of Chittagong, but that, notwithstanding the efforts of the Government to procure steamers, it is unlikely, owing to the demand for freight, that any more steamers will be available this season for pilgrim traffic. Persons who still entertain the intention of proceeding to the Hedjaz will be well advised, therefore, to defer their purpose till next year. Magistrates of districts should be careful to explain these points to the leading Muhammadans in order to remove all source of misapprehension.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H. H. RISLEY,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

No. 1556, dated Calcutta, the 18th February 1898.

From—E. R. HENRY, ESQ., Inspector-General of Police, L.P.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

I HAVE the honour to report, for the information of Government, that 708 pilgrims, who had undergone the prescribed period of quarantine at the Raniganj Camp, were embarked on the 16th on the S.S. Jubeda, late Peninsular and Oriental Pekin, and she has since proceeded to sea.

2. The pilgrims were put into a special train at Raniganj and were railed viâ Naihati to Goalundo, where a special steamer was in readiness to convey them to Chandpur. From Chandpur they proceeded by special train to Chittagong viâ Laksham Junction. As the Jubeda drew too much water to be able to come into Chittagong Port, the pilgrims were conveyed by the Guide to the Jubeda lying outside the Chittagong bar. There was no sickness, and all arrangements were successfully carried through.

3. I have made enquiries in all directions, and find there is little or no likelihood of another steamer being set aside this season for pilgrim traffic. Ordinary freights are high, pilgrims are troublesome passengers, and many restrictions have been imposed by the rules under the Pilgrim Ships Act, all these causes operating to make ship-owners unwilling to take up the conveyance of pilgrims. I venture to suggest, therefore, that it be widely notified that, as no more steamers are available for the carriage of pilgrims, those who entertained the intention of proceeding to the Hedjaz must defer fulfilment until next year. If this notification is widely made, it will prevent persons incurring needless expense and disappointment. I have issued instructions that until further orders no more pilgrims are to be admitted to the Raniganj Camp.

4. A full report upon the working of the Camp will follow.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1899.

MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT,—(MEDICAL).

RESOLUTION—No. 1145Med.

By a Notification No. 6026 issued by the Municipal (Medical) Department of this Government on the 10th October 1898, it was announced that Calcutta was free from plague, no fresh case of, or death from, the disease having occurred since the 28th September. In a Resolution published on the same date, the Lieutenant-Governor drew attention to the danger of a possible re-appearance of plague, and expressed his desire that the ward family and caste hospitals which had been opened under private management should be maintained in working order, and that the precautions which had been taken to stave off an outbreak, and to deal with it if it should arise, should not be relaxed.

2. Since these announcements were made, dropping cases of a suspicious character have been reported from time to time, some of which were of such a character as to leave little room for doubt as to their having been genuine plague. Until recently, these have been so few in number, so isolated, and for the most part so far open to doubt that it has not been found necessary to re-impose the restrictions which were withdrawn in October; and the Lieutenant-Governor, while fully cognizant of their significance, has thought it sufficient to report their occurrence from time to time to the Government of India, and to the various Foreign Governments, as required by the terms of the Venice Convention, still entertaining the hope that with the passing of the cold season they would disappear.

3. This hope has unhappily not been realised. During January 15 cases with 13 deaths were reported. During the present month, up to the 23rd instant, there have been 27 cases with 24 deaths, and the numbers reported during the latter part of the month are greater than in the beginning. In some wards of the town also, and notably in Ward No. V, the total registered mortality from all causes has lately risen in a marked manner above the normal rate, and though there is no direct evidence that this is due to plague, the absence of any other known cause is at least a ground for suspicion. Reports have also reached Government which point to the possibility that attempts may be made to conceal the occurrence of cases, the sufferers being turned out of their houses by the landlords or the other inmates, through fear of infection or for other reasons, and forced to seek shelter elsewhere. Intimation has been received that the authorities in Egypt have decided to apply the plague rules against arrivals from Calcutta: and orders have been issued by the Government of India that the regulations of the Venice Convention shall be enforced against Calcutta at the ports of Aden, Madras, and Rangoon.

4. In these circumstances the Lieutenant-Governor is compelled, with much regret, to re-impose the restrictions which were withdrawn in October 1898. A Resolution is under issue prescribing that the inspection of the passengers and crews of vessels leaving Calcutta for ports out of India shall again be conducted by day on shore at the time of embarkation, and the fact that this has been done will be endorsed on the bill of health to be granted before any such vessel leaves the port. Correspondence has recently passed regarding a proposal that the clothing of the crews and deck passengers of vessels proceeding on long voyages shall be disinfected before departure. The Lieutenant-Governor was at first in hopes that this measure might not be necessary, but in view of the altered condition of things this is no longer possible. In communication with the Liners' Conference and the late President of the Chamber of Commerce, he has drawn up a scheme to give effect to the proposal, and arrangements will be made to bring it into force as soon as the apparatus can be procured. Orders are also under issue to provide for the inspection of passengers by train in the same manner as was done prior to October 1898.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor has also had under consideration the question of revising the regulations for dealing with plague in Calcutta itself. Those now in force are contained in Plague Regulation No. 9, dated 10th November 1897, and were drawn up with reference to the experience which had been gained in Bombay and elsewhere, before any case of plague had occurred in Calcutta. In substance, the Lieutenant-Governor sees no reason to doubt their propriety and efficacy. In some points of detail, however, later experience has suggested improvements. In order that effective measures may be taken to prevent the spread of infection, it is of the first importance that every case which occurs shall be promptly brought to the notice of the authorities. Foreign Governments would have just cause for complaint if the measures adopted locally were such as to lead to the concealment of cases; nor can the Local Government hope to cope successfully with an outbreak if the regulations in force are so repugnant to the sense of the people affected as to drive them to withhold information and hide away their sick instead of bringing them forward for treatment. Experience has shown that success has attended the system prescribed in Rule 46 of Plague Regulation No. 9, by which persons found to be suffering from plague are, at their discretion, permitted to resort to ward, caste, or family hospitals, maintained by private contributions, instead of being removed for segregation to the special plague hospitals at Maniktala, Marcus Square, and the Budge-Budge Road. Still more satisfactory has been the arrangement frequently resorted to by which persons are permitted to set apart portions of their dwelling or garden houses, under due restrictions, for use as private hospitals for themselves and their families. In the case of the poorer classes, however, the arrangements have not worked so well. It is amongst the poor that the majority of the patients has usually been found: and any system is defective which leads these ignorant and superstitious people to resort to any shift rather than expose themselves to the chances of compulsory removal to a plague hospital or segregation camp.

6. The Lieutenant-Governor is therefore of opinion that measures must be taken to apply in the case of the poorer classes also the system which has so far worked well in respect of classes higher in the social scale. In future no person shall be removed to a public hospital under Rule 46 of Plague Regulation No. 9, without his consent, provided that suitable arrangements are made for the treatment of the case at home. If there is any ward, caste, or family hospital for admission to which he is eligible, and to which he is willing to go, he may be moved thither. If there is no such hospital available, an endeavour should be made to explain to the patient or his friends the advantages which he would obtain in a public hospital in respect of treatment, attendance, and surroundings. But if, notwithstanding this, he still prefers to be treated at his own home, arrangements shall be made to adapt the latter for the purposes of a private isolation hospital. The other inmates, except such as are in attendance on the patient, should be induced to remove elsewhere. Medicines and medical attendance should be provided free of cost, and on the recovery of the patient (or after his death, if the case should terminate fatally) the premises should be either thoroughly disinfected, or, if necessary, demolished, compensation being paid to the owner. All clothing or bedding which is likely to have become contaminated should also be at once disinfected in the Equifex disinfector or destroyed on payment of compensation. If any structural or internal alterations in the house or hut appear necessary in order to render it suitable for its purpose, these shall be carried out by the Chairman and the Health Officer at the public expense.

7. By these measures, the Lieutenant-Governor hopes to secure the active co-operation of the public in the reporting of cases promptly as they occur. There is at present no serious ground for alarm. Such cases as have occurred are undoubtedly sporadic. The season of greatest danger is nearly passed. Much has been done during the past two years to improve the conservancy of the town, and to introduce a higher standard of cleanliness. The municipal establishments have been strengthened, and a strong staff of competent medical and sanitary officers is at hand. The course which the disease has so far taken in Calcutta is such as to warrant the hope that the town may yet escape a serious outbreak. And the Lieutenant-Governor is confident that all classes of the community will unite with the authorities in their efforts to ward it off.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

E. N. BAKER,

Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

RESOLUTION No. 1222Med.

The 1st March 1898.

BY the retirement from the public service of Brigade-Surgeon Lieutenant-Colonel Sir George King, K.C.I.E., M.B., F.R.S., Superintendent of the Royal Botanic Garden, Calcutta, Director of the Botanical Survey of India, and Government Quinologist, Bengal, Government loses one of its most distinguished and valued servants. Sir George King's labours in the fields of morphological and systematic botany have greatly extended our knowledge of the flora of India and the Malay Archipelago, and have established his reputation as a botanist throughout the scientific world. Nor was he less successful as a practical administrator. The striking improvements that have been effected during the past twenty-five years in the Botanic Garden at Sibpur are due to his business capacity and his talent for landscape gardening. By developing the Sikkim cinchona plantations and introducing the manufacture of quinine by a cheap process he rendered it possible to introduce and extend throughout the Province and in other parts of India the system of selling quinine by the dose, and thus placed within the reach of the poorest peasant a remedy for the malarial fever that prevails in so many districts. Sir Alexander Mackenzie takes this opportunity of placing on record his high appreciation of Sir George King's services, and trusts that on his retirement from official work he will continue to pursue his scientific researches.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H. H. RISLEY,

Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

REVISED WATER-RATE RULES FOR THE MIDNAPORE CANAL.

The 14th February 1898.

No. 19.—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sections 99 and 78 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant Governor proposes to pass the following rules and to fix the undermentioned rates to be charged for water supplied from the Midnapore Canal. These rules and rates will supersede those now in force.

A. D. McArthur, Col., R.E.,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

1. The Divisional Canal Officer is responsible for maintaining the canal in an efficient state of repair, for providing drainage channels where necessary, and generally for all engineering work involved in its management, as well as for the distribution of water to lessees. The word "canal" is here used as defined in section 3 of the Act.

2. The Deputy Collector is responsible for the assessment and collection of water-rates accruing to Government from the canal.

3. Water shall not be distributed otherwise than on the application of a lessee, or to a person in whose favour a provisional license under Rule 15 has been issued. Such application may be made verbally or in writing to any subordinate in charge of that part of the canal from which water is required.

4. If any lessee apply for water to the Deputy Collector or one of his subordinates verbally, he shall be directed to address himself to an irrigation officer or subordinate. If he makes such an application in writing, his petition shall be forwarded direct by the zilladar, to whom it is addressed, to the Subdivisional Canal Officer in charge of that part of the canal from which the petitioner's village is supplied.

5. The Divisional Canal Officer shall map out the irrigable area into blocks in accordance with the natural features of the ground, and so determine that the whole block shall be irrigable from one outlet or from one set of outlets. So far as may be practicable, the blocks shall be separated by drainage lines.

6. Each block determined as above shall be numbered and recorded with its irrigable area in registers to be maintained by the Divisional Canal Officers and Deputy Collector. The blocks shall also be marked on maps to be maintained by the same officers.

7. Ordinarily leases for not more than five years may be granted for the whole irrigable area of a block, or, subject to the provisions of Rule 13, for definite parts of a block under the following conditions:—

I.—Ordinarily the whole irrigable area of any village, so far as situated within the block, must be included in the lease.

II.—All leases within one block shall be granted so that they shall expire on the same date.

III.—In order to equalize the areas to be dealt with in each year, the date of expiry of the leases in each block shall be determined by the Divisional Canal Officer in consultation with the Deputy Collector, so that, as far as practicable, one-fifth of the total area usually irrigated may fall out of lease in each year.

IV.—No permit shall be granted, when the supply of water must of necessity be delivered across an unleased area, unless a village channel exists, which, in the opinion of the Subdivisional Canal Officer, will deliver water without waste across the unleased area.

To enable the Special Deputy Collector to equalize the area which lapses each year leases in suitable blocks may be granted under the above conditions for six or seven years with the approval of the Executive Engineer.

8. The rates to be charged for water supplied between 16th June and 30th November, whether by flow or lift, to lessees on application shall be—

For a term of five years—Re. 1-8 per acre for each season. The area under long lease will, in future, as a rule, be reduced to 75,000 square acres, i.e., 65,000 acres under the Midnapore weir, 8,000 under the Panchkura weir and 2,000 under the Tidal reaches.

For one year or for water supplied on a provisional license for which a permit for a term of years is not subsequently issued, Rs. 3 per acre.

Provided that the leases, whether new or renewals required for shorter terms than five years in order to develop the system of blocks as explained above, shall be charged Re. 1-8 per acre only.

If water is available after the long leases have been irrigated, leases for a single watering may be given at eight annas per acre, the rate being payable in advance.

9. For the supply of water, when available, for winter crops, a rate of Rs. 2-8 per acre per season shall be charged.

10. For the unauthorized use of canal water a rate of Rs. 5 per acre, or such less rate as may be sanctioned by the Deputy Collector, shall be charged.

11. Application for water-leases under section 74 of the Act shall be presented to the Subdivisional Officer through the zilladar in whose charge the land lies.

12. Every application for a water-lease shall contain the following particulars:—

1.—Name and residence of applicant.

2. Name of pargana, mahal and village in which the land to be irrigated is situated.

3.—Total area for the irrigation of which the application is made and its boundaries, and if the lands to be irrigated lie in separate chaks, the name of each chak.

4.—Names of the raiyats whose lands are to be irrigated, and the quantity of land held by each.

5.—Name of the canal and number of distributary from which water is required.

6.—Signatures of the applicants.

13. A separate application must be presented for lands in each village, but tahsilalaida or other lands lying within the village boundary at the time of survey may be included.

14. Before a permit for a term of years is granted, the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained, but permits for one year only and provisional licenses may be issued with the written assent of the Subdivisional Canal Officer. The Deputy Collector shall on the day of issue forward a copy of all permits granted to the Divisional Canal Officer.

Existing leases may, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer, be extended for not more than three years, without enquiry or remeasurement, payments being made in accordance with the existing assessment.

15. When a water-lease is granted, a kabuliyat shall be taken in a form approved by Government, and a "permit" shall be given to the lessee or lessees in a form similar to that prescribed in Schedule C of the Act. Pending the completion of a lease, the zilladar may issue a provisional license for the supply of water to an area covered by an application.

16. On the issue of a permit or provisional license, the zilladar shall forward to the Subdivisional Canal Officer direct a requisition requesting him to supply water to the lessee on application. This requisition shall be kept by the Canal Officer till January 1st next following, and shall then be returned to the Deputy Collector. On the back should be noted the several dates on which the village was supplied with water. A fresh requisition shall be issued on or before June 1st, and returned on or before January 1st each year, till the lease expires.

17. When it comes to the knowledge of the Subdivisional Canal Officer that canal water has been taken without authority, he shall hold a local investigation and transmit the record thereof to the Divisional Officer, who shall, if he is of opinion that the fields should be assessed, forward the case with his remarks to the Deputy Collector. Separate proceedings shall be taken in the case of each village irrigated without authority.

18. On receipt of the record mentioned in Rule 17, and after hearing any objection which may be raised, the Deputy Collector shall determine whether water-rates can be legally charged, and if so, he shall proceed to assess, at the rate provided in Rule 10, the land irrigated without authority. Water-rates shall not be charged where the unauthorized irrigation has occurred through the act, neglect or default of a Canal Officer or subordinate.

19. The statements of the amounts demandable for water-rates leviable under the rules in force shall be prepared under the supervision and signature of the Deputy Collector in such form as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor. Persons charged under Rule 10 or 18 shall be served, by post or otherwise, with a statement showing the amounts charged to enable them to lodge an appeal to the Collector under section 91 of the Act, if they desire to do so.

20. Should it be proved, after due enquiry, that the supply of water given to any leased area is habitually wasted, or used for the irrigation of lands not under lease, it shall be competent for the Superintending Canal Officer to direct that the lease shall be cancelled with effect from the 1st of June next following.

21. The rates for water supplied from June to November shall in each season fall due on the 1st January and 15th February following, but all sums of Rs. 5 and under shall become due on the 1st January and be payable in one instalment. The Deputy Collector may, however, require one-half of the rates due on applications filed after the 1st of September to be paid in advance, and may refuse to issue a permit for more than one year. The rates for water supplied for winter crops shall fall due on the 1st April following.

22. Water-rates imposed under Rule 10 or 18 shall fall due as soon as the assessment is made, and shall be realized at once.

23. The Superintending Canal Officer may, with the concurrence of the Collector direct the Deputy Collector to—

I.—Cease to issue permits for the irrigation of lands in villages where there have been constant difficulties in realizing water-rates until all the arrears of water-rates due are paid up, and also, if specially so ordered, unless half the amount due under new applications is paid in advance. An order under this rule shall be in force for the time stated therein, which shall not exceed three years.

II.—Cancel any five-years' lease if on the 1st of June of any year water-rates to the extent of half the demand for one year are in arrears.

24. Remission of water-rates, either in whole or part, as the cease may require shall be granted by the Deputy Collector for—

I.—Errors in the assessment of rates.

II.—Injury to the crop on a leased area caused by deficient supply of water, provided a written application for remission has been made 15 days at least before the crop is cut.

In regard to applications under II, the written opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained and form part of the record of the case.

25. The Deputy Collector, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer may grant remissions of water-rates, either in whole or part, for injury to the crops on leased areas caused by excess of water due to deficient drainage.

26. The Deputy Collector may, with the written assent of the Divisional Canal Officer, commute rates charged under Rules 10 and 18 to those chargeable for water supplied on application, provided that a lease either for a term of years or for the season has been subsequently executed for the lands in question.

27. Remissions on other grounds than the above require the sanction of Government.

28. In cases where sums due on account of water-rates cannot be collected owing to the death, bankruptcy, or absconding of the defaulter, the amount which is non-realizable may be written off as irrecoverable on the authority of the Superintending Canal Officer.

29. Before awarding compensation under section 16 of the Act, or making a reference under section 17 of the Act, the Collector shall obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Canal Officer, and his written opinion shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

30. The chaukidar or mukhya of any village in which lands are leased for a term of years shall be entitled to a remission of water-rates for his holding either as a jagir or raiyati up to a limit of 3 acres per cent. provided he gives efficient and willing assistance to the Canal Officers in respect to the following matters:—

I.—In the preparation of applications for leases.

II.—In the measurements of irrigated lands.

III.—In giving the names of the occupiers of the various fields.

IV.—In receiving demand statements and informing the cultivators of the demands against them.

V.—In receiving tappas from the zilladars and distributing them.

VI.—In being present when complaints are investigated by Canal Officers, and giving information regarding the matters under investigation.

VII.—In reporting to the zilladars any mutations in holdings of persons who have signed a lease for a term of years.

31. Tanks may be filled with canal water without charge, wherever water can be made available without injury to the cultivation dependent on a canal under the following conditions:—

I.—No tank shall be filled unless the water is to be exclusively used for domestic purposes or for watering cattle.

II.—No tank shall be filled from which irrigation is practised.

III.—No tank shall be filled which intercepts any line of drainage or is liable to overflow from the accumulation of water from natural causes.

IV.—No tank shall be filled except on the written order of the Subdivisional Canal Officer issued on the written application of the persons concerned.

V.—No tank shall be filled unless the village channel used to convey water to it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Subdivisional Canal Officer to be in a sound condition when the application is made.

VI.—The privilege here accorded may, by the written order of the Subdivisional Canal Officer, be suspended for 12 months for the breach of any of the above rules.

32. The Divisional Canal Officer may supply water for manufacturing or other purposes and charge for the same at the rate of one rupee for each 10,000 cubic feet or part of 10,000 cubic feet supplied. The same charge will be made if water is taken into a tank without authority or used in an unauthorized manner.

33. No person shall, without the permission in writing of the Divisional or Subdivisional Canal Officer, pass or cause any animal or vehicle to pass on or across any of the works, banks or channels of a canal or drainage work after he has been desired to desist therefrom, except by means of such bridges, fords and ferries and their approaches as are provided by the Divisional Canal Officer.

34. No officer employed on the canals, unless especially exempted by the Lieutenant-Governor from the operation of this rule, shall have any interest in the distribution of water from any of the canals, or purchase or bid for any Government property sold thereon, either in his own name or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others.

35. Except as provided in the Act and in these rules, no appeal shall lie from any order passed by a Canal Officer; but the Subdivisional Canal Officer shall modify any order passed by him in accordance with the order of the Divisional Canal Officer, and the Subdivisional

Canal Officer or Divisional Canal Officer shall modify any orders passed by them in accordance with the orders of the Superintending Canal Officer, who shall exercise a general control over the proceedings of all Canal Officers.

36. In appeals to the Collector under section 91 of the Act other than those specially provided for in Rule 19, the Collector may require the Superintending Engineer to state his opinion in writing, which shall form part of the record of the proceedings in the case.

A Dictionary of the Economic Products of India

BY DR. GEO. WATT, C.I.E.,

Reporter on Economic Products.

The first five volumes and Vol. VI, Parts I, II, III & IV of the Dictionary are ready at the Office of the Superintendent of Government Printing, No. 8, Hastings Street, Calcutta, and will be supplied to non-subscribers on receipt of the price for the complete set, which is Rs. 45 in India, and 3 guineas in England (exclusive of the Index, for which a separate charge will be made): packing and postage, in India, 8 annas per volume; for England, Rs. 2-6 per volume. For copies bound in half calf or half morocco, Rs. 6 and 8 shillings, respectively, will be charged extra for the whole set.

The Dictionary is intended to deal with the products of India—animal, vegetable, and mineral; each product being treated after a uniform plan, the paragraphs of which give the scientific, vernacular, and European names; habitat or source; history; properties and uses (both chemical and industrial); trade statistics; markets, &c. The work is arranged alphabetically according to scientific nomenclature, but commercial and important vernacular names are also given as cross-references, so that little difficulty need be experienced in finding the account of a product, even when its scientific name is unknown to the reader.

An important feature of the Dictionary consists in the fact that derived information is in every instance given under quotation marks, and with a reference to the original publication. Numerous contributors have, however, furnished the results of new discoveries and confirmed the vernacular names, so that the Dictionary is not only a complete compilation of published information, but has been brought abreast of the most recent inventions and discoveries.

Volume I contains the letters A and B, and consists of 559 royal 8vo. pages; Vol. II embraces the letter C in 689 pages; Vol. III contains the letters D, E, F and half of G.; Vol. IV latter half of G to middle of L; and Vol. V contains the latter half of L to end of O; Vol. VI (which consist of four parts), Part I, contains letters P to R. The whole work completed in nine volumes (including Parts II to IV of Vol. VI); but a tenth volume may also be issued, consisting of an Index to all the vernacular and other names contained in the Dictionary. The Index will practically be a Glossary of the Vernacular and European names of the plants, animals and minerals of India, and, as such, will be a work of reference, which, it is hoped, may prove of considerable value.

NOMINATION OF A REPRESENTATIVE MEMBER OF THE DISTRICT BOARDS IN THE RAJSHAHI DIVISION TO A SEAT IN THE COUNCIL OF THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR FOR MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

No. 1467A.

APPOINTMENT.

RESOLUTION.

Dated Calcutta, the 1st March 1898.

THE Hon'ble Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy of Nator, who was appointed to be a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council as the representative of the District Boards of the Rajshahi Division, having resigned his seat in the Council, Sir Alexander Mackenzie has decided that the same District Boards will be called upon to elect another person for nomination to the Council to fill the vacant seat. The necessary notification will, therefore, now be published in the Calcutta Gazette specifying the District Boards from which a recommendation will be made to the Lieutenant-Governor for the nomination of the seat. Each District Board will elect one representative only, and he will be entitled to exercise all the votes of the body which he represents.

2. The following are the District Boards which will send delegates to vote for a person to be recommended for the vacant seat, and the number of votes assigned to them, according to the scale shown in paragraph 5 of the Resolution of this Government, No. 2307A., dated the 31st March 1897. The ordinary income taken is that for 1896-97:—

Division.	District Boards.	Ordinary income.	Number of votes to be recorded by the representative.
		Rs.
Rajshahi ...	Rajshahi	1,63,424	3
	Dinajpur	1,25,560	3
	Jalpaiguri	1,13,722	2
	Rangpur	1,96,172	4
	Pabna	85,710	2

3. Under Rule IV of the Regulations framed by the Governor-General in Council with the sanction of the Secretary of State under section 1 (4) of the Indian Councils Act, 1892, for Bengal, the Lieutenant-Governor now desires that intimation may be at once communicated by the Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division to the Chairmen of all the District Boards enumerated in the above list, requesting them to arrange for the convening of a special meeting of each District Board concerned, at which one of their members may be elected to represent them for the purpose of recommending the nomination of a Member in the Lieutenant-Governor's Council. The name of the representative elected in each must be reported at once by the Chairman of the District Board concerned for the information of the Commissioner of the Division.

4. The period of two months, which is contemplated under Rule VII of the Regulations as the period within which a recommendation shall be made to the Lieutenant-Governor, is hereby declared to run from the date on which the Commissioner of the Division issues his invitation to the Chairman of any District Board concerned to elect one of their members to represent them for the purpose of recommending the nomination of a Member in the Lieutenant-Governor's Council.

5. As soon as the representatives are elected by the District Boards concerned, they will be called upon by the Commissioner of the Division to meet together on an early and convenient date, with special reference to the limit of time imposed under Rule VII of the Regulations, and at such convenient place as he may specify, for the purpose of electing by a majority of votes a person whom they will recommend to the Lieutenant-Governor to be nominated as a Member of the Council. The names of all candidates put forward at such meeting shall be duly proposed by one of the electoral representatives present. The election shall be by ballot, and the person elected must obtain a majority of the votes of the representatives present. If on the occasion of the first ballot an absolute majority is not obtained, the candidate who obtains the least number of votes shall be withdrawn from the election, and another ballot shall then be held for the remaining candidates, and so on until an absolute majority is obtained.

The electoral representatives present at this meeting shall elect among themselves a Chairman, who shall preside and be responsible for the fair and proper exercise of the ballot vote.

As soon as the election is made, the Chairman of the meeting shall, without delay, report to the Commissioner of the Division the name of the person so elected, with the number of votes obtained and any other information which it may appear desirable to communicate, and on behalf of the meeting shall recommend to the Lieutenant-Governor to nominate for Council the person so elected. The Commissioner shall submit the report from the Chairman of the meeting, with any observations he may wish to add, to the Chief Secretary to Government, by whom the recommendations will be submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor.

6 Attention is drawn to the following Rule VI of the Regulations, which have been framed by the Governor-General in Council and the Secretary of State:—

VI.—It shall be a condition in the case of any person to be recommended by a Municipal Corporation or group of Municipal Corporations that he shall be a person ordinarily resident within the Municipality or the district in which it is situated, or in some one of the Municipalities constituting the group or of the districts in which they are situated. A similar condition shall also apply to persons to be recommended by District Boards.

Under this rule it is not necessary that persons recommended shall be members of any District Board concerned, but they must be ordinarily resident within the Division from which the recommendation is made. Subject to this condition, the rules declare no limit of qualification, and it is left to the electoral representatives to recommend a person under Rule V (c) according to the majority of their votes.

7. It is desirable that the subsidiary arrangements now sanctioned shall, as far as possible, be given effect to by the District Boards concerned with the minimum of official interference. The Divisional Commissioner and District Officers will, of course, afford any assistance which may be required, and do their utmost to facilitate the smooth working of the elections; but Government officers are forbidden to take part directly or indirectly in the election by canvassing, influencing votes, or otherwise interfering with the free choice of the District Boards. No indication should be given by any official member of any of those District Boards as to the manner in which he himself intends to vote.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be furnished to the Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division, for information and guidance, and for communication to the District Boards concerned in his Division.

Ordered also that a copy be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

C. W. BOLTON,

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

REVISED WATER-RATE RULES FOR THE MIDNAPORE CANAL.

The 14th February 1898.

No. 19—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sections 99 and 78 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant Governor proposes to pass the following rules and to fix the undermentioned rates to be charged for water supplied from the Midnapore Canal. These rules and rates will supersede those now in force.

A. D. MCARTHUR, Col., R.E.,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

1. The Divisional Canal Officer is responsible for maintaining the canal in an efficient state of repair, for providing drainage channels where necessary, and generally for all engineering work involved in its management, as well as for the distribution of water to lessees. The word "canal" is here used as defined in section 3 of the Act.

2. The Deputy Collector is responsible for the assessment and collection of water-rates accruing to Government from the canal.

3. Water shall not be distributed otherwise than on the application of a lessee, or to a person in whose favour a provisional license under Rule 15 has been issued. Such application may be made verbally or in writing to any subordinate in charge of that part of the canal from which water is required.

4. If any lessee apply for water to the Deputy Collector or one of his subordinates verbally, he shall be directed to address himself to an irrigation officer or subordinate. If he makes such an application in writing, his petition shall be forwarded direct by the zilladar, to whom it is addressed, to the Subdivisional Canal Officer in charge of that part of the canal from which the petitioner's village is supplied.

5. The Divisional Canal Officer shall map out the irrigable area into blocks in accordance with the natural features of the ground, and so determine that the whole block shall be irrigable from one outlet or from one set of outlets. So far as may be practicable, the blocks shall be separated by drainage lines.

6. Each block determined as above shall be numbered and recorded with its irrigable area in registers to be maintained by the Divisional Canal Officers and Deputy Collector. The blocks shall also be marked on maps to be maintained by the same officers.

7. Ordinarily leases for not more than five years may be granted for the whole irrigable area of a block, or, subject to the provisions of Rule 13, for definite parts of a block under the following conditions:—

I.—Ordinarily the whole irrigable area of any village, so far as situated within the block, must be included in the lease.

II.—All leases within one block shall be granted so that they shall expire on the same date.

III.—In order to equalize the areas to be dealt with in each year, the date of expiry of the leases in each block shall be determined by the Divisional Canal Officer in consultation with the Deputy Collector, so that, as far as practicable, one-fifth of the total area usually irrigated may fall out of lease in each year.

IV.—No permit shall be granted, when the supply of water must of necessity be delivered across an unleased area, unless a village channel exists, which, in the opinion of the Subdivisional Canal Officer, will deliver water without waste across the unleased area.

To enable the Special Deputy Collector to equalize the area which lapses each year, leases in suitable blocks may be granted under the above conditions for six or seven years with the approval of the Executive Engineer.

8. The rates to be charged for water supplied between 16th June and 30th November, whether by flow or lift, to lessees on application shall be—

For a term of five years—Re. 1-8 per acre for each season. The area under long lease will, in future, as a rule, be reduced to 75,000 square acres, i.e., 65,000 acres under the Midnapore weir, 8,000 under the Panchkura weir and 2,000 under the Tidal reaches.

For one year or for water supplied on a provisional license for which a permit for a term of years is not subsequently issued, Rs. 3 per acre.

Provided that the leases, whether new or renewals required for shorter terms than five years in order to develop the system of blocks as explained above, shall be charged Re. 1-8 per acre only.

If water is available after the long leases have been irrigated, leases for a single watering may be given at eight annas per acre, the rate being payable in advance.

9. For the supply of water, when available, for winter crops, a rate of Rs. 2-8 per acre per season shall be charged.

10. For the unauthorized use of canal water a rate of Rs. 5 per acre, or such less rate as may be sanctioned by the Deputy Collector, shall be charged.

11. Application for water-leases under section 74 of the Act shall be presented to the Subdivisional Officer through the zilladar in whose charge the land lies.

12. Every application for a water-lease shall contain the following particulars:—

1.—Name and residence of applicant.

2. Name of pargana, mahal and village in which the land to be irrigated is situated.

3.—Total area for the irrigation of which the application is made and its boundaries, and if the lands to be irrigated lie in separate chaks, the name of each chak.

4.—Names of the raiyats whose lands are to be irrigated, and the quantity of land held by each.

5.—Name of the canal and number of distributary from which water is required.

6.—Signatures of the applicants.

13. A separate application must be presented for lands in each village, but tahsilalaida or other lands lying within the village boundary at the time of survey may be included.

14. Before a permit for a term of years is granted, the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained, but permits for one year only and provisional licenses may be issued with the written assent of the Subdivisional Canal Officer. The Deputy Collector shall on the day of issue forward a copy of all permits granted to the Divisional Canal Officer.

Existing leases may, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer, be extended for not more than three years, without enquiry or remeasurement, payments being made in accordance with the existing assessment.

15. When a water-lease is granted, a kabuliyat shall be taken in a form approved by Government, and a "permit" shall be given to the lessee or lessees in a form similar to that prescribed in Schedule C of the Act. Pending the completion of a lease, the zilladar may issue a provisional license for the supply of water to an area covered by an application.

16. On the issue of a permit or provisional license, the zilladar shall forward to the Subdivisional Canal Officer direct a requisition requesting him to supply water to the lessee on application. This requisition shall be kept by the Canal Officer till January 1st next following, and shall then be returned to the Deputy Collector. On the back should be noted the several dates on which the village was supplied with water. A fresh requisition shall be issued on or before June 1st, and returned on or before January 1st each year, till the lease expires.

17. When it comes to the knowledge of the Subdivisional Canal Officer that canal water has been taken without authority, he shall hold a local investigation and transmit the record thereof to the Divisional Officer, who shall, if he is of opinion that the fields should be assessed, forward the case with his remarks to the Deputy Collector. Separate proceedings shall be taken in the case of each village irrigated without authority.

18. On receipt of the record mentioned in Rule 17, and after hearing any objection which may be raised, the Deputy Collector shall determine whether water-rates can be legally charged, and if so, he shall proceed to assess, at the rate provided in Rule 10, the land irrigated without authority. Water-rates shall not be charged where the unauthorized irrigation has occurred through the act, neglect or default of a Canal Officer or subordinate.

19. The statements of the amounts demandable for water-rates leviable under the rules in force shall be prepared under the supervision and signature of the Deputy Collector in such form as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor. Persons charged under Rule 10 or 18 shall be served, by post or otherwise, with a statement showing the amounts charged to enable them to lodge an appeal to the Collector under section 91 of the Act, if they desire to do so.

20. Should it be proved, after due enquiry, that the supply of water given to any leased area is habitually wasted, or used for the irrigation of lands not under lease, it shall be competent for the Superintending Canal Officer to direct that the lease shall be cancelled with effect from the 1st of June next following.

21. The rates for water supplied from June to November shall in each season fall due on the 1st January and 15th February following, but all sums of Rs. 5 and under shall become due on the 1st January and be payable in one instalment. The Deputy Collector may, however, require one-half of the rates due on applications filed after the 1st of September to be paid in advance, and may refuse to issue a permit for more than one year. The rates for water supplied for winter crops shall fall due on the 1st April following.

22. Water-rates imposed under Rule 10 or 18 shall fall due as soon as the assessment is made, and shall be realized at once.

23. The Superintending Canal Officer may, with the concurrence of the Collector direct the Deputy Collector to—

I.—Cease to issue permits for the irrigation of lands in villages where there have been constant difficulties in realizing water-rates until all the arrears of water-rates due are paid up, and also, if specially so ordered, unless half the amount due under new applications is paid in advance. An order under this rule shall be in force for the time stated therein, which shall not exceed three years.

II.—Cancel any five-years' lease if on the 1st of June of any year water-rates to the extent of half the demand for one year are in arrears.

24. Remission of water-rates, either in whole or part, as the cease may require shall be granted by the Deputy Collector for—

I.—Errors in the assessment of rates.

II.—Injury to the crop on a leased area caused by deficient supply of water, provided a written application for remission has been made 15 days at least before the crop is cut.

In regard to applications under II, the written opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained and form part of the record of the case.

25. The Deputy Collector, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer may grant remissions of water-rates, either in whole or part, for injury to the crops on leased areas caused by excess of water due to deficient drainage.

26. The Deputy Collector may, with the written assent of the Divisional Canal Officer, commute rates charged under Rules 10 and 18 to those chargeable for water supplied on application, provided that a lease either for a term of years or for the season has been subsequently executed for the lands in question.

27. Remissions on other grounds than the above require the sanction of Government.

28. In cases where sums due on account of water-rates cannot be collected owing to the death, bankruptcy, or absconding of the defaulter, the amount which is non-realizable may be written off as irrecoverable on the authority of the Superintending Canal Officer.

29. Before awarding compensation under section 16 of the Act, or making a reference under section 17 of the Act, the Collector shall obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Canal Officer, and his written opinion shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

30. The chaukidar or mukhya of any village in which lands are leased for a term of years shall be entitled to a remission of water-rates for his holding either as a jagir or raiyati up to a limit of 3 acres per cent. provided he gives efficient and willing assistance to the Canal Officers in respect to the following matters:—

I.—In the preparation of applications for leases.

II.—In the measurements of irrigated lands.

III.—In giving the names of the occupiers of the various fields.

IV.—In receiving demand statements and informing the cultivators of the demands against them.

V.—In receiving tappas from the zilladars and distributing them.

VI.—In being present when complaints are investigated by Canal Officers, and giving information regarding the matters under investigation.

VII.—In reporting to the zilladars any mutations in holdings of persons who have signed a lease for a term of years.

31 Tanks may be filled with canal water without charge, wherever water can be made available without injury to the cultivation dependent on a canal under the following conditions:—

I.—No tank shall be filled unless the water is to be exclusively used for domestic purposes or for watering cattle.

II.—No tank shall be filled from which irrigation is practised.

III.—No tank shall be filled which intercepts any line of drainage or is liable to overflow from the accumulation of water from natural causes.

IV.—No tank shall be filled except on the written order of the Subdivisional Canal Officer issued on the written application of the persons concerned.

V.—No tank shall be filled unless the village channel used to convey water to it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Subdivisional Canal Officer to be in a sound condition when the application is made.

VI.—The privilege here accorded may, by the written order of the Subdivisional Canal Officer, be suspended for 12 months for the breach of any of the above rules.

32. The Divisional Canal Officer may supply water for manufacturing or other purposes and charge for the same at the rate of one rupee for each 10,000 cubic feet or part of 10,000 cubic feet supplied. The same charge will be made if water is taken into a tank without authority or used in an unauthorized manner.

33. No person shall, without the permission in writing of the Divisional or Subdivisional Canal Officer, pass or cause any animal or vehicle to pass on or across any of the works, banks or channels of a canal or drainage work after he has been desired to desist therefrom, except by means of such bridges, fords and ferries and their approaches as are provided by the Divisional Canal Officer.

34. No officer employed on the canals, unless especially exempted by the Lieutenant-Governor from the operation of this rule, shall have any interest in the distribution of water from any of the canals, or purchase or bid for any Government property sold thereon, either in his own name or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others.

35. Except as provided in the Act and in these rules, no appeal shall lie from any order passed by a Canal Officer; but the Subdivisional Canal Officer shall modify any order passed by him in accordance with the order of the Divisional Canal Officer, and the Subdivisional Canal Officer or Divisional Canal Officer shall modify any orders passed by them in accordance with the orders of the Superintending Canal Officer, who shall exercise a general control over the proceedings of all Canal Officers.

36. In appeals to the Collector under section 91 of the Act other than those specially provided for in Rule 19, the Collector may require the Superintending Engineer to state his opinion in writing, which shall form part of the record of the proceedings in the case.

CEYLON, SOUTH-WEST COAST—Point de Galle approach.

Non-existence of Luna Horowa rock.

The British Admiralty has given notice (No. 55 of 1898) that information has been received from the Master Attendant at Point de Galle, dated 22nd December 1897, that he recently examined the locality in which Luna Horowa rock has hitherto been shown on the Admiralty Charts, viz., bearing S.E. ⅜ S., distant 1⅔ miles, from Unawatti point, and found not less than 10 fathoms in that position.

The fishermen state that the name Horowa rock is applied to a 3-fathom patch, which lies about a cable south-westward of Bellows rock, and on which the sea breaks heavily in the South-west monsoon, and that no other shoal is known in the vicinity.

Luna Horowa rock (P. D.) has consequently been expunged from the Admiralty Charts, and the danger line has been extended one cable south-westward of Bellows rock.

Approximate position, Bellows rock, lat. 5° 59′ 45″ N., long. 80° 14′ 30″ E.

Leading beacons on Pass and Slut islands.

THE British Admiralty has given notice (No. 45 of 1898) that the undermentioned leading beacons have been erected in Hai tan strait, to assist in the navigation of the Narrows:—

1. Two beacons on the north-eastern slope of Pass island, bearing when in line S. 20½° E.

   Each beacon is surmounted by a diamond-shaped top-mark, the northern with a white field and central part black; the southern with a black field and central part white.

   Approximate position, Pass island, lat. 25° 27¼′ N., long. 119° 39¾′ E.

2. Two beacons on the south-eastern slope of Slut island, bearing when in line N. 8¼° W.

   Each beacon is surmounted by a triangular top-mark, painted white with a vertical, black stripe in the middle; the triangle on the northern beacon is placed base upwards, on the southern base downwards.

   Approximate position, Slut island, lat. 25° 40½′ N., long. 119° 37′ E.

NOTE.—Soundings, obtained in a recent survey, show that vessels proceeding northward should keep the Pass island beacons in line, astern, bearing S. 20½° E., from a position with Quoin hill in line with Tyne Yung shan peak, bearing W. ¾ S., until the southern end of the middle Rocky island is in line with a fort on the west shore, bearing W. by N. ¼ N.; then alter course to the northward to pass about 3 cables eastward of Black rocks. The least water passed over by following these directions will be a depth of 15 feet at lowest springs, situated about 3¼ miles from Pass island.

Proceeding northward, the beacons on Slut island should be brought in line, bearing N. 8¼° W., when Inner rock bears East, and should be kept in line, leading well clear of all known dangers, until Mitre rock bears West.

The Master of the ship Tinto Hill reports the existence of a shoal not marked on Admiralty chart for Malacca Strait, number of chart being 1355, sheet No. 2, having small corrections up to 1st January 1896 and large corrections to December 1885. He also discovered a narrow strip of black sand about 50 fathoms long N.N.W. and S.S.E. (with sea birds picking on it) about a mile off; tacked ship to N. by E. ¾ E. when the following bearings were taken :—"Parcelar Hill" E. ½ N., One fathom bank light-house N. ¼ E. and the ridge of sand forming shoal W. by S. ¾ S.; ship's head by standard compass N. by E. ¾ E.; error 2° 26′ easterly; tide flowing and setting S.E. by S. and running 2¼ knots, more or less. Immediately ship was heading off took cast of the lead and had no bottom at 25 fathoms. Weather clear and fine. Wind variable.

FIRST FORECAST OF THE OILSEED CROPS OF BENGAL, 1897-98.

THE following is published for general information.

REV. DEPT.,
The 4th March 1898.

M. FINUCANE,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

First forecast of the oilseed crops of Bengal, 1897-98.

Explanatory.—The chief kinds of oilseeds in these Provinces are (1) rapeseed and mustard, (2) linseed, (3) til or gingelly, and (4) other oilseeds, e.g., castor-oil and sirguza (niger oilseed). Two varieties of til are grown, viz., the rabi and the bhadoi. The present report furnishes estimates of the area and outturn of both varieties of til and of all the other oilseeds mentioned above.

The normal areas in column 4 of the appended statement are based on the average areas sown in the past five years in the case of all districts except Champaran, Muzaffarpur, and Manbhum. For Champaran and Muzaffarpur, estimates revised on the basis of the final survey figures have been accepted. For Manbhum the average of only two years has been taken to represent the normal area for want of more reliable information. Further enquiries will be made with a view to obtaining more correct figures.

2. Character of the season.—Good rain fell during the monsoon season of 1897, and left sufficient moisture in the soil for the sowing of the oilseed crops. In October, every district of these Provinces received considerably more than the normal fall of rain. In November, the rain was well distributed, all Divisions of these Provinces receiving slight rain. In December, the rainfall was below the normal in all districts, but this deficiency had no injurious effect on the crops generally. In January, Bengal proper received rain in excess of the normal, while in Bihar, Orissa and Chota Nagpur rain was deficient. In the first week of February, general rain fell in Bihar and in the north of Bengal, and slight showers were reported from East Bengal and Chota Nagpur; the fall elsewhere was practically nil. In the second week of February, there was rain over the greater part of the Province. On the whole the season has been very favourable to the cultivation and growth of the oilseed crops of these Provinces.

3. Area cultivated.—According to the revised estimates shown in column 4 of the appended statement, the total normal area under oilseeds in these Provinces amounts to 3,920,900 acres. The total area cultivated this year, as will be seen from the same statement, amounts to 4,096,000 acres. There is thus a slight increase in area this year over the normal, due to the favourable character of the season up to and at the time of sowing. The area cultivated with oilseeds last year amounted to 3,514,700 acres. The area under oilseeds this year shows an increase of 581,300 acres (16·5 per cent.) over last year's area.

4. Character of the crop.—From the returns of District Officers annexed to this note, it will be seen that out of the 45 districts of these Provinces, one district, Champaran, shows a 19-anna crop; two districts, Darbhanga and Bhagalpur, show crops a little above 16 annas; eight districts, viz., Burdwan, Birbhum, Saran, Muzaffarpur, Malda, Angul and Khondmals, Hazaribagh, and Singhbhum, report average crops of 16 annas; and the remaining 34 districts report crops below the average. No district reports a crop lower than 9 annas. Comparing the estimates of outturn this year with those of last year as given in columns 7 and 8 of the appended returns, it appears that from 41 districts better crops are reported. From four districts only, viz, Dinajpur (14 annas), Jalpaiguri (10 annas), Bogra ($14\frac{1}{2}$ annas), and Purnea (15 annas), are worse crops reported. The arithmetical mean of the estimates of anna outturn this year, calculated with reference to the areas sown, amounts to $13\frac{3}{8}$ annas. Considering the good character of the season, it is not improbable that this estimate may be exceeded, and it appears safe to estimate a 14-anna crop for the whole Province. The crop last year was estimated at 11 annas.

BURDWAN (concld).	Midnapore ...	Linseed	15,000	11,700	20,000	6	11½	The increase in the area brought under cultivation this year as compared with the previous year's is due to seasonable rain at the ploughing and sowing time. For the same reason, the outturn is also likely to be better this year. The difference in column 5 against other oilseeds as compared with last year's forecasts is due to a revision of estimate by the Subdivisional Officer of Tamluk.

PRESIDENCY.	24-Parganas	Linseed	1,000	400	1,200	4½	16	The increase in the area sown and the estimated outturn, as compared with the figures shown in last year's return, is due to more favourable rainfall during the current year. The crops under head "other oilseeds" were to some extent damaged by locusts in some parts of the district, hence their outturn is estimated to be a little below the average.

CHITTAGONG.	Tippera ...	Linseed	5,000	4,800	5,500	10	13	The increase in area under linseed is due to certain lands being ultimately utilized for the cultivation of linseed owing to the failure of the winter rice crop. The decrease in area under rapeseed, mustard and til is partly due to the fact that many lands intended for mustard and til were not sufficiently dry for their cultivation, and partly to the fact that such lands were sown with winter rice. The outturn of these crops is expected to be better than that of last year, as the season for sowing was a favourable one,

THE KHARIF IRRIGATION OPERATIONS FOR 1897-98.

No. 315*I.*

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL—IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

Irrigation.

Dated Calcutta, the 4th March 1898.

READ—

Statement No. II, showing the crops irrigated in Canal Districts in Bengal during the kharif season of 1897-98.

Letter No. 144*I.*, dated 12th May 1897, from the Government of India, Public Works Department, ordering the discontinuance of Statements Nos. I and III, the former showing the irrigation and rainfall in Canal Districts of Bengal, and the latter showing the crops irrigated by canals in Canal Divisions.

OBSERVATIONS.—The area irrigated during the kharif season of 1897-98, was 613,094 acres, against 595,741 acres in 1896-97, showing an increase of 2·91 per cent.

2. The increase was distributed over all the canals, expect those of the Sone Circle.

On the Orissa, Midnapore and Eden Canals it was due to the renewal of long-term leases.

The decrease on the Sone Canals was principally due to seasonable rainfall which reduced the demand for annual leases.

Although the area irrigated during 1897-98, from the Sone Canals, was less than that of 1896-97; still it was above the average of the last ten years.

3. The details of the increase or decrease in the irrigation of the kharif crops from the canals in each district during the year 1897-98, compared with the previous year, are given in the following statement:—

District.	Canal.	Kharif season. 1896-97.	Kharif season. 1897-98.	More.	Less.

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with the registers of past years (at the Park Street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 2·1° lower; and, finally, the thermometer which furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's Office during 20 years and upwards is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard thermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

MINUTE

BY

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor

ON THE

SERVICES OF GOVERNMENT OFFICERS AND PRIVATE GENTLEMEN IN CONNECTION WITH THE FAMINE OF 1896-97.

IN a separate Resolution of this date, the history of the recent famine in these Provinces has been given, and the degree of success attained in meeting distress has been described. I propose in this Minute to mention the names of officers and private gentlemen whose services have been brought prominently to the notice of Government, but no attempt has been made to classify them in any order of merit.

COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. Bourdillon, C.S.I., was Commissioner of the Patna Division, where the brunt of the famine was felt. He administered famine relief with conspicuous ability, zeal, energy and devotion. Feeling absolute confidence in his ability and discretion, I gave him a very free hand in dealing with details, and my trust was amply justified. He never failed to keep me fully informed of all that occurred, and carried out all orders and instructions in the most loyal and intelligent way.

Mr. Forbes, C.S.I., was Commissioner of the Chota Nagpur Division where, though the numbers on relief were never large, constant anxiety was felt owing to the extremely high prices that prevailed, and the wild and scattered character of the population. Mr. Forbes worked zealously and successfully, and showed resource in meeting the various difficulties of the situation as they arose.

Mr. Oldham, C.I.E., was Commissioner of the Bhagalpur Division. He met such distress as prevailed efficiently and with economy.

The Commissioners of other Divisions where distress to some extent existed, although not so acute as in the Divisions above named, also generally performed their duties satisfactorily. There was, however, some want of control in the case of the Presidency Division.

COLLECTORS.

PATNA DIVISION.

Messrs. D. Macpherson, C.I.E., and Carlyle, C.I.E., were the Collectors of the two most distressed districts, Champaran and Darbhanga. Both of them displayed great energy, executive ability, and devotion to duty. Mr. Macpherson's report on the famine in Champaran is a remarkably complete and able paper.

Mr. Hare was Collector of Muzaffarpur, and, though suffering from indifferent health, laboured incessantly and successfully. He exercised the most rigid economy without permitting the sacrifice of life. His only fault was that, feeling himself strong, he failed in some degree to keep his Commissioner fully acquainted with the circumstances of his district and his modus operandi.

Mr. Maude succeeded Mr. Hare and carried the operations to an end with complete success.

Mr. Earle was Collector of Saran, and laboured with so much devotion that his health broke down and he was invalided to Europe. He was succeeded by Mr. Chapman, who administered the district satisfactorily.

Messrs. Marindin and Windsor, who were Collectors of Shahabad, carried out relief operations in that district with judgment and economy.

CHOTA NAGPUR DIVISION.

Mr. Renny, as Deputy Commissioner of Palamau, was confronted with peculiar difficulties which he met with a fair measure of energy and success.

Mr. Herald, Deputy Commissioner of Hazaribagh, gave unremitting attention to the relief operations, which he organised with much ability.

Mr. Streatfeild, although the district of Lohardagga was not officially distressed, dealt with the difficulties due to high prices and declining food-stocks in an energetic and creditable manner.

Mr. Luson, who was in charge of the Manbhum district at the beginning of the famine operations, showed ability and energy in forecasting the requirements of the district and in making preliminary arrangements.

Mr. Maguire, who succeeded him, brought them to a successful termination

PRESIDENCY DIVISION.

Mr. Garrett at Nadia may, owing to his strong feeling of sympathy with the distressed people, have given gratuitous relief too freely, but in spite of failing health he worked with unceasing energy and zeal, and on the whole with success.

Mr. Vincent at Khulna and Mr. Levinge at Murshidabad showed sound judgment and administered their districts with ability, care and economy.

BHAGALPUR DIVISION.

Mr. McIntosh administered the relief operations in the district of Bhagalpur with conspicuous success.

Mr. Carstairs, although handicapped by heavy judicial duties, maintained a thoroughly efficient control over the operations in progress.

BURDWAN DIVISION.

Mr. Manisty, Collector of Bankura, administered relief with care and efficiency.

JUNIOR OFFICERS

The names of the following junior officers of the Civil Service, who are named in the order of seniority, have been favourably brought to the notice of Government:—

Mr. Wheeler.
„ Gruning.
Mr. Smither.
„ Coupland.
Mr. Blackwood.

The Commissioned Officers whose services were lent by the Military Department did excellent work which was of the greatest value. Among them the following were conspicuous:—

Lieutenant Kaye.
The late Lieutenant Battye.
Lieutenant Cassels.
Lieutenant Hudson.

To the non-commissioned officers and men both of the British and Native Army the acknowledgments of Government are due for their excellent work, performed at the most trying time of the year, and frequently under circumstances of great personal discomfort.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

Among the officers of the Public Works Department, the thanks of Government are especially due to the Hon'ble Mr. Glass, C.I.E., to whose friendly advice and able suggestions the Civil Department was greatly indebted, and who organised the system of works under his own department with marked ability.

Mr. Mills, as Superintendent of Works, worked with much zeal and ability.

Mr. Toogood rendered good service in the same capacity.

Among Executive Engineers, Mr. Disney was indefatigable and showed much efficiency.

Mr. Sealy did admirable work in connection with the Trebeni Canal.

Rai K. C. Banerjee was in charge of a difficult division, but succeeded well and was unremitting in his exertions.

Mr. Long did excellent work with great energy.

Mr. Stawell carried out the railway surveys in an expeditious and satisfactory manner.

Among the officers of the Royal Engineers whose services were lent by the Government of India, the work of the following deserves especial recognition:—

Lieutenant Close.
„ Biddulph.
Lieutenant Pridham.
Sub-Lieutenant Elles.
„ Tillard.
Sub-Lieutenant Freeland.

Among District Engineers, who worked as such during the famine, Mr. Edwards, Mr. Robinson, Babu Nando Gopal Bannerjee, Babu Nabo Gopal Bannerjee, and Babu Dwarka Nath Sarkar worked with energy and ability.

Of the Assistant District Superintendents of Police whose services were lent for famine duty, Messrs. Boxwell and Bradley deserve commendation.

The names of the following officers of the Executive Branch of the Provincial Civil Service have been brought prominently to the notice of Government:—

Mr. Piffard.
Babu Jnan Sankar Sen.
Babu Gati Krishna Neogy.
Mr. Nitya Gopal Mukerji.
Babu Jnanendra Nath Laheri.
Mr. Devendra Nath Mookerji.

NON-OFFICIAL.

Among the non-official gentlemen who were employed as Charge Superintendents, Mr. Still and Mr. Simmonds managed their charges with marked success. Mr. Still was in charge of the most distressed part of Champaran and rendered very valuable service. I am under special obligation to him.

The assistance rendered by the planting community of Bihar has already been publicly recognised, and where so many came forward, seniors and juniors alike, to offer their services gratuitously to Government, at the sacrifice of much time and personal convenience, with no motive but a sense of duty and loyalty to the administration, the mention of individual names would be invidious. I desire once more to thank the whole of these gentlemen. At the outset I expressed my confidence in their willingness and readiness to help, and I was not disappointed.

The efforts of private zamindars and gentlemen in the cause of charity have been described in the report upon the famine operations for the work of the Provincial Committee of the Charitable Relief Fund. Preeminent for his liberality and personal desire that every possible relief should be afforded, stands the Maharaja Bahadur of Darbhanga, who was ably assisted by his Manager, Mr. H. Bell. The munificence of this great landowner relieved the Government of the care of a large tract of country. I inspected several of the Raj works, and was struck by the completeness of organization, and the intimate personal knowledge of the circumstances of the villages possessed by the staff. The names of the following zamindars who all to the extent of their ability rendered assistance to their tenantry, are also deserving of special mention:—

The Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad.
The Maharaja Bahadur of Sonbursa.
The late Maharani Surnomoyee of Murshidabad.
The Maharani of Bettiah, through her Manager, Mr. Lewis.
The Maharani of Hatwah, through her Manager, Mr. Buskin, and his assistant, Babu Bepin Behari Bose.
Raja Ram Ranjan Chakravarty Bahadur of Hetampur.
The Raja Bahadur of Banaili.
Raja Thakurai Bhagwat Dyal Singh of Chainpur.
Rani Makhan Kumari of Lachmipur.
Rani Kesobati Kumari of Hendue.
Rai Thakurai Gobind Prasad Singh Bahadur of Ranka.
Rai Ganpat Singh Bahadur and his brother Babu Narpat Singh.
Hon'ble Justice Chandra Madhab Ghose.
Mr. Grant.
Babu Hari Charan Chandra of Nakipur.

SECRETARIAT.

The officer who above all others deserves credit for his work in connection with the famine is the Revenue Secretary to Government, the Hon'ble Mr. M. Finucane, C.S.I. Not only has he carried on almost single-handed the vast mass of correspondence connected with the operations, but his knowledge of Bihar, and of the agricultural conditions of both Bihar and Bengal, his intimate acquaintance with the histories of past famines there and elsewhere, his fertility of resource, and remarkable power of work, have been simply invaluable to me, as they were to my locum tenens, the Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens, C.S.I. I tender to Mr. Finucane my heartfelt thanks for his unceasing and unselfish devotion and assistance.

Mr. Konstam, as Under-Secretary in the Revenue Department, rendered much good service and gave Mr. Finucane all the assistance in his power.

My acknowledgments are also due to the Secretariat Establishment and the Press, both of which were frequently working under great pressure.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh	46,905,685
Punjab	20,866,847
Central Provinces	10,784,294
Total	78,556,226

An account is given in the following narrative of the famine which visited the Lower Provinces of Bengal during the years 1896 and 1897. The total area of these Provinces, excluding Tributary and Native States, is 151,535 square miles, with a population, according to the Census of 1891, of 71,346,961 souls—a population equal to nine-tenths of that of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab, and the Central Provinces put together. Though the pressure of high prices, due to the short outturn everywhere of the crops of 1896 and to the general distress in other parts of India, caused suffering throughout the vast extent of those Provinces, to all who were dependent on small fixed incomes, to the labouring classes, and to those who subsist in ordinary times on private charity, distress amounting to famine was officially declared to exist in an area of 27,981 square miles only, with a population of 13,245,000 souls, as detailed below :—

THE FAMINE OF 1874 AND SCARCITIES BETWEEN THEN AND 1896-97.

The last great famine that visited these Provinces was that of 1873-74, and since then there have been four years of local scarcity.

Local extent of the famine of 1874.

In 1873-74 severe distress prevailed throughout an area of 20,950 square miles, with a population of 10,700,000, and to a less extent distress in an area of 19,159 square miles, with a population of 7,064,630. The districts of Hazaribagh, Palamau, Khulna, and Puri, in all or parts of which famine prevailed last year, were not affected in 1873-74, while on the other hand, among districts which escaped during the recent famine, Purnea, Dinajpur, Rangpur, and Bogra suffered severely in 1873-74, and Monghyr, Gaya, Malda, Rajshahi, Pabna, Jalpaiguri, Burdwan, and Birbhum in a lesser degree. With these exceptions the other districts affected during 1873-74 were again visited by famine in 1896-97.

Scarcity of 1875-76.

In 1875-76 the early cessation of the rains caused a serious failure of the rice crop over a considerable area in Dinajpur, throughout the Sitamarhi and Madhubani subdivisions of Tirhut, and in the extreme north of the Supaul subdivision in the district of Bhagalpur, although relief operations were eventually found necessary only in the Madhubani and Supaul subdivisions.

Scarcity of 1885-86.

The next year of deficient rainfall and short crops was 1885-86, when anxiety was felt with regard to certain parts of the districts of Bogra, Nadia, Murshidabad, Malda, Gaya, Patna, Burdwan Birbhum, and Bankura, but eventually relief operations were undertaken in an area of about 1,000 square miles only in the districts of Bankura, Burdwan and Birbhum. On these operations, which lasted from May till November 1885, a total expenditure of Rs. 1,96,000 was incurred, the highest number in receipt of relief at any one time being 22,172 at the end of June.

Scarcity of 1887-88.

The rainfall of 1887-88 was unfavourably distributed throughout the Province, and pressure was felt almost everywhere. The chief seat of distress was a strip of some 1,000 square miles in area, extending along the Nipal frontier through the districts of Champaran, Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, and the Supaul subdivision of Bhagalpur. The deficiency of rainfall during the important months of September and October caused a serious failure of the winter rice crop, while the cold-weather crops were poor. Relief operations were commenced early in January, and at the worst period of distress in the end of May the numbers on relief were about 46,000. The rainfall when it came was excessive, causing floods which aggravated the situation, and the last relief centres were not closed till the end of October. The total expenditure on relief works and gratuitous relief from Government and district funds, including some operations on a small scale in the districts of Gaya and the Sonthal Parganas, amounted to about Rs. 5,00,000, and about Rs. 1,50,000 was spent on relief by private individuals, mostly by the Darbhanga Raj. There was some distress also requiring relief in the Tributary Mahals of Orissa and in the districts of Balasore, Midnapore, and Murshidabad.

Scarcity of 1891-92.

The last scarcity preceding the famine of 1896-97 which necessitated State relief, was that of 1891-92, when the irregularities in the monsoon during September and October 1891 and the absence of the winter rains caused much damage to the winter rice and rabi crops. Relief operations were conducted from January to August in parts of the districts of Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, Monghyr, Bhagalpur, Purnea and Dinajpur, comprising a total area of 5,710 square miles, with a population of 2,531,535 persons The largest numbers on relief on any one day in the several districts amounted to 83,016 on relief works and 4,699 on gratuitous relief, and the total cost of the relief operations amounted to Rs. 4,84,113.

In 1895-96 the rice crop was again short, in the Patna Division especially, but Government relief was not found to be necessary.

Famine of 1896-97.

Object of comparison with that of 1873-74.

The famine of 1896-97, in its main features—in its causes, extent, intensity, development, and in the rise and fall of numbers in receipt of State relief—resembles to a great extent the famine of 1873-74, but here the analogy ceases: the methods adopted for relieving distress, the cost, and in a large degree the moral effects on the people, of the operations of 1896-97 have been largely different from those of the famine of 1873-74. In both famines alike the paramount object of all famine relief administration, namely, the saving of human beings from death by starvation, has been fully attained, but on the present occasion at a greatly reduced cost, aggregating only a sixth part of that incurred by the State in 1873-74.

If in this narrative comparisons are instituted between the methods and results of the administration of famine relief in 1873-74 and those of 1896-97, and conclusions are drawn that may appear favourable to the methods and results of the recent operations, it is not because it is claimed that the administrators of to-day are superior to their predecessors, to whom belongs the credit of showing for the first time how a widespread Indian famine could be successfully grappled with; but because the inferences are suggested that, as the results of the experience of 1873-74 and subsequent famines, of the labours of the Famine Commission, and of the more minute knowledge of the agricultural economy of the country since attained, greatly-improved methods of famine administration have been devised, and that, owing to the extension of railways, spread of communications, and the general advance of these provinces in material prosperity, the powers of the people to resist the effects of calamity of seasons have largely increased. It is with a view to call attention to and emphasise these inferences that comparisons will be made on suitable occasions in the following narrative between the famines of 1897 and 1874. Though the administrators of famine relief in 1874, in a great undertaking of unprecedented character, with no previous experience to guide them, may have committed mistakes and erred on the side of excessive liberality, they were at all events conspicuously successful in saving life, and left behind them traditions among the people of confidence in the will and power of Government to rescue them from the horrors of starvation. The administrators of to-day had the advantage of the experience of 1874 and of subsequent famines; and if it be true that equal success has been attained in saving life at a smaller cost, it should be always remembered, as Sir Richard Temple remarked at the time, that many things had then to be accomplished, the like of which had never been attempted before. Nothing can be more pleasing to those who were responsible for the administration of relief in 1874, than to find that a failure of crops equal to that of 1874, resulting from an equal deficiency and more unfavourable distribution of rainfall, and attended by higher prices of food-grains, was met in 1897 by an outlay of little more than one crore of rupees, against one of six crores in 1874, as nothing would be more agreeable to Sir Alexander Mackenzie and those who have shared with him in the labours of the famine of 1897, than to learn 20 years hence, in the event of the occurrence of a similar calamity of season, that in the interval between the present and that time the material prosperity of the people had so advanced that the calamity had been met by an outlay of one-sixth of that incurred in the recent famine. Indeed, the Lieutenant-Governor sees in the events of the past year reason to hope that Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa may have now seen the last of the great famines. If with a failure of crops, which, according to all authorities possessing personal knowledge of these provinces (and who alone are in a position to form a judgment in the matter) was as great as any of this century, and with unprecedentedly high prices, human life has been saved throughout the vast territories subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, at an outlay of one crore of rupees to the State, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks it is not too much to expect, as time goes on, and the condition of the people of these provinces continues to improve, as it undoubtedly has improved in the past quarter of a century, that they will be able to meet any calamity that is ever likely to occur in the future with an increasingly diminished expenditure from State funds.

CHAPTER I.

THE ECONOMIC CONDITION OF THE AFFECTED TRACTS.

In order to understand the effects of any given degree of crop failure in a particular area, it is clearly necessary that regard should be had to the normal economic condition of the people of that locality.

The Patna Division.

It was the Patna Division, with its area of 23,691 square miles and population in 1891 of 15,815,121, mainly agricultural, with an average density of 667 persons to the square mile, including hills, jungles and waste, or 943 to the square mile, on the average cultivated area of the last five years, in which the most acute distress was felt. The Division is separated by the river Ganges into two parts of almost equal area, the three districts of Patna, Gaya, and Shahabad forming what is generally known as South Bihar, while the four districts of Saran, Champaran, Muzaffarpur, and Darbhanga constitute North Bihar. This great Division extends over an area nearly equal to half of England, and has a population almost as large as that of the whole of the Bombay Presidency, and 50 per cent. greater than that of the whole of the Central Provinces or of Ireland, Scotland and Wales put together. The greater part of this area is a highly cultivated alluvial plain rising into wooded hills on the south, where it is bounded by the outlying ranges of the Chota Nagpur plateau, and on the north sloping gently upwards to the foot hills of the Himalayas. Besides the Ganges, and in addition to streams of less importance, three great rivers pass through the Division—the Sone on the south, and the Gogra and Gandak on the north. In ordinary conditions of favourable rainfall, the Division, excluding the tracts of hill and forest, is a region of extraordinary fertility inhabited by some of the most industrious husbandmen in India. In all districts of this Division, though of varying importance in each, three harvests are reaped in the year. The rain crops, known as bhadoi, including some kinds of rice, maize, and many of the millets; (2) the main winter rice or aghani crop; and (3) the cold-weather or rabi crops, comprising the principal cereals of Northern India, such as wheat, barley, and oats, and pulses; oilseeds, sugarcane, tobacco, and cotton form valuable crops, which are also extensively cultivated. In North Bihar, and to a small extent south of the Ganges, indigo cultivation gives employment to thousands of labourers, and brings large sums of money into circulation among the cultivators, while poppy is largely grown everywhere, except in Darbhanga, on a system of advances made by Government.

Economic condition of the Patna Division.

In spite of these advantages, the material condition of the people in Bihar generally is considerably below what it is in other divisions of the Lower Provinces. Wages are low, rents high, and population, under the favourable influences of universal early marriage and a comparatively salubrious climate, extremely dense, and, owing in a great measure to its density, poor and badly fed. The population is almost entirely agricultural, while holdings are small and greatly subdivided, resulting in a large class of agricultural poor, who supplement the profits from their petty holdings by working for hire, and thus swell the ranks of the labourers for wages. The brunt of the famine of 1896-97 fell upon the four districts of North Bihar, especially the northern rice-growing subdivisions of Champaran, Muzaffarpur, and Darbhanga, along the line of the Nipal frontier. This is the zone which was described by Sir Richard Temple as the "blackest of the black spots in the famine map." In 1880 the Famine Commissioners, speaking of the people of North Bihar, described them as "a tenantry very ignorant, very helpless, sunk in the most abject poverty," while, again in 1883, the Government of India in a despatch to the Secretary of State remarked that "the evidence before us of the depressed and precarious condition of the people in that part of the country is full and conclusive." Sir Antony MacDonnell in 1893 wrote of this tract:—

"Distress, rumours of distress, and starting of relief works are ever-recurring characteristics of the local officers' annual reports. In the year under review (i.e., 1892-93), owing to widespread failure of the preceding year's rice and rabi crops, relief works had to be opened in the second week of March in Darbhanga and Muzaffarpur. By the middle of May no less than 22,000 people were on these relief works in Darbhanga and 6,360 in Muzaffarpur, while by the end of the first week of June the numbers rose to 43,470 in the former and 14,147 in the latter district. Had the rains of 1891-92 not been favourable as they happily were on the whole, 'there is no doubt,' Mr. Forbes (the Commissioner) remarks, 'that famine would have at once crushed down upon these districts.' The material condition of the people in Darbhanga and Muzaffarpur, especially during the first few month of the year, was, the Commissioner says, reduced to a low ebb, and their physical condition fell off in a marked degree; and this, Mr. Forbes adds, was particularly noticeable among the children. Though there were no deaths reported from actual starvation, the mortality among the old and infirm necessarily increased for want of proper nutrition. The Collector of Darbhanga, Mr. Williams, says:—'There can be no doubt that had the authorities not come to the rescue, the deaths from actual want of food would have been numerous.'"

As shown in the preceding paragraphs, there has scarcely ever been a year of distress or scarcity in any part of these provinces during which North Bihar did not suffer. It suffered badly in 1866 and 1874, and in a lesser degree in 1875-76, 1885-86, 1887-88 and 1891-92, the intervening years of distress preceding the present famine. But though the material condition of the people in Bihar was, as described by Sir Richard Temple to the Famine Commission, lower in his time than that of any part of India that he had seen, and though their condition still gives and must, for some time to come, continue to give ground for anxiety, yet much has been done to improve it since Sir Richard Temple's day. In 1874 only one railway (the East Indian) passed through the Division south of the Ganges: roads either did not exist or if they did exist were rough and unbridged; there was little or no irrigation from canals; tenants' rights were insecure, and oppressions and abuses of various kinds were rampant. Now there is not a single district and scarcely a subdivision of a district in the Division which is not served by railways; excellent roads ramify everywhere, tenants' rights have been secured by the operation of the Tenancy Act, and the knowledge of their rights is being brought home to the cultivators by means of the record of rights, which is approaching completion; some canals have been made, and what was for these causes à priori likely, namely, that the power of resisting the effects of crop failure should have increased, has been proved to be a fact by the events of 1897 narrated in the following chapters. But notwithstanding these improvements the position of the people of these parts being still precarious, it is not surprising in a year of abnormal rainfall and resultant crop failure, following, as in the recent famine, upon a year of seriously short crops, that a considerable portion of the population were unable to fall back upon the accumulated stocks of previous years to tide them over the temporary crisis. This, however, is a subject which will be treated more at length in the next chapter.

The economic condition of the distressed areas is described more in detail in the following paragraphs of this chapter:—

South Bihar.

The only districts of Bihar which escaped the stress of famine were those of Patna and Gaya.* In Patna the rainfall was not so deficient as elsewhere, while the whole of the western border of Gaya is protected by the Sone Canals, from which in 1896-97 some 53,000 acres were irrigated. Similarly, on the western border of Patna, some 54,000 acres were irrigated from the Sone Canal system. Elsewhere in Gaya and in the Bihar subdivision of Patna, the country is intersected with streams flowing from the Chota Nagpur plateau, the water of which, with the natural rainfall and drainage, is conserved in an elaborate system of ahars or reservoirs, to be subsequently conducted through a network of channels to the fields. Communications in both districts have been greatly improved since 1874, and are now excellent, and the fears which were at one time entertained regarding certain local areas in the Patna and Gaya districts, eventually proved groundless, no relief measures being found necessary except among the beggars and pilgrims who came from elsewhere and were found wandering along the Grand Trunk Road.

The rain failure in Shahabad* was greater than in Patna or Gaya, but the Sone canal system protects the greater part of the Sasaram subdivision, the south of the Buxar subdivision, and much of the Sadar. Moreover, these parts of Shahabad contain a substantial and sturdy yeoman tenantry, known as guzashtadars, who have always been tenacious of their ancient agricultural rights and customs, and have succeeded in maintaining them. Eventually no portion of this district turned out to be actually distressed except the extreme south-west corner, comprising the Bhabua subdivision and a part of that of Sasaram. The whole of the southern part of the Bhabua subdivision, and much of the southern portion of Sasaram is occupied by the Kaimor range of hills, an undulating plateau, for the most part covered with forest, with an area of 700 square miles and about 20,000 population. There is little provision here for water-supply, and the crops are poor and precarious, depending almost entirely on the rains. Food-supplies have to be brought up from the plains through difficult passes, which, always impassable for wheeled traffic, become closed even to pack animals when the monsoon once sets in. The remainder of the distressed tract in this district comprised the plains part of the Bhabhua subdivision and the Chenari outpost in Sasaram. Of this, the portion falling north of the Grand Trunk Road was not severely affected, but distress was much more acute in the portion south of the Grand Trunk Road, between it and the hills, where the rice was almost a total failure, and there is little or no irrigation. The people, too, are inexpert cultivators and of poor physique.

*SHAHABAD—
Area, 4,373 square miles.
Population, 2,060,579.

Of the four districts of North Bihar, Saran† is the most densely populated and closely cultivated. It is a fertile triangle of rich alluvial soil washed on two sides by the Gogra, Ganges, and Gandak. It possesses a system of canals, so called, which are of little practical value, but it is pitted with numerous wells which are largely used for irrigation by an adroit and industrious husbandry. Its crops are divided almost equally among the three great harvests of the year, and a total crop failure is therefore practically impossible. It is always an importing district, and the bringing in of outside grain is an operation well understood by the local merchants, while the home remittances of its numerous inhabitants who migrate in the winter months in search of employment, and the money circulated by opium and indigo cultivation, increase the staying power of its inhabitants. Under these circumstances general distress was averted, and what distress there was varied according to the local conditions of the tracts affected, being severe where the rice crop predominated and less acute where rabi and bhadoi crops were more extensively grown. The distress was worst in the Gopalganj subdivision, but about two-thirds of the Siwan subdivision and half the Sadar subdivision were also badly affected.

†SARAN—
Area, 2,656 square miles.
Population, 2,465,065.

Practically the whole of the Champaran‡ district was affected. The eastern and southern portions of the district are fairly fertile, but the northern and western portions are thinly populated, and contain a large proportion of hill and jungle. The normal rainfall is high, and the raiyats are averse to adapting themselves to the needs of irrigation in periods of drought. The prevalence of fever and malaria has also lowered the general standard of physique. The worst affected areas were a tract roughly corresponding to the Dhaka thana, where the failure of the rain was more complete and rice the principal crop; and a tract of about 430 square miles in the north-west of the Bettiah subdivision, around Ramnagar and including the thanas of Bagaha and Hardih. The population in the latter area is scanty, the soil poor, and the cultivators thriftless and ignorant. Communications in the district as a whole are not so good as elsewhere, and about Ramnagar are specially deficient. This tract was the last in the district to recover.

‡CHAMPARAN—
Area, 3,531 square miles.
Population, 1,859,465.

The Muzaffarpur* district is an alluvial tract of great fertility, especially in the southern subdivision of Hajipur, and much irrigation is possible from streams which cross it diagonally from north-west to south-east. Its weakness lies in the concentration of the rice cultivation in the Sitamarhi subdivision and north of the district generally, to the exclusion in great part of other crops which might be relied on should the rice fail. The whole district was affected by distress except the extreme south of the Hajipur subdivision, where the rainfall was heavier and the soil is fertile, rabi and bhadoi crops being extensively grown, and the general class of cultivators very industrious. The portions worst affected were the Sitamarhi subdivision and the northern half of the Sadar subdivision, where rice is the preponderating crop and the failure of it was a more serious matter than where other crops are also cultivated. Strips along the Adhaura, Lakhandai, and Bagmati rivers were saved by irrigation, but the rest of the Sadar subdivision and the north of the Hajipur subdivison also suffered severely.

* MUZAFFARPUR—
Area, 3,004 square miles.
Population, 2,712,857.

The Darbhanga† district is in many parts the counterpart of Muzaffarpur, although the proportion of rice land is greater. In the Samastipur subdivision to the south, there is a tract of great fertility, comprised in the Dalsing Serai and Samastipur thanas, which received almost its normal rainfall, like Hajipur to the west of it. North of this the distressed area commenced, comprising, with the exception of a few isolated areas, the whole of rest of the district and the Sadar and Madhubani subdivisions. As in Muzaffarpur, the great rice tracts lie to north, and here the distress was most conspicuous and serious.

† DARBHANGA—
Area, 3,335 square miles.
Population, 2,801,955.

Communications in North Bihar generally.

Throughout North Bihar the roads are numerous, and were greatly extended and improved by the famine relief operations of 1874, and since then by the operations of the District Boards, Champaran being the only district which leaves much to be desired in this respect. The Bengal and North-Western Railway in Saran and the Tirhut State Railway in the other districts bring most areas within moderately easy reach of the line, the tracts which are worst provided for being the extreme north-west of Champaran and the north of the Madhubani subdivision and south-east of the Sadar subdivision in Darbhanga. The Gandak and Gogra afford a waterway for the ordinary country boats, and as a whole the state of communications is excellent.

Bhagalpur Division.

Coming now to the adjoining Division of Bhagalpur, the distressed areas were limited to the districts of Bhagalpur and the Sonthal Parganas.

The district of Bhagalpur‡ is divided naturally by the river Ganges into the North Gangetic and South Gangetic tracts. To the south of the river, although distress was at one time apprehended in certain local areas and test-relief works were opened in April and May, they failed to show any demand for labour, and eventually what distress there was, was met by expenditure from charitable funds. North of the river the distress was more acute, and relief operations on a considerable scale were required in a tract of some 500 square miles, with a population of 325,000, situated partly in the Supaul and partly in the Madhipura subdivisions; the distress was most severe on the western border of the district adjoining Darbhanga. This is the old famine area of the Bhagalpur district; the soil is poor and winter rice the chief crop, while indigo cultivation, at one time extensive, has practically died out. The social conditions are peculiar; the variety of castes among a population wholly agricultural is small, and the bulk of the cultivators are Maithili Brahmans and Rajputs, who will not work themselves and look to the low-caste Jolahas and Musahars as day-labourers for the cultivation of their fields. Alms they will not accept, and while clamorous for loans, they made it a complaint that their labourers had gone elsewhere to earn wages they could no longer themselves afford to give.

‡ BHAGALPUR—
Area, 4,226 square miles.
Population, 2,032,696.

In the Sonthal Parganas* two tracts in the south-west of the district were declared affected, the one in the Jamtara subdivision—covering some 367 square miles, with a population of 93,000, and the other the whole of the Deoghur subdivision, comprising 954 square miles and a population of 284,114. The country is undulating, with fertile valleys interspersed with uplands of poor soil and forest, and the streams which traverse it are mere mountain torrents. The population, largely aboriginal, with a marked aversion for regular work, subsists almost wholly on agriculture, the all-important crop being the winter rice; spring crops are of small importance, and the bhadoi crops are in less proportion than elsewhere. Outside these areas distress in the Damin tract of the Rajmahal subdivision, and in the Godda subdivision generally, was met by charitable relief only.

* SONTHAL PARGANAS—
Area, 5,470 square miles.
Population, 1,754,000.

Chota Nagpur Division.

In the Chota Nagpur Division, with an area of 26,966 square miles and a sparse population of about 4,500,000 souls, the three districts of Palamau, Manbhum, and Hazaribagh were severely affected. In Lohardaga, though never officially declared affected, relief operations on a small scale were carried on for a few months, and test works were opened in Singhbhum, but were not attended in any numbers. The physical aspect of the division as a whole is that of an area broken with hills, rising in places to 4,000 feet and more above sea-level, and interspersed with cultivated valleys of more or less fertility. The centre of this area is occupied by the Ranchi plateau, an undulating tableland about 4,500 miles in extent, and at an elevation of 2,100 feet. From this, except to the west, where the high lands run on into the Native States, there is a general fall in the level of the country. To the north, after an abrupt fall to the valley of the Damudar, the level rises to the Hazaribagh plateau, a similar, though smaller, table-land of about 600 square miles in extent. To the north-west lies the district of Palamau, a tangled mass of broken hills and more or less open valleys. To the east and south lie the districts of Manbhum and Singhbhum. The northern and eastern portions of Manbhum are open, and consist of a series of rolling downs; to the south and west the country is more broken, though generally the district lies lower than either Lohardaga, Hazaribagh, or Palamau. In Singhbhum, too, to the north and east of the district the elevation is smaller and the country fertile; on the south the country rises to an extensive elevated plateau, 1,000 feet above sea-level, while to the west lies a wild mountainous tract inhabited for the most part by aboriginal tribes.

The railway and other communications throughout this vast area are generally poor. The Bengal-Nagpur Railway bisects the Manbhum district and passes through that of Singhbhum, while branch lines of the East Indian Railway tap the Gobindpur subdivision of the Manbhum and the Giridih subdivision in Hazaribagh. The rest of the Division is completely isolated, Ranchi in Lohardaga and the station of Hazaribagh being each 75 miles from the line of rail, and Daltonganj in Palamau 100 miles from the nearest station in Gaya. Internal traffic is for the most part carried on by bullock cart and pack-bullocks over rough country roads. About two-thirds of the population subsist on agriculture, and about one-sixth are unskilled labourers, known locally as Kamias, many of whom are practically serfs. They are especially numerous in Manbhum. Cotton-spinning and weaving, and in the Giridih and Gobindpur subdivisions, coal-mining, give employment to a considerable section of the population.

Taking the Division as a whole, the rice crop yields about two-thirds of the food-supply, the bhadoi crops about one-fourth, and the rabi crops not more than one-twelfth with varying proportions in individual districts. A considerable part, however, of the food-supply consists in the edible forest products, which are resorted to largely everywhere as a supplement to the ordinary diet. The most important of these products is the flower of the mahua tree, but a large variety of jungle fruits and roots are eaten both cooked and raw. This diet, though sufficient to sustain life, is deleterious if unaccompanied by rice or other grain, yet the aboriginal and semi-aboriginal tribes, who form a considerable portion of the population, are content to eke out a scanty subsistence upon it in their native jungles rather than do anything in the nature of a "task" upon relief works. Consequently, though the numbers on relief in the Division were at no time large, there was more anxiety felt on its account than elsewhere. The inaccessible character of the country and the range of prices, which here reached a higher level than in any other portion of the Province, combined with the scattered character of the population and the restless and independent nature of the forest tribes, gave rise to grave fears lest the food-supplies should fail and the people die in the jungles rather than resort to the relief works; and although only a few actual deaths from starvation are reported to have occurred, yet there is reason to apprehend that the sufferings of the poorer classes have been greater in this Division than elsewhere.

The area of the affected tracts in Hazaribagh* extended to about 1,750 square miles, or about a quarter of the district, with a population of about 200,000. Irrigation exists on a very small scale, and the crops depend almost entirely upon a favourable distribution of the rainfall. Even in ordinary times the economic condition of the tract is not much raised above the boundary line between comfort and distress. Road communications are good, but importation of grain is not resorted to to an appreciable extent, high prices being the immediate result of any failure of the local food-crops.

* HAZARIBAGH—
Area, 7,021 square miles.
Population, 1,164,321.

In the Palamau† district the most distressed area covered about 2,563 square miles, with a population of 383,440 souls, and was comprised in a broad tract running from east to west through the centre of the district; to the north and south the distress was less acute. Trade is mostly local and with surrounding districts, and on a petty scale, while communications are exceptionally poor, communication by railway, water, or metalled roads being alike non-existent.

† PALAMAU—
Area, 4,912 square miles.
Population, 596,770.

In Manbhum‡ the whole district, with the exception of two thanas, was affected, or an area of 3,373 square miles and population of 991,097. The affected tracts are all agrarian, and one-fourth of the population is dependent on unskilled labour, the class who are the first to suffer when prices rise. The soil of the up-lands is for the most part hard, dry, ferruginous gravel, with good fertile alluvial soil in the lower levels. Though in ordinary years in the Gobindpur subdivision and in the Jhalda thana in the Sadar, there is a considerable business in coal and lac, the people for the most part depend upon the produce of their fields.

Burdwan Division.

In the Burdwan Division only one district—that of Bankura§—was affected, where the distressed area comprised 1,053 square miles, with a population of 413,000 The country affected was for the most part undulating hill and jungle, resembling the adjoining district of Manbhum. The population is poor, comprising many Sonthals, although in Raipur thana there are a good many substantial Utkal Brahman raiyats, who will do no field-work themselves. Road communications are generally fair, except in Raipur thana. The only considerable food-crop is the winter rice.

Presidency Division.

In the Presidency Division famine was declared in parts of the districts of Nadia, Khulna, and Murshidabad. Although gratuitous and charitable relief was distributed and a few small works opened for a short time in the district of Jessore, distress was never officially declared there.

In the district of Nadia‖ the portion known as the Kalantar was the first affected, and subsequently the Meherpur subdivision and the western portions of the Kushtia and Chuadanga subdivisions. The total distressed area covered some 1,182 square miles, containing a population of 625,840, while in the famine of 1873-74 distress had been practically confined to the Kalantar, or 528 square miles. In the affected area two classes of soil are clearly marked: the low level areas of black clay soil, subject to inundation and bearing the aman paddy, and the high level areas of light sandy soil, growing aus paddy and rabi crops. For the district as a whole, the early or aus paddy is of far more importance than the winter rice. Practically the whole population live on the land. As a body they are poor and indebted, dependent for their food-supply on their own stocks and on petty banyas. There is no grain trade on a large scale, and importation is hampered by bad communications. A bad system of land tenure known as utbandi prevails, under which system the cultivators are mere tenants-at-will. They change the lands they cultivate at pleasure from year to year, pay rent only for the plots they may choose to cultivate, and acquire no occupancy rights in them.

In the famine of 1873-74 the affected area in the district of Murshidabad* had lain in a tract west of the Bhagirathi, known as the Rarh, where winter rice is almost the only crop grown, but during the recent famine distress prevailed chiefly on the east of the Bhagirathi, with only a narrow strip in the Kandi subdivision on the west. The chief crops here are the early rice, followed by a cold-weather crop, but in the Kalantar in the south-east of the district, which is liable to floods, the winter rice is the only crop. The total extent of the affected area was 205 square miles, with a population of 120,000.

* MURSHIDABAD—
Area, 2,143 square miles.
Population, 1,250,946.

The affected area in the district of Khulna,† comprising 474 square miles, with a population of 276,000, lay almost entirely in the Satkhira subdivision and in the Paikgacha thana in the Sadar subdivision. The feature of this part of the country is the network of tidal rivers and channels which intersect it in every direction. The river Jamuna with its continuation, the Kalindri, and the Kolpetua, and the Kabadak, with their tributaries, all traverse this part of the country and debouch into the Bay of Bengal, with numerous tortuous water-ways as connecting links between them. From December to the end of June as a rule the river water remains salt, but after the rains have set in, the salt water is usually driven beyond the limits of cultivation by the volume of the fresh rain water and drainage coming down. In a year of abnormally short rainfall, on the other hand, the river water remains more or less salt throughout the rains, with most prejudicial results to the winter rice crop. The river banks are almost invariably higher than the country they enclose, and are cut by numerous little inlets by which the water penetrates to the lands within. With the rising of the spring tides in January it becomes necessary to dam up these inlets and surround the cultivated lands with embankments sufficiently high to keep out the incursions of the tides. When with the coming of the rains the river water becomes sweeter, it is usual to admit it by the removal of the dams. For the cultivation of the rice crop two things are essential—dams and embankments of sufficient strength to keep out the salt spring tides, and sufficient rainfall to sweeten the rivers at the end of June that their water may be used for irrigation. Khulna has usually been regarded as a district safe from famine, but an unusual combination of adverse circumstances produced partial local distress in 1896-97. Unfortunately the inhabitants are mostly illiterate and improvident; the zamindars are absentees and generally indifferent, while the subordinate tenure-holders are small men and impoverished. Embankments were permitted to go out of repair, thus allowing salt water to percolate into the fields to the gradual deterioration of the soil, while in 1895 a storm-wave swept over the distressed tract, leaving a deposit of saline matter which the short rainfall of 1896 was not sufficient to wash out. The result was a failure of the winter rice crop, which is practically the only staple of the population, of whom about 80 per cent. are agriculturists.

Orissa Division.

Although distress was at first apprehended in several parts of Orissa, relief operations were ultimately confined to a tract of some 365 square miles, with a population of 102,000, round the Chilka lake, and to scattered areas in the Khurda subdivision in the district of Puri.‡ The soil round the Chilka lake is sandy, and grows only one crop (winter rice), while the people are always more or less in straits. It was here that the famine of 1866 first made its appearance.

CHAPTER II.

CAUSES OF THE FAMINE OF 1896-97.

Normal crop distribution in the Province.

As observed in the preceding chapter, the principal harvests in these provinces are—

(1) The bhadoi, consisting principally of aus (early rice) in Bengal Proper and Orissa, and of makai (Indian-corn), millets, and early rice to a less extent, in Bihar and Chota Nagpur. This harvest, sown in April, May, and June, is reaped in August and September.

(2) The aghani or hymanti, consisting of the great winter rice crop, reaped in November, December, and the beginning of January.

(3) The rabi, consisting of boro or spring rice and pulses in Bengal Proper and Orissa, and of wheat, barley, and pulses in Bihar, sown in October and November, and reaped chiefly in March, April, and May.

The statistics of estimated areas under the different crops in Bengal are to be accepted with some reservations. There does not exist in these provinces any village agency through which, as in temporarily settled Provinces, what purport to be accurate and complete returns of village cultivation can be compiled, and the figures of areas as published are based upon the rough estimates of District Officers, framed upon what local knowledge is available. Information as to areas annually cropped and as to outturn is obtained mainly through the medium of the police, private individuals being also asked for information. In estimating normal areas every available source of information is utilised, such as economic reports, statistics of estates cadastrally surveyed, statistics of consumption, trade, etc. Annual estimates of areas are prepared with reference to the standing normal estimates, allowance being made by the local officers for estimated increase or decrease due to the character of the season. The returns of District Officers are finally compiled and scrutinised before publication by the Agricultural Department. A similar system of estimating crops prevails in the United States of America. The figures, while being the best possible, may be taken as approximately correct, but they are not, and do not pretend to be, absolutely accurate. According to the latest returns of the Agricultural Department, the normal areas under the different crops in the Province as a whole are as follows:—

Importance of the winter rice in Bengal. Serious effect of failure of that crop compared with failure of crops in districts where two or more harvests are reaped in the year.

It will thus be seen that winter rice is by far the most important crop in these provinces, covering as it does an area nearly equal to that of all other crops put together, and about $1\frac{1}{3}$ times the area covered by other food-crops; while the normal area covered by bhadoi or autumn rice is 7,600,000 acres, or 11·3 per cent. of the total cropped area. All known famines in Bengal and Orissa have been rice famines. In Bihar and Northern Bengal the bhadoi and rabi crops may afford the turning point between famine and no famine, but even there the immediate cause of scarcities and famines has always been the failure of the great winter rice crop. The early cessation of the usual rains in September and total want of rain in October has therefore, cæteris paribus, a more serious and lasting effect in areas where rice is the sole or predominating crop than it can have in districts or parts of districts in which three harvests of nearly equal relative importance are annually reaped. In such districts it may take two or three years of short rain to make a famine. If in such areas one harvest fails, the loss is partially made good by another harvest in the same year, but it is manifest that where rice is the only or almost the only crop and the cultivators are poor, and therefore have no stocks of grain or money to fall back upon, a total or very serious failure of the rice crop even in one year must cause acute distress. In this fact lies the explanation of what may appear to uninformed persons anomalous. They may have observed that in the southern tracts of Darbhanga, Muzaffarpur and in Saran the rainfall was as deficient as in the northern tracts, but yet there was comparatively little distress in the former areas or in the adjoining districts of the North-Western Provinces, and being unacquainted with the local conditions, they infer that neither could there have been intense distress in the northern areas; but they overlook the fact that in the southern parts of the North Bihar and in the North-Western Provinces districts there is not one harvest reaped but three in the year; that all three harvests scarcely ever fail, and that a failure of the sole crop of the year (the rice) in the rice-growing areas is equivalent to the failure of three harvests where three harvests are reaped in the year. There never has been a famine in the areas in which rabi and bhadoi-crops preponderate in Bihar, and no such tract has ever been declared to be seriously distressed.

Area protected by irrigation.

Except in Orissa and parts of Shahabad, Patna and Gaya the protection afforded from famine by irrigation from canals in these Provinces is not very great and in the distressed areas is insignificant. The only divisions in Bengal outside of Orissa, which are provided with canal systems are those of Patna and Burdwan; and although the area actually irrigated during 1896-97 was the largest ever recorded and the Sone Canals proved to be most beneficial, yet the irrigated acreage under the various crops during the year as compared with the year preceding, is reported only to have been—

		1895-96.	1896-97.

Rabi, inclusive of hot-weather crops	...	143,531	257,845

To this may be added the area irrigated from rivers, tanks and wells, with regard to which no statistics are available, but even if this area, were taken into consideration, it would be of so small account in comparison with the total area covered by food-crops, that the favourable distribution of the rainfall must be the dominating factor in the question of failure or non-failure of crops, and irrigation at best can afford but a slight palliative against the disastrous effects of short rainfall.

Distribution of rainfall most favourable for the different crops.

The distribution of rainfall most favourable to the winter rice crop is when premonitory showers fall in May or early in June. The rain in the latter half of June and in July should be heavy, then should come an interval of comparatively fine weather, so as to permit of weeding operations being successfully carried on. The September rains should be heavy, shading off into fine weather with showers in October. On the sufficiency of the rainfall in September more than in any other month depends the character of the outturn of this crop. The preparation of rice land commences much earlier in East and North Bengal, and in the eastern districts of South-West Bengal than in the rest of the Lower Provinces. The ante-monsoon showers, which fall in April, May, and the first part of June, are, in consequence, of more importance in these latter parts than in other places, where lands are usually prepared after the commencement of the monsoon rains. These conditions are also favourable to the bhadoi crops. The ante-monsoon showers of April, and in parts of Lower Bengal showers in March, are very necessary for the preparation of lands for these crops. From April onwards rain is required at frequent intervals, but should not be copious or continuous. Autumn rice is generally sown in May or earlier. Heavy rain at this time and in the month following is therefore injurious to the sowing and successful germination of that crop. Scattered showers with intervals of sunshine, on the other hand, are very useful. The climatic conditions most suitable to the cultivation of the rabi or cold weather crops are when the monsoon rains cease early in October after thoroughly moistening the ground, and are followed by a few showers during the remainder of that month and the first half of November. A little rain in December and also in January is requisite to enable the crops to attain their full growth.

Climatic conditions of 1896 far different from favourable.

Far different from these, the husbandman's ideal, were the climatic conditions of 1896, and the effects of the adverse conditions of that year were intensified by short crops in the preceding year.

Season of 1894-95.

The last year of good harvests preceding the recent famine was 1894-95, when the general outturn of the bhadoi crop for the Province was estimated as up to the average, or 16 annas. The season was also most favourable for the winter rice. As regards the rabi crops, the latter part of the monsoon season of 1894 was characterised by unusually late rain, which lasted till the end of the first week of November, and was particularly heavy in Bihar, Chota Nagpur, and North Bengal. This interfered with the timely preparation of the land, and in many districts prevented the sowing of the whole of the usual rabi area. The general outturn for the Province was estimated at 13 to 14 annas.

Season of 1895-96.

The season of 1895, although on the whole favourable to the bhadoi or autumn crops, was bad for the winter rice, inasmuch as the rains were unevenly distributed at the time of sowing, and ceased too early to ensure a full outturn. Then followed a prolonged drought, which lasted throughout the cold weather, and materially injured the rabi or spring crops. For the Province as a whole the outturn of the bhadoi crops was estimated at 14 annas, of winter rice at 13 annas, and of the rabi crops at 11 to 12 annas. The winter rice, however, in only 2 districts amounted to more than an average crop; of the remaining districts, 3 reaping an average crop, 20 from 12 to 16 annas, 15 from 8 to 12 annas, and 5, 8 annas or less. In five of the six districts of the Patna Division the outturn of this crop was from 9 to 12 annas. Out of the 44 districts from which returns were received for the rabi crop, only one had a 16-anna crop, 18 from 12 to 15 annas, and 25 less than 12 annas.

The condition of things in the Patna Division at the end of the year 1895-96 was summed up by the Commissioner in his Annual Administration Report as follows:—

"All that can be said is that with a people so largely agricultural as the population of the Patna Division, the margin of prosperity beyond the fixed limits of bare subsistence varies directly with the harvests of the year. In 1893-94 and 1894-95 the harvests were good; in 1895-96 the year began well with a good rabi in the early months of 1895 and a good bhadoi to follow; but the aghani rice and rabi were both poor. In these circumstances all that can be said for 1895-96 is that the people were a little less prosperous than in the previous year, but they are very far from scarcity or want, and a year of good harvests will put them in good case once more."

Season of 1896-97 as compared with 1873-74.

Unfortunately this succeeding year was the reverse of good. The rainfall of 1896 was very nearly as short as in 1873, and was worse distributed. In 1873 the rain did not begin till July, and even then was scanty. It lasted more or less, but never abundantly, till the end of August, when it for the most part ceased prematurely. Enough had, however, fallen to secure a fair yield of the bhadoi crops, which are reaped in August and September. Ltitle or no rain fell in the months of September, October, November, and December, but heavy showers in the last week of January and in the beginning of February 1874 secured a good rabi harvest, and caused a considerable contraction of the area and degree of distress anticipated.

But in 1896 there was an almost entire absence of rain in April except in Eastern Bengal, though in May showers were frequent in North and East Bengal. In South-West Bengal and Bihar the rainfall during this month was practically normal, although in Orissa and Chota Nagpur it was below the average. The monsoon rains were most unevenly distributed. In June there was very little rain in North Bihar, while in South Bihar, as also in Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Burdwan, and the Presidency Divisions it was excessive. In July rainfall was deficient over the greater part of these provinces, especially in Bihar, (where practically no rain fell between the middle of July and the middle of August,) and was again excessive in Orissa and in some districts of the Burdwan and Chota Nagpur Divisions. In August the rainfall was everywhere deficient except in Orissa, where the heavy falls led to a series of floods, which destroyed the standing crops over a large area. In the first week of September there was general rain everywhere except in Bihar, where the deficiency continued into the second week, although elsewhere there was a general fall. After the 19th September there was practically no rain, except scattered and local showers. It was this failure of the rain in September and October which is so essential for the rice crop that caused the famine of 1896-97. As, however, in 1873, good showers in the Christmas week, in the beginning of February and towards the end of March were of great value in refreshing the rabi and encouraging the raiyats, especially in the Patna and Chota Nagpur Divisions.

The following table shows the mean actual rainfall in the affected districts during the monsoon period (1st May—31st October) in comparison with the normal fall and the falls in the corresponding months of 1873 and 1895, with the percentage of excess or defect in each case :—

Rainfall as different and worse distributed than in 1873-74.

It will be seen, therefore, that in the Patna Division the total defect in the monsoon of 1896 as compared with the normal, was far greater than in 1873 in Champaran and Saran and somewhat greater in Shahabad. In Muzaffarpur the defect of both years was about the same, but in Sitamarhi, the centre of the great rice-producing area, the percentage of deficiency was as much as 41·6 against 25·3 in 1873. In Darbhanga the rainfall of 1896 was heavier than in 1873, but it was peculiarly ill distributed. There was good rain in the end of June and beginning of July, but then there was a break for six weeks during which there were cloudless days of burning sunshine. The rain which fell in August found the ground parched, and the water level little higher than in the end of June. In neither of the affected districts of the Bhagalpur Division was the defect so great as in 1873, but in both districts 1895 also was a year of short rainfall, and in Deoghur and Jamtara comprising the distressed area in the Sonthal Parganas the defect in 1896 was roughly 21 per cent. against 16 in 1873. In the distressed districts of the Chota Nagpur and Presidency Divisions the defect during 1895, except in Khulna, was as serious as that in 1896, and the rainfall generally worse than in 1873.

It is not, however, the total volume of rainfall that has alone to be considered, but also its distribution, which is even more important, for on the fall in September and October, depends the question of failure or non-failure of the winter rice. The failure of the rains in these important months is clearly shown by the follo wing figures of mean district rainfall :—

Crop failure as great as in 1873-74.

Whether, then, we look to the total aggregate rainfall or to the fall in the important months of September and October, it will be seen that the deficiency was as great as in 1873-74 and, as like causes produce like results, it was to be expected that the crop failure also would be as bad as in 1873-74, as in fact it is reported by all authorities to have been. In the Patna Division the monsoon was late in beginning, not breaking till the end of June, after which a heavy burst early in July caused floods, especially in Muzaffarpur, and was followed by a period of drought till the middle of August, and again to the middle of September, which scorched up what had escaped the floods, and left the rice seedlings to wither in the seed-beds. After the middle of September no rain fell at all till towards the end of November, when the fall was practically confined to South Bihar. The conditions in the Bhagalpur Division were similar, and after the late commencement of the monsoon the Division shared in the break from the middle of July to the middle of August, which ruined the bhadoi, and in the drought from the end of September to the end of the year. The figures for the district of Bhagalpur are misleading, as the September rain was confined to one heavy fall between the 14th and 20th of the month, which only momentarily improved the prospects. In Chota Nagpur the ante-monsoon showers in April and May, necessary for the preparation of the land, were very deficient; in June, and in Hazaribagh in July, the fall was excessive, and did much harm to the weakly crops, while in August, September, and October the monsoon withered away. In he Presidency Division, too, the figures are apt to convey an impression more favourable than the reality. The rain in Nadia with the exception of a few showers in the end of September ceased entirely from the 19th of that month to the end of the year, and the usual inundations upon which the Kalantar depends were wanting. Outside the Kalantar, where the aus and not the aman paddy is the important crop, it was the failure of the August rain which was so disastrous. At Meherpur only 2·85 inches were registered in August, against 16 82 in 1873-74 and a normal of 12·31. In Khulna the rainfall in the last week of September was 0·78 inches only, and in October 0·14 inches only, while in Schiamnaggar, in the affected tract, the total September rainfall was 6·22 inches only. Khulna is, however, a district which has always been supposed to be practically safe from famine. The deficient rainfall would not of itself have caused distress requiring the intervention of Government in that district, had it not been that its effects were aggravated by the previous impregnation of the soil with salt.

Proportion of the different food-crops in the affected districts.

Looking to the actual climatic conditions of the seasons of 1895-96 and 1896-97, as compared with the ideal conditions for a full outturn of the various harvests, it is obvious that a short crop must have been the consequence in 1895-96, and that a very serious failure was to be expected in 1896-97. The effect of such a failure on any individual district would depend largely on the extent to which that district was dependent upon each harvest for its food-supply. The relative areas under each description of crop throughout the Province have already been shown, but the relative proportion in the affected districts remains to be examined.

In the Patna Division as a whole winter rice provides 48·83 per cent. of the food-crops, rabi 28·73 per cent., and bhadoi only 22·52 per cent., while of the individual affected districts, Shahabad, Darbhanga, and Muzaffarpur depend chiefly upon their rice crop, to a less extent on their rabi, and still least of all on the bhadoi. In Saran all three crops are of about equal importance, while in Champaran, although the distribution is more even, winter rice is the principal and in the most severely affected areas almost the only crop, and early rice forms a larger proportion than elsewhere of the bhadoi crop. In the districts of Bhagalpur and the Sonthal Parganas, winter rice is by far the most important crop, the bhadoi being of slightly greater consequence than the rabi. In the Chota Nagpur Division rice constitutes no less than 63·3 per cent. of the food-crops, while the bhadoi amounts to 28·1 per cent., with the rabi unimportant—only 8·4 per cent. In Manbhum and Hazaribagh rice is by far the most important crop, with the bhadoi and the rabi respectively as the least important. In Palamau the crops are more evenly divided although the largest area is under rice. In Bankura, Khulna, and Puri winter rice constitutes roughly from 75 to 85 per cent of the area under food-crops, with the balance to the bhadoi and the rabi in about equal proportions. In the affected area in Nadia the early rice crop is the most important and after that the winter rice; in the distressed portion of Murshidabad winter rice is the principal crop.

The action of an unfavourable season, however, is twofold, causing a reduction in the area sown, as well as a reduction in its ultimate outturn, and a very large reduction in the area of rabi crops sown was the natural result of the absence of the rain from the end of September onwards, which was necessary to moisten the land for preparing and sowing. The winter rains in January and February greatly benefited the rabi crop, but only what was then sown.

Season of 1896-97.

The estimated outturns of the various crops for the Province as a whole during 1896-97 were as follows:—

10¼ annas.	7¼ annas.	10¼ annas.

For the affected districts the estimated outturns of the different harvests, as given in the Divisional Administration Reports and in the forecasts of the Agricultural Department., are shown in detail below and as compared with the years 1895-96 and 1873-75 :—

Comparison of crop outturns in 1896-97 and 1873-74.

It thus appears that, according to the official reports, the outturn of all harvests was short in 1895-96, while the reported yield of 1896-97 of all harvests and of the rice crop especially was worse than 1873-74. But official statistics of crop outturns in Bengal not being trustworthy, the Lieutenant-Governor turned to what he believes to be a more reliable source of information on this point, namely, the personal local knowledge of the officers employed in the distressed districts, and more especially the local knowledge of indigo-planters and other private gentlemen, native and European, who were in Bihar in 1873 74 and are there still. His Honour, finding at the Sonepore Conference in November that their opinion coincided with the conclusions suggested by the official statistics of rainfall and crop outturns, namely, that the crop failure was as great as in 1873-74, felt that there was no longer room for doubt that a grave emergency had to be faced in Bihar.

In the opinion of the Famine Commission the experience of previous famines had shown that an estimated failure of one-third of the year's outturn would demand the utmost vigilance and preparedness on the part of the authorities; that as long as more than one-half of the year's outturn is secured, pressure will exist, but no such distress as to require special measures of relief, while the failure of three-fourths of the whole outturn would be accompanied with intense famine. In the Patna Division the deficiency of 1895-96 in Shahabad, Darbhanga, and Muzaffarpur was over 30 per cent. In Champaran it was somewhat less, but a large portion of the crop of that district was estimated to have been exported. The comparatively smaller failure in Saran placed that district in a more favourable position than the others in the ensuing year. In 1896-97the failure in every district except Patna and Gaya, was more than 50 per cent. In the Chota Nagpur Division, speaking generally, the food-outturn of the three affected districts showed a deficiency of 30 per cent. in 1895-96, and rather more than 50 per cent. in 1896-97, the crop failure of 1896-97 being worst in Palamau, but serious in every district. In the Bankura and Puri districts the crop failure as estimated was not quite 50 per cent. in the district as a whole, but in the affected areas it was more. In the distressed portions of the three famine districts in the Presidency Division the deficiency was more than 50 per cent.

In considering the above estimates, several points are to be noticed. In the first place, the figures are for districts as a whole, and it has already been pointed out that in each district acute distress was confined practically to the area which is mainly dependent on the rice-crop. Further, the failure of the preceding year is to be considered. Finally, the crop failure of 1896-97 was accompanied not only by a failure to a greater or less extent of the crops all over the Province, but of the crops all over the rest of India, and the influence of this circumstance in the early stages of the famine in draining surplus stocks for export to the distressed districts of the North-Western Provinces, and in raising prices to a height which had never before been attained over so large an area, was a most powerful factor in bringing about the calamity of the year, especially in those parts of these provinces where the population is poor and depressed, the labouring classes numerous, and wages low. In this connection it should never be forgotten that in Bihar the wage of an agricultural labourer, which term includes petty agriculturists who supplement profits of their small holdings by working for wages, is in ordinary times as low as from 1¼ to 2 annas a day; that this wage is barely sufficient to supply food to the labourer and his family when food-grains sell at ordinary prices; that this class has in no way benefited by that rise in prices of agricultural produce which has tended to alleviate the condition of agriculturists; and that with the price of food-grains doubled as it was in 1896-97, it would have been wholly impossible for the labouring classes to subsist on the ordinary wage, assuming that they could find employment, which they could not have done, if Government had not intervened and rescued them from starvation.

Mango and mahua crops.

In addition, however, to the ordinary cultivated food-crops, special mention should be made of the fruit of mango and mahua trees, which in the Patna, Bhagalpur, and Chota Nagpur Divisions is largely resorted to by the poorer classes as an article of diet. Both in the Patna and Bhagalpur Divisions the mango crop was poor, and the mahua blossoms which were much injured by storms in March yielded a produce of only from half to two-thirds of the average. In the Chota Nagpur Division, where the Commissioner estimates the mahua as a food-staple of greater importance than the rabi, the crop was similarly damaged by storms, and the outturn estimated only at from 6 annas in Palamau and 8 annas in Manbhum, to 10 to 12 annas elsewhere. The mango crop was an absolute failure. In 1874 the mahua crop in the Chota Nagpur Division was a bumper one, and the mango crop at least an average.

Poppy cultivation.

Reference has already been made to the poppy cultivation in the Patna Division as having an important bearing on the economic condition of the people; elsewhere in the affected areas of other districts it is not grown. In the four affected districts of Shahabad, Saran, Champaran, and Muzaffarpur (poppy is not grown in Darbhanga to any extent), the average area under poppy on the figures of the last five years was 211,190 acres, while the average payments to cultivators amounted to no less than Rs. 37,62,297, in addition to a large annual indirect expenditure incurred upon subordinate establishments. In 1896-97, owing to the want of moisture in the land, the area under poppy fell off in Muzaffarpur by 54·16 per cent. and in Champaran by 33·36 per cent., while payments to cultivators decreased by 8·33 and 37·3 per cent. respectively. In Saran and Shahabad the payments to cultivators increased.

Comparison of the crop deficit in 1896-97 with that in 1873-74.

No useful attempt can be made to give a quantitative approximation in tons of the crop deficit in the Province in 1873-74, or 1896-97, as compared with normal years. The comparison has, however, been entered into, in more or less detail by the local officers, and their general conclusions are identical. The Commissioner of Patna, after a detailed examination of the subject, has arrived at the conclusion that throughout the five affected districts of his Division the estimated outturn was less and the estimated deficiency greater in 1896-97 than in 18.3-74. This conclusion is supported strongly in the Champaran district, where experienced gentlemen, like Sir W. Hudson, K.C.I.E., Mr. T. M. Gibbon, C.I.E., and Mr. J. J. Macleod, C.I.E., who had all witnessed the two former famines of 1865-66 and 1873-74, corroborated the unanimous consensus of native and European opinion in the district that the general loss of crop had been worse in the present than in either of the two previous famines. In Chota Nagpur the Commissioner points out that although the bhadoi crop of 1896-97 was probably somewhat better than that of 1873-74, yet the principal crop—the winter rice—was distinctly worse, and on a review of this and other attendant circumstances, the conclusion is come to that the people were decidedly worse off in the recent famine, than in the famine of 23 years ago. In the Presidency Division in Nadia, the only district in which comparison can be instituted with the famine of 1873-74, the Commissioner is of opinion that the circumstances were better then, than in 1896-97.

Summary of this chapter.

To sum up the facts stated and conclusions suggested in this chapter, it has been shown that the year 1895-96 was one of short crops; that the rainfall of 1896-97 was worse than that of 1873-74; that as a result of that failure the outturn of food-grains was worse according both to official statistics and the opinions of all persons of experience and knowledge of the subject, native and European, official and non-official; and also that the supplementary sources of food-supply were less than in 1873-74. If then the numbers relieved by Government and the cost of relieving them were far less in 1896-97 than in 1873-74, as will be shown in subsequent chapters to have been the case, the cause must be sought either in the more economical methods of famine administration adopted in the recent famine, or in the increased power of the people to resist the effects of crop failure, or in both. The Lieutenant-Governor believes that both causes have operated.

CHAPTER III.

EARLY MEASURES FOR THE ORGANISATION OF THE RELIEF SYSTEM.

Early apprehensions of distress in the Patna Division.

As soon as there appeared reasons for apprehending that the abnormal climatic conditions of the year would result in serious deficiency in the outturn of the different harvests, the attention of Government was directed to the maintenance of a close and anxious watch over the situation. As early as the 26th June 1896, a letter was addressed to all District Officers directing them to watch the vicissitudes of the season, and to report promptly to Government any special circumstances which might indicate the probability of relief measures being anywhere necessary. On this as on previous occasions the symptoms of approaching distress first presented themselves in Bihar, and the first letter of warning was submitted by the Commissioner of Patna on the 15th August, reporting that the bhadoi crop was withering, the seedbeds were drying up, and large tracts of rice-land were still unplanted. In view of the shortness of the rainfall in September, and the high prices that prevailed in the Province generally, a special report was called for by telegram on the 23rd September 1896. The Commissioner's report showed that everything was depending on the usual rain in the hathiya asterism (25th September—8th October), which, if favourable, might even then save the situation. The first indication of a spirit of restlessness manifested itself among the people on the 3rd October, when a case of grain-looting occurred in the Dinapur Bazar. On the 8th October the Commissioner was obliged to report the failure of the hoped-for rain, while strong west winds were withering the standing crops and retarding the preparation of the lands for the rabi. At the same time agents were buying grain largely, especially in South Bihar, for exportation westwards; prices were rising rapidly, and the feeling of uneasiness and unrest was spreading. Even then there still was a hope of rain in the siwati asterism (i e., before the 6th November); but should that also fail, the Commissioner was of opinion that scarcity, if not famine, would supervene.

Preliminary instructions issued.

On the 15th October the attention of the Commissioner was specially drawn to the provisions of the Famine Code and the necessity of losing no time in offering work on district roads under the conditions prescribed in section 56 of the Famine Code. The District Boards were directed to revise their budgets by cutting out all avoidable expenditure and appropriating all the funds they could find, to relief works proper. It was pointed out that should no rain fall before the end of October, there could be little doubt that a serious failure of the aman rice and rabi crops would be inevitable, and that the Local Government would have to largely supplement the funds at the disposal of District Boards. All Executive officers were to be instructed by the Commissioner to study carefully the Famine Code and the history of past scarcities. The Magistrates and Police were to keep a sharp lookout for any indications of rioting, and to take prompt steps to suppress it. The standing crops were to be carefully watched, the stocks of food-grain were to be enquired into, and every effort was to be made to utilise, for the purposes of irrigation, whatever supply of water there might be from hill-streams, tanks, and wells. The Commissioner was also authorized to give loans freely for sinking wells, and to employ, for the purposes of local enquiries, the officers of the Opium, Survey, and Settlement Departments, without interfering for the time being, with their ordinary duties. In the meantime a note was prepared by the Agricultural Department under the orders of Government, giving a resumé of the history of past scarcities in Bihar, comparative statements of rainfall month by month, outturn of crops, and prices of food-grains, with the number of persons who came on to relief works or who received gratuitous relief in every year of scarcity since 1873-74. This was circulated to all Commissioners and public associations, and communicated to the Press early in November. In forwarding this note the intention of Government to refrain from all interference with private trade was enunciated and emphasised: all the information then available to Government was given with the special object of assisting the mercantile community in forecasting the quantity of grain which it might be profitable for them to import, and further detailed enquiries were ordered to be undertaken with a view to ascertaining as nearly as possible, the stocks in hand and the deficit or surplus under or over the requirements for local consumption.

Sonepur Conference—20th November 1896.

The first preliminary report under section 9 of the Famine Code was submitted by the Commissioner of Patna on 11th November, and on the 19th November, when the rain still held off and it became certain that relief measures on a considerable scale would have to be undertaken, the Lieutenant-Governor, accompanied by the Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens, C.S.I., and the Hon'ble Mr. M. Finucane, Revenue Secretary, proceeded to Sonepur, where the assemblage of many official and non-official gentlemen of Bihar, Native and European, at the annual fair, afforded an excellent opportunity of ascertaining the views of those who were best able to judge as to the gravity of the situation and the measures required to meet it. On the 20th November a Conference was held, at which the circumstances of each district were discussed with reference to the anticipated crop failure and existing food stocks, and the proposed measures of relief were considered and explained by the Lieutenant-Governor.

Muzaffarpur Conference—4th and 5th December 1896.

After the return of His Honour to Calcutta, with a view of settling the more technical details of relief organisation after local enquiry, Mr. Finucane proceeded on a tour through the worst tracts in the districts of Muzaffarpur, Champaran, and Darbhanga, accompanied by the Collectors of these districts. The results of his and their observations and enquiries were afterwards laid before a Conference held at Muzaffarpur on the 4th and 5th December 1896, at which the Hon'ble Mr. Glass, C.I.E., Chief Engineer and Secretary to this Government in the Public Works Department, the Commissioner and the Collectors of North Bihar, and other local officials, were present. The object of the Conference was to work out the details of famine relief organisation on the lines indicated by the Lieutenant-Governor. It was decided to divide the affected areas into charges, each under a Superintendent, the charges being subdivided into circles, each under a circle officer. It was estimated that charges would ordinarily be 300 miles in extent (or 20 miles by 15), which, on a population of the density of Muzaffarpur or Darbhanga, would give some 262,500 people to be supervised by the Superintendent. Each charge would ordinarily contain ten circles. Charges and circles were to be mapped out at once, being doubled up, and two or more amalgamated, should distress at first not be sufficiently severe to call for an officer for each. The Charge Superintendent was to be of the standing of an Assistant or Deputy Magistrate or gazetted officer of the Police, Opium, or other Departments. The existing available staff of Government officers of all Departments was to be fully utilised in the first instance, and as soon as the supply of these officers should prove insufficient, non-official gentlemen possessing local knowledge were to be appointed. The salary for non-officials was fixed from Rs. 200 to Rs. 300, with horse allowance to all Charge Superintendents at Rs. 100 a month; this allowance was subsequently raised to Rs. 150 and Rs. 200 in certain cases. Commissioners of Divisions were authorised to appoint circle officers on Rs. 50 a month, with horse allowance of Rs. 25, which in Khulna was subsequently converted into a boat allowance of Rs. 40 a month. The scale of clerical establishments under the Superintendents and circle officers was considered, as also the details of provision of tents and treasure chests. It was decided that while District Boards should be consulted as to the manner and works on which they might wish their contributions to be expended, all sums which could be made available by them for expenditure on relief works, should be placed to the credit of the District Officer, in order to secure uniformity in the system of accounts and to avoid delays in the provision of funds. It was further resolved that an officer of the Accounts Department should be deputed to Bihar to confer with the Commissioner and the Collectors, and in consultation with them to consider the provisions of the chapter on accounts in the Bengal Famine Code, with a view to the simplification of the accounts system. It was decided that the larger relief works requiring professional supervision should be placed directly under officers of the Public Works Department with a separate staff and organisation. Schemes of major works of railways and irrigation canals were considered, and steps taken to have the necessary projects prepared. The actual organisation of labour on the relief works was discussed; and with a view of facilitating the due enforcement of tasks, Mr. Glass undertook to prepare a table of scales of work to be done by typical gangs in different kinds of soil.

Other Government measures.

The recommendations of this Conference were accepted generally by Government. With a view of stimulating the irrigation of the rabi crops, sanction was accorded to the grant of a contribution of Re. 1 for each kutcha well sunk in the affected tracts, and an allotment of two lakhs was made for the purpose. The rules for the grant of advances under the Land Improvement Loans Act were at the same time revised on the lines indicated by the experience gained in the Bundelkhund famine in the North-Western Provinces, and the grant of advances free of interest, was authorised to land-holders and substantial men, for the excavation of tanks and the execution of other petty works in their own villages, with provision for the remission of one-third of the original sum advanced, on condition that the work was carried out to the satisfaction of the District Officer. Subsequently, with the sanction of the Government of India, instruments executed by tenants for advances made by landlords, and those executed by the latter for loans given by Government, were exempted from stamp duty. Steps were at the same time taken early in December to allow the free use of the mahua flower and of edible forest produce in the Government forests of the Chota Nagpur Division and of the Sonthal Parganas.

Proposal to give Government loans for importation of grain in inaccessible tracts.

At the Sonepur Conference it had been brought to notice by various gentlemen of position and local knowledge, that there was a possibility of grain-stocks in the less accessible places becoming depleted before private trade could supply the local deficit, and it was suggested for consideration whether, without in any way interfering with private trade, Government might not advance money at moderate interest and on adequate security to private persons for the purchase and importation of grain from Burma and elsewhere, to be subsequently sold or distributed in the inaccessible tracts at the risk of the importers and at such prices as they might think fit to demand without interference on the part of Government. The suggestion was recommended by the Commissioner as the last bulwark against depletion of stocks in out-of-the-way places, and on the understanding that such advances should only be made to well-known men, who might be trusted not to compete with local traders. In 1873-74 Government had sanctioned arrangements for the grant of advances—

(a) to zamindars, planters, and others on the condition that they would import grain from a distance and sell it as near as possible at cost price, all expenses included;

(b) to traders and others of safe and responsible character at a moderate interest of 6 per cent., who were to import grain from a distance, without any conditions as to the rate or manner of selling it.

An arrangement such as the former clearly involved interference with private trade, but the proposal as recommended by the Commissioner of the Patna Division did not seem inconsistent with the principles approved by the Famine Commission, that Government is bound to provide for the supply of grain for relief works and gratuitous relief, and can rightly intervene when local trade fails to act in remote agricultural tracts, where wages are paid in grain, and the local demand is supplied not by imports from distant marts, but by small purchases from the stores of the agriculturists. The proposal was accordingly submitted to the Government of India. The Supreme Government at first demurred to these proposals under the impression that the object in view was to finance a general scheme for the importation of grain; but it was pointed out in reply that the Lieutenant-Governor had already publicly announced at the outset and emphasised his determination not to interfere with private trade, and that he had not the slightest intention of sanctioning arrangements which would involve interference with trade in any way, as to the undesirability of which he was in entire accord with the Government of India; but that the proposals in question referred only to definite localities of limited area not easily accessible, where the local officers and gentlemen of intimate acquaintance with local conditions and of unquestionable probity, anticipated that difficulty would be experienced in providing grain for relief works, gratuitous relief and local consumption. The Government of India, thereupon recognising that exceptional circumstances might arise justifying and indeed necessitating exceptional measures, left full discretion to the Lieutenant-Governor to act in each case according to the requirements of the situation. Happily, as will be shown in a later chapter, the necessity for taking advantage of that discretion arose in a very few places only.

First symptoms of distress in other Divisions.

Meanwhile warnings of impending distress from other Divisions had not been wanting. On the 5th October the Commissioner of the Presidency Division had forwarded reports of a critical state of affairs in the Khulna district, but the preliminary reports being conflicting, it was not until the 16th November that the Commissioner, after a personal visit to the locality, reported that measures of relief would probably be required in the Satkhira subdivision. Reports from the Orissa Division that the premature cessation of the rain was giving more grounds for anxiety than the floods earlier in the year, were received on the 5th November, and on the 12th November the Commissioner of the Chota Nagpur Division submitted a review of the local situation and of his reasons for apprehending that Government measures of relief would be necessary. At the same time from other corners of the Province came rumours of impending famine.

Test relief works.

District Officers in the meantime were busy everywhere collecting information of crop prospects from every quarter, advancing money on loans, and encouraging every attempt at irrigation wherever there was a prospect of saving any portion of the crop, while a constant watch was being kept on the state of the local markets and the effect of the steadily rising prices on popular feeling. The cry had arisen in several districts for the stoppage of exportation, and the impossibility of acquiescing with the request was but imperfectly appreciated or understood. As the first practical method of gauging the existence of actual distress, test works were started, usually by adopting test wages on some earthwork already in progress under the District Boards. In the Patna Division, at the time the Commissioner's report of the 11th November, test works had been started in Patna, Shahabad, Champaran and Darbhanga. The works in Shahabad, consisting of road-work in the Bhabua subdivision, failed to attract labour, and were for the most part closed in the middle of December. In Darbhanga, as soon as a task was enforced, the labourers quitted the work, but towards the end of November, signs again appearing of deterioration in the general health of the population, the test works were reopened and the numbers upon them went on steadily increasing. In Champaran, after observations made during October upon the ordinary works under the District Board and planters in the district, test works were opened in the second week of November, and by the end of the month were in full swing. Test works in Muzaffarpur were started in the Sitamarhi subdivision in the first fortnight of November, but were sparsely attended. In the second fortnight, however, it was found necessary to open them in the Sadar subdivision. In the Saran district test works in the Gopalganj subdivision were opened in the end of November, but in the Sadar and Siwan subdivisions not until the end of December. In the Bhagalpur Division no actual measures of relief were found necessary before the end of the year 1896. In the Chota Nagpur Division the Hazaribagh district was the first to show the effects of scarcity. Attention being drawn to the large numbers of destitute travellers during November and December along the Grand Trunk Road, kitchens were opened for their relief, and money placed at the disposal of thana officers for the relief of stray cases. Test-works were also opened but failed to attract any rush of labour. No actual measures of relief were found necessary in the other districts of the Division during the calendar year. The only other districts in which relief measures were started before the 31st December 1896 were Nadia in the Presidency Division, where a test-work opened on 15th November quickly attracted labour, and in Khulna, where works were opened from the end of November.

General summary of the situation at the close of 1896.

At the close of 1896 relief works were in progress in seven districts, and the total numbers on them in the Province on the 26th December amounted to 44,901. The mapping out of the charge and circle organisations in the districts where distress was becoming acute was well in hand, and the charges were being manned. For relief of stray cases of acute distress money had been made over to station police officers, and regular gratuitous relief commenced in Saran, Champaran and Darbhanga with a total of 7,439 recipients at the close of the year. Enquiries as to the prospects of the ensuing months were well advanced, and the local officers were in possession of much valuable information as to the probable development of events, and prepared to grapple with whatever situation might arise. Matters had by this time passed from apprehension of distress to certainty, and arrangements from the stage of discussion to practical organisation.

CHAPTER IV.

PROGRESS OF THE FAMINE DURING 1897.

The new year opened therefore with famine established in seven districts and the apprehension of its declaration elsewhere.

It is not possible nor necessary to trace in detail the progress of the famine in each of the affected districts; to describe the local difficulties and crises met with, or to denote the special influences at work in individual districts to cause changes and fluctuations in the numbers on relief. The economic conditions, the proximate causes of famine, the time of harvesting the crops, the nature of the crops grown, and the normal staying power of the population—all vary so much in such widely different districts as Champaran in one direction, Palamau in another, and Nadia in a third, that no general statements or explanations can hold good of all of them alike at any one period. On the one subject alone of the fluctuations of the numbers on relief works much might be written: general events such as the harvesting of the rabi and the breaking of the monsoon which made their effect felt everywhere can be indicated; but it is not proposed to deal here with the weekly fluctuations in individual districts due to the opening of new works, the closing of others, the stricter supervision over labour and its consequent temporary strikes, local holidays, passing showers of rain, and the hundred and one minor causes which constitute the famine history of each district. Full and complete information will be found in the reports of the Commissioners and Collectors of the affected districts; in the present chapter it is only intended to sketch briefly the outline of the progress of the famine, leaving the special points in the relief system to be dealt with subsequently.

January.

During the month of January favourable rain was reported from the Patna Division, which immensely improved the prospects of the cold-weather crops, though the area of distress widened in the Shahabad, Saran, and Champaran districts. Relief works were by this time open in all the four districts of North Bihar and in Shahabad. Test works were also opened in Rajshahi, and relief works were in progress in Nadia and Khulna. The Government of these provinces was placed under a great disadvantage in that it had not at its disposal a staff of village revenue officials such as are available elsewhere, while the Public Works Department staff had become so depleted in recent years that few of its officers could be spared for famine work. Although the Lieutenant-Governor had at the Sonepore Conference sanctioned the entertainment of a strong supervising establishment at the very outset, and had transferred to the distressed districts, every officer who could be spared from districts more favourably situated—yet the rush of people seeking employment on relief works was so great that it was found at first impossible to control them and to exact the full task, on the enforcement of which, as a test of distress, Sir Alexander Mackenzie had from the beginning laid much stress. The class of non-official subordinates who had to be selected in haste out of a crowd of applicants were usually untrained and untrustworthy. This was especially the case in Darbhanga and Champaran, where the labourers were not slow to take advantage of the situation, causing confusion by crowding on to works and clamouring for wages without labour. Collectors were still struggling with the elaborate classifications of labour under the Famine Code, and even the supervising staff had much to learn in the practical organisation of a crowd of workers. Much benefit was derived from a visit paid to Bihar by Mr. Glass, Secretary to Government in the Public Works Department, and from the practical hints on the management of works which he was able to give, and it was decided to introduce the agency of the Public Works Department to the fullest extent possible. By the end of the month, much progress had been made; the Public Works Department had commenced to take over some of the works, and with experience gained, discipline was being rapidly restored, and the works brought under efficient control. Gratuitous relief had been started in all four districts of North Bihar, in Nadia and in Khulna, though the organisation of the distribution had been hampered by the more urgent calls upon the superior staff for the supervision of the works. Poor-houses had been opened, and the opening of private relief works on a considerable scale commenced by the Maharaja of Darbhanga and the Court of Wards on behalf of the Hatwa Raj. At the close of the month relief was being given to 338,810 persons, of whom 75,691 (mostly in Darbhanga, where the organisation was most complete,) were in receipt of gratuitous relief. It is a remarkable feature of the recent famine that the people rushed to relief works at a much earlier period than in 1874, the numbers in receipt of relief at the end of January 1874 being 113,224 upon works and 378 only upon gratuitous relief, against 338,810 in 1897. This is due no doubt partly to the higher prices that prevailed in 1897 and partly to the fact that arrangements for giving relief were taken in hand at a much earlier stage than in 1874. But if the numbers on relief in January were three times as large in 1897 as in 1874, in subsequent months the maximum numbers on relief works were less than one-fourth of the numbers of 1874—a fact which indicates the wisdom of making early and sufficient arrangements for meeting distress, and the necessity of exacting full tasks. Had tasks not been rigidly enforced in Bihar at the early stages of the famine, it is believed that the numbers on relief works would have ultimately approximated to those of 1874, which reached the enormous total of a million and seven hundred thousand souls.

This Government under a disadvantage for want of village revenue officials as compared with other Provincial Governments.

February.

Light rain fell in the first half of February, which was beneficial to the crops in the Patna and Chota Nagpur Divisions. In the Patna Division the affected areas in the districts of Saran and Champaran were slightly extended and the organisation of relief set on foot in the Bhabhua subdivision of Shahabad. Distress had commenced to manifest itself in new districts. In Palamau test works had been opened at the end of January, and were converted into relief works during the ensuing month, while test works had been found necessary in Manbhum and Hazaribagh. In the Presidency Division test works were opened in Jessore and Murshidabad, and in the Bhagalpur Division relief works had to be undertaken in the district of Bhagalpur. A test work was also opened in Pabna, and gratuitous relief commenced in the districts of Shahabad, Bhagalpur, Palamau and Manbhum. The centre of acute distress, however, still continued to be the Patna Division, and of the 268,213 persons on relief works and 141,789 on gratuitous relief on the 27th February, the majority were to be found in North Bihar. The numbers, however, which had been rising steadily to the middle of February, had received a check, as the harvesting of the rabi commenced to afford other means of employment. The improvement in the organisation of works was continuing, although the Public Works Department, for want of an efficient staff, were experiencing difficulty in taking over charge of works ; and application was made to the Government of India for assistance in supplying suitable officers. On civil works the figures of outturn of work done and of cost rate were showing a satisfactory improvement. The first warning of depleted food-stocks had come from Palamau where a bounty on importation was sanctioned. In the end of the month the Lieutenant-Governor paid a visit to the affected districts of North Bihar. On visiting these districts His Honour satisfied himself by personal observation that there could be no question that distress was both acute and wide-spread, but that so far it had been adequately met and the results attained had been satisfactory. A conference with the local officers was presided over by Sir Alexander Mackenzie at Darbhanga, where the details of the management of relief works were still further elaborated.

March.

Throughout the month of March distress spread everywhere, and the numbers on relief rose regularly week by week until at the close of the month they amounted to 302,789 on works and 225,748 on gratuitous relief, or a total of 528,537. Rain fell during the month, which did good by refreshing the lands generally in the Patna, Bhagalpur and Presidency Divisions, but on the other hand, in the district of Champaran, the standing rabi crop was damaged by hail; in the Chota Nagpur Division, the mahua blossoms were considerably damaged by the rain, and the rabi crops attacked with rust and blight. The mango crop was reported to be poor everywhere. The area of distress deepened during the month in the Saran, Champaran and Darbhanga districts of the Patna Division, while in the Chota Nagpur Division the test works in Palamau and Hazaribagh were converted into relief works, although the numbers upon them were small; in Manbhum, on the other hand, two of the test works were closed, as the gathering of the mahua crop afforded a temporary means of sustenance here and throughout the Division generally. In the Presidency Division distress was spreading in Khulna and Nadia. Relief works were opened for the first time in the Sonthal Parganas and in a small area round the Chilka Lake in Puri, while gratuitous relief was started in both districts and in Hazaribagh. In the Patna Division the Public Works Department was still making somewhat slow progress in the taking over of works, and the Government of India was indented on for the assistance of commissioned officers in addition to the non-commissioned officers already asked for. The effects of the rain and of the rabi harvesting were shown in fluctuations in the numbers on relief works, especially in North Bihar, but the numbers on gratuitous relief, were rising steadily as the pressure increased and the organisation for relief was perfected.

April.

With the beginning of April although no new district was added to the list of distressed areas during the month, the Province entered upon a period of steadily deepening distress, and in spite of local variations in numbers, due to the rabi and mahua harvests and minor local causes, the numbers on relief for the Province as a whole went on steadily increasing week by week until they touched their highest point in the first week of June. By the end of April the total number on relief had risen to 678,467, of whom 365,512 were upon works and 312,955 in receipt of gratuitous relief. Rain fell generally during the month, and did much good in improving the prospects for the bhadoi crop, though in Champaran, where the rabi crop is late, some harm was done, and in Hazaribagh the mahua crop suffered. The rain was everywhere bad for the indigo crop in Bihar. In the Patna Division the progress of handing over works to the Public Works Department was still impeded by difficulties in obtaining a suitable staff. Two new important major works on the Trebeni and Dhaka canals were, however, commenced by the Department in Champaran, and at the close of the month an important change was made by the introduction of a system of piece-work in selected areas in the place of the elaborate task-work system of the Famine Code. The Military officers asked for from the Government of India were also commencing to arrive.

May.

The most marked feature of the month of May was a general increase everywhere in acute distress, the total number on relief at the end of the month reaching the high figure of 828,715. In the Patna Division the daily average for the month was the highest recorded in every district except Shahabad, where a slightly higher level had been reached in the previous month, and Champaran, where the rabi harvest in Nipal drew off a certain amount of labour, and the payment of the opium advances brought a large sum of money into the district. One new district—Bankura—was added to the list of affected districts during the month, and test works were opened, while gratuitous relief was started both in that district and in Pabna. There was general rain throughout the Province, and the preparation of the land for the coming crops was being encouraged everywhere by loans and advances. Prices everywhere were very high, especially in the Chota Nagpur Division, where, in consequence of the exceptionally high prices in Palamau, the decision was come to to import grain by Government agency for use on the relief works and for gratuitous relief. The charitable relief organisation was being completed and the system of piece-work was being extended, notably on the Sakri-Jainagar line in Darbhanga.

June.

In beginning of June before and up to the breaking of the monsoon rains the famine operations reached their zenith, and in the first week of that month the numbers on relief amounted to 842,034, of whom 384,252 were on works and 457,782 on gratuitous relief. From then onwards, with the exception of a slight check in the second week of July, the numbers commenced to dwindle, as the favourable monsoon began to restore confidence and to afford employment in the preparation of the land for the sowing of the rice and in weeding the bhadoi crops. The monsoon broke early in the month, but heavy rain was delayed till the end of June, when portions of the districts of Patna and Saran were flooded, causing an increase of the numbers on relief in the latter district. Then followed a short break in the rains, and anxiety once more was felt, which subsequent showers fortunately removed, although not before the break had caused a large rise in numbers in Champaran. In the Chota Nagpur Division agricultural operations were in full swing by the end of the month, but the course of the monsoon was here more capricious than elsewhere and was anxiously watched. Prices, especially in Palamau, still continued abnormally high. There was a considerable extension of kitchen relief, as, although the physical condition of the people was generally good, the children in places showed signs of being underfed. Regular relief works were opened in Bankura, and test works in Lohardaga and Singhbhum.

During the month the Officiating Lieutenant-Governor paid a visit to the affected districts. In the districts of Nadia and Khulna His Honour found that gratuitous relief was being given to able-bodied Muhammadan women who, it was alleged, would starve rather than work publicly on relief works. When the tests prescribed by the Famine Code are relaxed under a belief of this kind, it necessarily follows that a wholesome and self-acting criterion of distress is removed, and everything depends on the discretion of the local officers. There was reason to think that this discretion had not been exercised altogether wisely in this case, and that gratuitous relief was being given too freely. A rigid scrutiny of the lists was ordered, and the local officers were directed to send to the poor-house females of the lower classes who were able to work, but refused to do so. In North Bihar Mr. Stevens had an interview with Mr. Higham, who was there making enquiries on deputation from the Government of India; and as a result of this interview and of his own personal observations and enquiries, His Honour was convinced that gratuitous relief was not being too freely given in Bihar, that relief works were being conducted in an efficient and economical manner, and that they had neither competed nor interfered with private works. In fact the Officiating Lieutenant-Governor had the satisfaction of learning from Mr. Higham that a larger task of work was being enforced as a test of distress, that relief works were being better conducted, and that the physique and morale of the labourers on relief works were better in Bihar than in any province that he had visited, while of several thousands of recipients of gratuitous relief seen by Mr. Higham and the Officiating Lieutenant-Governor himself, there were not a dozen persons who were not manifestly fit objects for it.

July.

The numbers on relief continued steadily to decline during July, and in the last week of the month only 166,429 persons were on relief works and 395,505 on gratuitous relief, or a total of 561,934. When the breaking of the rains began to afford employment in the fields to the labourers hitherto supported on the relief works, they left the works of their own accord, but the classes in receipt of gratuitous relief were not benefited until the new crops came into the market, and the springs of private charity again began to flow. The rains in the Patna Division were generally favourable and the prospects of the bhadoi excellent; relief works in the Shahabad district were accordingly closed at the end of the month. The floods in Saran had, however, added to the distress in that district. In the Chota Nagpur Division the fall was below the average, but prospects were still good, and the test works in Singhbhum were stopped. Prices, however, still continued to rise, and apprehension as to the state of food-stocks in Lohardaga led to the introduction there also of the system of bounties upon imports; some gratuitous relief was also given in the district. The favourable rains in the Bhagalpur Division enabled works to be closed in the first week of July, and all relief to be stopped by the end of the month; relief operations were also contracted in the Sonthal Parganas. In the Bankura district, after a break in the rains early in the month, the ensuing copious fall caused floods, which did some damage. In the Patna Division it was now thought that the numbers in receipt of gratuitous relief might be safely reduced to some extent. In doubtful cases relief in the villages was refused, while the recipients were given the option of going to relief kitchens, in the event of their being unable to fall back on their relatives or on private charity for support.

The general contraction of relief operations made steady progress almost everywhere during August, favoured by good rain and satisfactory crop prospects, and the total numbers on relief at the end of the month were 335,776 only, of whom 81,987 were upon works. The total had been the lowest touched since the first week in January. The procedure for closing the works was carefully considered, and in the Patna Division it was decided that where the bhadoi crops were good, relief works should all be closed by the 1st September; but that in tracts where there was little or no bhadoi, they might, if necessary, be kept open till the middle of the month. Gratuitous relief was to be continued some time longer, but was to be cut down; children were to be fed in kitchens, and the acceptance of cooked food was to a greater extent to be made the test of the needs of adults. It was hoped that it would be possible to close all operations by the 1st October. In Champaran piece-work was introduced everywhere except on works about to be closed, in accordance with the principle enunciated by the Famine Commissioners, that at the close of the famine a system of piece-work with descending rates might be used to induce workers to resume their ordinary employment. In Chota Nagpur the rain was favourable, and as the new crops came upon the market, prices took a turn for the better. Relief operations were therefore closed by the end of the month in Palamau and Hazaribagh entirely, and as regards test works in Lohardaga also. In Manbhum the situation was not so satisfactory; the outturn of the bhadoi crops was not so good there as elsewhere, and there was a certain amount of labour in need of employment now that the transplantation of the rice was finished. In Bankura too it was not found possible to contract operations as much as elsewhere, but in the Sonthal Parganas relief ceased from the middle of the month. In the Presidency Division operations were wound up in all three affected districts.

August.

During the months of September and October all famine operations were brought to a close. By the end of September the total numbers in receipt of relief, which at the commencement of the month had stood at 224,297, had been reduced to 41,115, and by the end of October it might fairly be said that famine relief was at an end. The last district in which relief was being given to any extent was Manbhum, the conditions of which have been referred to. An attempt was made to close the works at the end of August, but it was found necessary to re-open them, and even although greatly reduced rates were offered, they were not finally closed till the end of October. In the Patna Division works were closed about the middle of September, the labourers being dismissed to their homes with valedictory doles from the Charitable Relief Fund, and on the 14th October the Commissioner was able to write:—

September and October.

"Nothing could be more prosperous than the present agricultural outlook. The bhadoi crop has proved more than an average all over the Division (except, perhaps, in Patna), even though it was damaged by floods in South Bihar; the aghani rice bids fair to be well above the average, if not a bumper crop, everywhere, and the moisture for the rabi is everywhere ample, and sowings have already begun."

Similar favourable reports were received from the other Divisions of the Province, and the relief operations of 1897 ended with every reason for hope that the disastrous effects of the year would soon have passed away and be forgotten.

CHAPTER V.

THE FAMINE RELIEF ORGANISATION.

Territorial organisation.

The organisation of charges and circles approved by the preliminary Famine conference at Muzaffarpur in December has already been indicated, and as distress spread from one district to another, the same system was adopted in each. The final division of each affected district is shown below :—

In the less severely affected districts the organisation was not so elaborate as in Bihar, but the principle of organisation was everywhere the same except in the Sonthal Parganas, where the local village agency, already existing and utilised in the district administration in the shape of committees of headmen of villages and leading raiyats, was employed practically to take the place of what were elsewhere the circle officers.

Charge Superintendents and circle officers.

For the manning of the charges and circles the three sources of official, military, and non-official agency were drawn upon. The total number of Charge Superintendents appointed during the course of the relief operations, was 89, of whom 69 were Europeans and 20 natives, while 56 were official, 21 non-official, and 12 military commissioned officers. But in the most severely distressed tracts in Bihar, the charges were found too heavy for one officer to manage, and 17 Assistant Charge Superintendents were therefore appointed, of whom 14 were Europeans; 5 were drawn from the Government services, 9 were non-officials, and 3 were military non-commissioned officers. Out of 510 circle officers engaged from beginning to end of the famine, 52 were Europeans and 458 natives; 77 were already in Government employ, 424 were non-officials, and 9 were military non-commissioned officers. In all 114 officers and men were lent by the Military Department for famine work, and general testimony is borne by the District Officers to the value of their services and the efficiency with which they performed their unaccustomed duties.

Medical arrangements on the relief works.

In December 1896, the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals was directed to arrange for the necessary medical aid in the affected districts. Drugs, instruments, and other supplies were obtained as needed from the medical depôt, and a special establishment was formed consisting, at its maximum, of one Commissioned Medical Officer, one Military Assistant Surgeon, two civil Assistant Surgeons, 21 Civil Hospital Assistants, 61 local native doctors, and four compounders. The establishment was distributed through the five affected districts of the Patna Division, and Khulna, and Hazaribagh working under the supervision of the Civil Surgeons. No extra medical aid was called for in the other affected districts. The marginal statement shows the number of hospitals open at poor-houses and on works in the seven districts where special assistance was given. The statistics of mortality in the famine hospitals will be considered together with the general health of the affected districts.

Organisation of relief works under the Public Works Department.

The part played by the Public Works Department in the management of relief works in Bengal has already been referred to, and a special note by the Chief Engineer, Bengal, on the operations of the Department forms one of the appendices to the present narrative. The decision that the Public Works Department should take over the administration of the large relief works in Bihar, as soon as their transfer could be arranged for, was come to at the Conference held at Muzaffarpur on the 15th January. Two circles were shortly afterwards formed with their head-quarters at Darbhanga and Motihari respectively, and placed each under an officer of the status of a Superintending Engineer. In each circle three divisions were ultimately formed; in the former, two in Darbhanga and one in Muzaffarpur, and in the latter, two in Champaran and one (for a short time only) in Saran. Each division was in charge of an officer of the standing of an Executive Engineer with subdivisions in charge of Assistant Engineers. Some works were also undertaken by the Public Works Department in Nadia under the general supervision of the District Engineer. The staff ultimately employed under the Superintending Engineers consisted of 29 Executive and Assistant Engineers, with 84 Upper and 209 Lower Subordinates. A special branch office for the audit of accounts was opened with its head-quarters at Muzaffarpur, and was found of the greatest service. The collecting of the necessary staff took longer than had been anticipated: the cadre of the Public Works Department in Bengal was at a minimum, and the necessary additions could only be made by recalling officers from leave, indenting on the Government of India for the service of officers of the Royal Engineers, utilising the services of the existing District Engineers of the affected districts, and by recourse to the open market. A certain amount of subordinate establishment was transferred to the Public Works relief works from those under civil agency, but, as a rule, the Public Works Department demanded in their subordinates a higher degree of efficiency than the civil department had been obliged to work with and make the best of. These difficulties, coupled with the fact that a number of works were already in progress under the civil department, and that the differences in systems of account and other minor details made transfers difficult, delayed the making over of works to the Public Works Department, and even where most numerous, the works under the Department in the Patna Division were not much more than one third of those under civil agency. When at a late stage the Public Works Department establishments were complete, it was not found possible to make over so many of the civil works which were then nearing completion, as might be desired, and the total number of labourers who had to be provided for on the works under the Public Works Department was therefore less than the officers of that Department had originally anticipated, and than might have been supervised by them. The Lieutenant-Governor now thinks that it is perhaps to be regretted that he did not depute Mr. Glass to control the works on the spot.

Broad principles of famine relief.

Within the civil charges and circles and Public Works circles and divisions as thus constituted, was carried out the whole system of Government relief, which may be conveniently considered under two main divisions—

I.—Relief by offer of labour upon works either under the control of the civil officers or of the Public Works Department, and under various systems of work and wages.

II.—Gratuitous relief whether offered in the form of grain or money doles, or of cooked food to be taken at a kitchen or by residence in a poor-house.

The broad principles of famine relief had been finally settled and authoritatively laid down by the Government of India, and from them there was no departure in the present famine. The fundamental principle that the State would, as far as possible, undertake to prevent the loss of life from starvation is an axiom of famine administration; but on the other hand, the State does not undertake to do more than provide the means of bare subsistence to those actually in need of it. This subsistence is offered in two ways: to those physically incapable of work in any form, relief is given gratuitously, but from all capable of performing any work, however light, some return is demanded. The permanent benefit to the country resulting from the works undertaken is an object of importance, but the primary aim of these works is not to compensate the State for the expenditure incurred, but to test the necessity for the relief. This test takes the form of the performance of a certain amount of labour upon a relief work, usually the excavation of earthwork on a road or tank, canal or railway embankment. The amount of work to be done by the various descriptions of famine labourers varies with their physical strength and aptitude for the kind of work offered, and constitutes the task. The subsistence wage is calculated on the prevailing prices of food-grains and the quantity of food estimated as necessary to sustain life. The receipt of the full wage is dependent upon the performance of the prescribed task, but is subject to reduction to the lowest point consistent with the maintenance of health, should reasonable energy not be shown by the labourer.

Subsidiary and indirect methods of relief, such as the remission of land revenue, and the offer of loans and advances, will be dealt with separately, but these were but supplementary to the two great forms of relief indicated above, which constituted the backbone of the system.

CHAPTER VI.

RELIEF WORKS.

In tracing the history of the evolution of the system of relief works adopted in Bengal, it is only necessary to trace the course of events in the Patna Division.

Organization adopted on test-works and early relief works.

At the commencement of operations in the Patna Division all works were under civil agency. This was in accordance with the provisions of the Famine Code that—

"Large works will be the backbone of the system of relief in the later stages of famine while small works should be used to the utmost in the early days of the scarcity .... By far the greater part of relief works, if not all, will ordinarily be carried out from local funds by the District Board and will chiefly employ unskilled labour, and the works carried out by the Public Works Department will consist of only large projects such as railways, canals, etc., specially sanctioned, and will employ only able-bodied labourers."

The test-works which were opened in the early stages of famine were therefore for the most part ordinary District Board works converted into test-works, which were conducted usually from the District Board funds and under the supervision of the District Engineer and his subordinates. The classification of labour adopted was that prescribed in the Famine Code, namely—

(a) Able-bodied professional labourers accustomed to the kind of work they are engaged on.
(b) Able bodied labourers, but not accustomed to that kind of work.
(c) Able bodied persons who are not labourers.
(d) Persons who are weakly but still fit for light employment.

At the Conference held at Sonepore the Lieutenant-Governor laid particular stress on the necessity of exacting from the outset as a test of distress, the full tasks prescribed in the appendices to the Bengal Famine Code, and the Chief Engineer was at the same time requested to have tables drawn up showing the tasks to be demanded for varying lengths of lift and lead. With the help of the instructions laid down in the Code individual Collectors worked out the task to be demanded and the rate of wages to be paid. The people were encouraged to form themselves into gangs, as contemplated in the Code, but difficulties were from the first experienced owing to the varying size and composition of such gangs, and to a sudden rush of labourers to the works. At this stage the want of even an elementary technical knowledge on the part of a large portion of the inferior staff was found to be a serious impediment to the speedy organisation of the labour which came flocking to the works. As distress deepened and the organisation of Charge Superintendents was introduced, test works were converted into regular relief works with a properly constituted staff for each, working under the general supervision of the Charge Superintendent. The supervising staff on a fully organised work under civil agency subject to local variations, and outside North Bihar, to a generally less elaborate organisation, usually comprised—

(c) A cashier.
(d) A gang muharrir or mates in charge of a varying number of separate gangs of labourers.
(e) Peons, water-carriers, and treasury guards.

If works were small, one officer was placed in charge of more than one work. The Charge Superintendent exercised general supervision over all relief operations in his charge both on works conducted by civil agency and in gratuitous relief. The circle officers in Bihar had no connection with the works in progress, their duties being confined to the management of the gratuitous relief, and conducting the miscellaneous enquiries which might be ordered by the Collector.

Modification made in the system adopted from the North Western Provinces.

In January in the light of the discussions at the Conference at Muzaffarpur and of the experience of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, as stated in their Resolution of the 5th December, a change was decided on in the classification of labourers and in the exaction of the task. The classification was simplified by reduction to two classes—

(i) B. Able-bodied workers.

(ii) D. Workers, but fit for light work only.

In two important respects the system adopted in the North Western Provinces was, however, departed from. In the first place, the responsibility of the Collector for the administration of all famine relief in his district was maintained, and all officers of the Public Works Department in the district were declared (except in matters of purely professional detail) to be under the direct control and supervision of the Collectors, while officers whose duties carried them over more than one district were subordinated directly to the Commissioner of the Division. In the second place, not only the diggers, but carriers also, and the length of lift and lead were to be taken into consideration in fixing the amount of the task to be demanded from every gang of workers. At first attempts were made to form gangs comprising 60 to 70 members and the task was worked out for the gang as a whole with due regard to considerations of length of lift and lead, but difficulties being experienced in getting the people to form themselves into such large gangs, the attempt was abandoned on the visit of the Lieutenant Governor to Bihar, in favour of the system which, with slight modifications of detail, was followed in principle for the remainder of the famine wherever task-work was adopted. Under this final system the pit gang became the unit, consisting as a rule of about four diggers in a pit with a number of carriers adjusted to the conditions of lead and lift, each pit gang being treated and paid as a separate unit. The change was introduced from about the middle of March.

The pit gang system.

Tasks.

The fixing of tasks at the outset by individual Collectors according to the general instructions of the Code has already been mentioned. Great assistance was afforded by the introduction of Mr. Glass's tables, but the original tables did not contain specific tasks for carriers. This omission was, however, soon supplied when the system of pit gangs was introduced. The standard task as finally prescribed was as follows:—

In soft soil the excavation of			200	cubic feet per digger.
In medium	"	"	125	"	"
In hard	"	"	85	"	"

The task for carriers was regulated by the horizontal distance of the pit from the spoil-bank, i.e., the lead, and the vertical height to the spoil-bank from the centre of the pit excavated, i.e., the lift. The general nature of these variations may be indicated by the task set for carriers in soft soil (which constituted the greater part of the soil met with), when three carriers were allowed for the removal of one digger's task, or 200 cubic feet of earth, with a minimum lead of 100 feet, two additional carriers being allowed for every additional 25 feet of lead or two feet of excavation. The basis of the calculation was the assumption of the average task for a carrier as 75 cubic feet over a lead of 100 feet and 2 feet lift. The scale allowed, however, was slightly more liberal.

The Blackwood system.

As work went on, various devices were adopted for facilitating measurement and check. The chief of these was that introduced by Mr. Blackwood, Assistant Magistrate at Darbhanga, on the works in his charge. Instead of paying up the gangs and fining them at the end of each day for short work done, the task, after it was once set out, was not paid for until it had been accomplished. If the gang worked well, the task could be finished in one day and the full wage for one day taken; if idle, the work might drag on to two days, but the full wage of one day only would nevertheless be paid. The system was practically therefore one of piece-work with a maximum wage. The pit gang was not permitted to do more than the task in one day or to earn more than the one day's wage. The system was brought to general notice and introduced largely elsewhere. Its advantages were that while no one got paid for more than his work, an inducement to work hard was held out; at the same time the check on cheating was facilitated and an orderly arrangement on the work was maintained by ensuring that all pits should be carried down to the same level at the same time.

Systems of payment.

The systems of payment adopted varied with the systems of organising labour. The procedure contemplated by the Famine Code is the setting out of an individual task to each member of the gang, the daily measurement of each digger's task so done and calculation of the amount earned, and the payment of the aggregate earnings of the gang in a lump sum to the headman. The attempts to carry out this system, which were made at the commencement of operations, proved that it was unworkable. It was impossible to measure up individual tasks within a reasonable time; gangs consequently got into arrears with their pay, and facility was afforded for fraud. The next stage was to measure the work of the gang as a whole, paying the total wages earned to the headman and leaving him to distribute it among the workers. Time was thus saved over the measurement; but opportunities still continued for malpractices, while discontent soon arose among the members of the gang who found themselves dependent on the distribution of the headman for the amount of their earnings, and individuals who worked hard were fined alike with the idle members of the gang for failure to perform the proper task. If the digger only were tasked, the number of carriers being left to regulate themselves and no definite task being exacted from them, all that was necessary was to measure the digger's work and to pay his carriers; if the work done was short, the carriers were fined along with the digger. This was done in some places for a short time before receipt of the final orders of Government on the subject, but the same discontent continued, while the absence of check over the number of carriers allowed scope for swindling, and the measurement of the work done by individual diggers was as before. a lengthy undertaking. The large gang system and the payment to the gang as a unit was open to similar objections, and a satisfactory arrangement was not arrived at until the introduction of the small pit gang. Measurement was then possible and simple, as long as the proper arrangement of the pits was maintained. The gangs were small, and composed for the most part of relatives or kinsfolk, thus removing the objections to the innocent members being fined for the lazy with whom they had no interest or connection. The power of the pay muharrir to inflict a fine for short work, however, still continued, and constituted a defect in the system. One great merit of the system introduced by Mr. Blackwood was the avoidance of this difficulty. The workers knew what they had to do and what they would receive on its completion, and the power of the muharrir to impose upon their ignorance was correspondingly diminished.

Wages.

For the calculation of wages two methods are prescribed by the Famine Code; after quantitatively describing the full and minimum ration for labourers, the full and minimum wage is defined as the amount of money which at the current rates is sufficient to purchase a full and minimum ration respectively. This amount can be calculated in two ways; either by totalling the money values of the several items of the ration, or secondly, by taking the money value of the "grain equivalent," by "grain equivalent" being meant the amount of grain of which the value is in ordinary times equivalent to the total value of the various items of the ration. In other words, the various items of the ration are, as a matter of convenience, reduced to a single basis and expressed in terms of a staple grain, the value of which represents the wage. The second method of calculation was that adopted in Bihar.

The maximum and minimum rations taken expressed in terms of chitaks by the standard weight, were as follows:—

Rate.	Class.	Adult males.	Adult females.	Children—
				Big.	Small.
1	2	3	4	5	6
		Ch.	Ch.	Ch.	Ch.
Maximum	B	19	17	9	6
	D	14	13	6	6
Minimum	All	14	13	6	6

The money wage so calculated varied in every district and in the same district from time to time according to the different staple which was taken as the grain equivalent. At an early stage, however, it was found that as long as the labourers were to receive a minimum wage, irrespective of the amount of the task done, there were large numbers who would rather rest content with the smaller wage than exert themselves to earn the full wages by performing the full task. The penal wage was therefore introduced in January as a fine for wilful and contumacious idleness, and if even this failed, it was to be followed by ejectment from the works. The people in Bihar with the traditions of 1874 still surviving, were at first disposed to think that Government was willing to support all who came to the relief works whether they performed any task or not. The Lieutenant-Governor therefore issued peremptory orders in January to the effect that those who were able to do a fair day's work and refused to do so, or to submit themselves to discipline, were presumably not in need of relief and need not be admitted on to the works. The issue of these orders was at first followed by temporary strikes, but as soon as it became apparent to the labourers that strikes hurt no one but themselves, they grew less in number and ultimately practically died out.

The average wages paid throughout the famine to all relief-workers of all kinds taken together varied very little in different districts, and is shown below:—

	Shahabad.	Saran.	Champaran.	Muzaffarpur.	Darbhanga.	Bhagalpur.	Sonthal Parganas.	Hazaribagh.	Palamau.	Manbhum.	Bankura.	Nadia.	Murshidabad.	Khulna.	Puri.

The expression "male unit" which frequently recurs in famine literature in connection with the relief works, denotes the unit arrived at by considering a woman as equal to three-fourths of a man, a big child to one-half, and a small child to one-quarter. In speaking of gratuitous relief, as will be shown later the corresponding term is adult unit, there being no difference recognised in this form of relief between men and women, and a child of whatever age being counted as half an adult.

Piece-work.

But the elaborate details of wages and tasks were superseded to a great extent during the later stages of the famine by the introduction of a system of piece-work. The system being condemned by the Code, it was not adopted generally at the commencement of operations, although in the relief works under the Maharaja of Darbhanga it was followed throughout. In February 1897 the Government of India, while discussing the principles that regulate expenditure on famine relief works, held that although where acute distress prevails and it is necessary to provide employment, not only for the able-bodied, but for a large proportion of inefficient labour, task-work must be rigorously enforced, yet when distress is not sufficiently acute to drive on to the relief works a large proportion of persons unaccustomed to work, payment by results is a more economical method than that of task-work. At the same time an intermediate system already in force in the North-Western Provinces, was described, which was in effect a system of petty contracts, although subsequently modified so as to dispense with the middlemen. At the request of the Government of India, the suitability of such a system to the circumstances of the affected districts in Bengal was considered, and finally in May the extension of a system of piece-work, subject to the supervision and measurement of the task by Government officials without the introduction of the petty contractor, was sanctioned on the relief works in the Presidency, Chota Nagpur, Bhagalpur, Rajshahi and Orissa Divisions, and in selected areas and works in the Patna Division. The advantages of the system were considered to lie in the avoidance of the necessity for the large establishment required on task-works with their complications of maximum and minimum wages and fines; the reduction of the numbers on gratuitous relief by enabling the able-bodied members of a family to earn sufficient to support their dependants; and the affording of all the relief necessary in tracts where distress was not acute, at a much less cost than under the provisions of the Code. At the same time a possible drawback to the system was recognised, in so far as it might be possible under it for able-bodied professional labourers to earn more than was actually required for the maintenance of themselves and their families, while the weaker portion of the population might be unable to earn sufficient for a bare subsistence. It was therefore decided to fix the rates to be offered with reference to the price of food, the quantity of it required to keep the labourers and their dependants in health, and the amount of work which a famine labourer might ordinarily be expected to perform. The rates thus prescribed, with rice selling at 9 seers to the rupee, and a lead of 50 feet with lift of 3 feet, were for—

	Rs.	A.	P.
Soft soil	1	12	0	per 1,000 cubic feet.
Medium "	2	4	0	ditto.
Hard "	2	12	0	ditto.

These rates were sanctioned as standards, with discretion to increase or lower them, and an allowance of an additional 3 annas per 1,000 cubic feet for every additional 50 feet of lead or 3 feet of lift. At the same time the names of the dependants of workers under the piece-work system were to be removed from the lists of gratuitous relief, and no work on a system of task-work was to be opened within a distance of at least five miles from a work so conducted.

Organisation adopted outside the Patna Division.

In the Bhagalpur Division, from the beginning of January till the end of May, the system of the Famine Code was followed; after that piece-work was adopted. In the Jamtara subdivision of the Sonthal Parganas, after starting with the organisation of the Code and developing into the system of the pit gang, the piece-work was finally resorted to; in the Deoghur subdivision piece-work alone was adopted. In the Chota Nagpur Division works were carried out on the piece-work system, except for a few weeks at the commencement in Hazaribagh and Palamau, where the amount of work which could be done in one day was restricted to a maximum. In Bankura works started on the Code system, but were converted into piece-work from July. Both systems were also in force in the affected districts of the Presidency Division; the piece-work system at the later stage.

Number and nature of relief works undertaken.

The following statement shows the number and nature of the Government relief works undertaken, whether by civil agency or under the supervision of the Public Works Department, in each affected Division:—

Division.	Wells.	Tanks and irrigation reservoirs.	Roads.	Railway embankments.	Embankments.	Roads on which metal collected.	Canals and irrigation channels.	Other works.	Total.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10

Bhagalpur ..	...	34	24	..	..	...	.	..	58

Orissa		28	2		11			1	42
Total ..	8	765	651	2	30	6	46	23	1,531

Out of a total, therefore, of 1,531 works undertaken, no less than 1,416 were either tanks and reservoirs, or earthwork on roads. Different local conditions determined the description of work to which preference was given. Thus in the Patna Division in Champaran, where the District Board was too poor to undertake the upkeep and bridging of expensive embanked roads, tanks were chiefly resorted to; in Saran, where there was a prejudice against tanks, and in Muzaffarpur, where special attention was given to improving communications, roads were the chief form of work; in Darbhanga roads and tanks were in about equal proportions. In the Chota Nagpur Division irrigation reservoirs were largely adopted as relief works; in Bankura attention was chiefly paid to roads, but in the Presidency Division, notably in Khulna, the improvement of the water-supply was held chiefly in view. In all Divisions the works undertaken are reported to be works of permanent utility. Communications have been improved by the roads raised and widened; the opportunities for irrigation have been vastly increased by the tanks and reservoirs dug, and at the same time the supply of drinking-water has been added to and purified. The earthwork of one railway (Sakri-Jainagar) has been finished, and fair progress made upon the embankment of another (Bettiah-Bagaha); in North Bihar great progress was made with five irrigation projects, the most important of which, the Trebeni Canal, will, when completed, render the whole of the north of the Bettiah subdivision in Champaran safe from famine; in the Chota Nagpur Division an important irrigation scheme from the Nadaura river in Palamau was taken in hand, and in the Presidency Division the excavation of the Bhairab Canal has immensely improved the water-supply of a large portion of the Meherpur subdivision.

Comparison between actual cost of relief works and the probable cost incurred if they had been executed under normal conditions.

It is difficult to say how far the cost of the relief works undertaken differed from the cost which would have been incurred if they had been executed in a normal year in the ordinary manner. Although in the later stages of the famine, and especially after the introduction of piece-work, careful estimates were prepared of the actual amount of earthwork to be done, and preliminary measurements taken, in the rush of opening new works at the outset with an untrained and inexperienced establishment, this precaution was very often omitted, and subsequent calculation was impossible in existing tanks which were being deepened, and not newly dug. The Commissioner of Patna is of opinion that, roughly speaking, the relief works probably cost a third more than they would have done under ordinary conditions. The Collectors of Bhagalpur and the affected districts of the Chota Nagpur Division, and of Murshidabad and Khulna in the Presidency Division, estimate that the works undertaken under famine conditions were done at the ordinary rates prevailing for execution of such works and in some cases at less than ordinary rates. The much smaller part played by task-work in these districts would presuppose better results than in North Bihar, but the calculation assumes that the measurements reported were absolutely correct. The Collector of Nadia estimates the cost at about 6 per cent. above ordinary rates. With regard to works conducted under the supervision of the Public Works Department, as was to be anticipated, the quality of work done from a professional standpoint was better than that upon the civil works. The supervising staff upon the works under the Public Works Department was as a rule stronger than that under the civil agency and in technical knowledge far superior. The same doubts as to the measurements recorded need not therefore be allowed for. The Chief Engineer states that the quantity of work shown as executed in all the Public Works Divisions may be accepted as absolutely accurate, satisfactory check measurements having been taken in nearly every case, while the cost rates of earthwork done as a whole did not differ materially from the normal contractors' rates of ordinary years.

Proportion of relief works open to area affected.

During the course of the famine the question was raised whether large works at a distance from the labourers' homes would not be preferable to a number of small ones near their village. It was suggested that the scattered character of the relief works added greatly to the difficulty of efficient supervision and to the enforcement of labour tasks, and that greater resort might be had to large works professionally managed. In reply, it was pointed out that the question of drafting off labourers to large works was one which had been left by the Government of India to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor, and that while instructions had been issued that it might be desirable to draft off able-bodied labourers to large works within reasonable distance of their homes, yet for those unaccustomed to labour and unable or unwilling to move long distances, works must be provided near their villages. At the same time it was not found desirable to lay down a hard-and-fast rule. In practice it was found impossible to concentrate labourers upon large works. With the exception of professional labourers the relief labourers would not go into camp taking their families with them, while there were not many large works available for their employment, and the depletion of the staff of the Public Works Department caused difficulties in finding the necessary establishment. Where relief operations had, as was the case, been undertaken in time, the difficulties of securing correct measurements and enforcing a task were minimised, and any attempt to alter the system adopted during the course of the famine would have been most disastrous.

The following statement shows the average number of square miles to each relief work in each affected district at the time when the maximum mumber of works were open:—

Division.	District.	Average number of square miles to each work.
Patna	Shahabad	163·2
	Saran	43·81
	Champaran	32·47
	Muzaffarpur	22·42
	Darbhanga	15·46
	Whole Division	29·1
Bhagalpur	Bhagalpur	29·4
	Sonthal Parganas	50·8
	Whole Division	42·35
Chota Nagpur	Hazaribagh	35·71
	Palamau	83·27
	Manbhum	82·27
	Whole Division	67·34
Burdwan	Bankura	32·9
Presidency	Nadia	27·5
	Murshidabad	7·9
	Khulna	12·8
	Whole Division	17·5
Orissa	Puri	18·05

No general conclusion can be drawn from the results in Shahabad, Murshidabad, and Khulna, where distress was essentially localised. Apart from these two districts, the average number of square miles to a relief work varied from 83·27 in Palamau to 15·46 in Darbhanga.

The relative advantages of small works near the labourers' villages and large works on to which the labourers can be drafted with the advantage of the distance test, have again been considered in the light of the experience of the famine, and the opinions of the District Officers in North Bihar are unanimously in favour of the policy which was adopted. The matter is summed up by the Commissioner as follows:—

"I am strongly of opinion that in a tract of country where the conditions are such as prevail in Bihar, it is impossible to enforce such a policy. The population is excessively dense, the people almost entirely agricultural, and extraordinarily averse to movement from their villages. I feel no doubt that if only large works were opened at long intervals, the result would be that numbers of those who are in real need of relief would refuse to go to them at the cost of leaving their homes and holdings: if the policy were persisted in long enough, starvation would eventually drive a certain number to the works, abandoning everything, but before this happened great mortality would have occurred, and the survivors would arrive in an emaciated and reduced condition, incapable of executing a fair task and more fit for gratuitous relief than for labour; meanwhile the fields would be deserted and the crops lost, since it would then be impossible for the cultivators to return to their holdings, as they did with such conspicuous alacrity in 1897, in order to take advantage of the changes of the seasons, opportunities often fleeting and uncertain, but of inestimable value to the agriculturist. In a word, I believe that if the distance test be insisted on, Government would bring about a result exactly contrary to that which is its avowed object to compass, and that, instead of driving scarcity away and maintaining intact the spirit and status of the people, it would demoralise and disintegrate the whole country side, and convert scarcity into famine."

Fluctuations of numbers upon relief works and comparison with the famine of 1873-74.

The rise and fall of the total numbers in receipt of all kinds of Government relief have already been briefly referred to. The following statement shows the daily average numbers month by month upon relief works only as compared with the figures of 1873-74:—

Month.		1873-74.	1896-97.
November	...	5,281	3,893
December	...	49,051	21,990
January	...	113,224	157,235
February	...	284,690	254,531
March	...	674,074	264,670
April	...	1,295,816	309,365
May	...	1,694,142	376,295
June	...	1,198,908	360,698
July	...	632,259	218,181
August	...	426,077	109,402
September	...	242,079	35,426
October	...	...	8,672

In both famines alike the average daily numbers were highest in May, or just before the breaking of the monsoon, but the maximum numbers in the recent famine were not quite one quarter of those of 1873-74. Another point which the figures clearly illustrate was the unusual rush to the works during the recent famine in January. The numbers in that month were more than seven times as large as the numbers in December, while in 1873-74 the corresponding increase was not threefold; after January the figures during 1897 rose and fell in a much more even fashion than in 1874. Considering the figures broadly for the affected area as a whole and ignoring local variations, caused by special influences, the effects of the seasons are clearly manifest. In January the great rise is attributable partly to the cessation of field employment,—the rice-cutting was mostly over, and there was little to be done to the rabi; partly to the fact that arrangements had been made for opening of new works as distress manifested itself. In February similar causes were at work, and there was again a large rise. In March the cutting of the rabi harvest caused a check in the rate of increase, though deepening distress prevented the figures from falling. When the cold-weather crops were off the ground there was a steady rise in numbers throughout April and May. The turning point came in June, but the decline was slight, as a copious fall of rain was delayed till the end of the month. After June, each month saw a continuous and rapid dwindling in the numbers, and as field work offered itself, and the new crops came into the market, there was no difficulty experienced in getting the people to leave the works and resume their ordinary employment.

Percentage of women and children on the works to total workers.

The proportion of women and children to men among the total number of labourers on the relief works is of importance in considering the relations between diggers and carriers. It has been already mentioned how the normal preponderance of women and children over men in the North-Western Provinces led to the system there adopted of tasking the digger only, resulting in the carriers being often left with but a nominal task to perform. In these Provinces the importance of exacting a task from the carrier as well as the digger was borne in mind from the first, and Mr. Higham, C.I.E., after the enquiries ordered by the Government of India, has given it as his opinion that—

"there is no doubt that the carriers are much more heavily tasked here than elsewhere, and that they have to work as hard as the diggers . . . . . ., and it cannot be said that the carriers being taken as they come, do only a nominal task."

The following statement shows the proportion between men, women, and children on the works during the whole period of operations:—

	Shahabad.	Saran.	Champaran.	Muzaffarpur.	Darbhanga.	Bhagalpur.	Sonthal Parganas.	Hazaribagh.	Palamau.	Manbhum.	Bankura.	Murshidabad.	Nadia.	Khulna.	Puri.

The only districts in which some inconvenience was felt in forming pit gangs from the excess of women and children over males were Shahabad and Saran. From both these districts a considerable temporary emigration of the male members of families goes on for the crop-cutting in Eastern Bengal and elsewhere, and it was their women-folk and children who were left behind who crowded upon the works. The percentages varied as the famine went on, showing a natural tendency to rise as distress deepened, and latterly when at the breaking of the rains, the men went off to field-work; on the other hand, piece-work had a tendency to increase the proportion of men. In Khulna, and Murshidabad, women would not work on the relief works.

Proportion of workers on wages irrespective of task to total workers.

The final classification of labourers into B and D classes has already been referred to, but in addition there remained those who, although attendant on the works, were shown in the returns as employed on a daily wage without the exaction of any task. They were of two descriptions,—the old and infirm, physically incapable of performing any allotted earthwork task, and put on to odd jobs, such as breaking up clods, dibbling in grass, and generally dressing off the work, which required no skill and little exertion; they formed an intermediate class between the D class labourers on the one hand and those in receipt of gratuitous relief on the other, and were as a rule remunerated with the minimum wage. In dressing and turfing, however, a task in superficial feet was usually insisted on; but, as the work so done could not be shown in cubic feet, it did not appear in the returns as task work. Secondly, those who were capable of doing work requiring more intelligence than the ordinary unskilled labour of digging and carrying, but which did not lend itself to the setting of a task, such as assisting to lay out tasks, building huts, mending tools, going on messages, carrying water, etc. Such workers usually received the full wage, and sometimes a little over. A careful scrutiny of the numbers of such labourers was at all times maintained, as the nature of their work lent itself to fraud upon Government, and whenever it appeared that the proportion upon any work was becoming excessive, enquiries were immediately instituted. The following statement shows the percentage of such labourers in each affected district to the total number of workers during the whole period of operations:—

District	Percentage	District	Percentage
Shahabad	23·02	Palamau	4·43
Saran	26·4	Manbhum	15·87
Champaran	12·13	Bankura	4·01
Muzaffarpur	26·36	Murshidabad	4·2
Darbhanga	20·7	Nadia	13·4
Bhagalpur ...	10·19	Khulna	21·4
Sonthal Parganas ...	7·7	Puri	18·0
Hazaribagh	2·39

The cases of such districts as the Sonthal Parganas, Hazaribagh, Palamau, Bankura, and Murshidabad, in which the numbers on task-works were small, are exceptional. Certain general considerations appertain to the figures as a whole in regarding the proportion they bear to the remaining tasked workers, which in an ideal system of famine relief should obviously be as small as possible. In the first place, from about April all those who received the Sunday wage without work were classified under this head, or, in other words, a number equivalent to one-sixth of the number of task-workers Further, on the Jubilee holidays all who were on relief works received wages without the performance of any task, and were shown in this class; the same was the case after the breaking of the rains on days when work was impossible. In some districts, too, at the beginning of operations carriers were classed under this head. But the period when the proportion of those on wages without task rose considerably with relation to the tasked workers was when the closing and finishing off of works commenced. The diggers and carriers then decreased daily, while the petty staff recruited from famine labour had still to be maintained, and the gangs to finish off and dress up the work had, if anything, to be increased. Another circumstance which affected the numbers from whom no task was taken was the proportion of tank work to road work, there being more dressing to be done on the latter than the former. On a consideration of these and similar circumstances, the Commissioner of Patna is of opinion that the real number from whom no task was exacted may be put well below 10 per cent. of the total number on the works.

Castes of workers upon the relief works.

No systematic enquiry into the castes which came to the relief works was possible amid the more urgent demands of the other details of famine work upon the time of the local officers. Some local enquiries were, however, made. In Saran it was found that the majority upon the registers were Chamars, Noonias, Jolahas, Dusadhs, Binds, and Ahars; in other words, the low labouring castes. The higher castes of Brahmans and Rajputs were few. On the other hand, in Champaran it was found that a considerable number of persons of the better castes attended, and also of petty cultivators as distinguished from the landless labourers. In North Bhagalpur, again, the peculiar caste characteristics of which have already been referred to, the landless labouring class predominated. In Hazaribagh the Collector found that about 10 per cent. of the workers had never before worked for wages. In Bankura the majority of the workers were professional labourers and labourers well accustomed to do earthwork. In Khulna it was found that petty cultivators attended the works, and that the Pode population in many places held aloof. The Commissioner of Patna, with his advantages of inspection of many works in different districts, is of opinion that about 75 per cent. of the relief workers were drawn from the class of landless labourers, some 15 per cent. from petty cultivators, with about 5 per cent artisans and 5 per cent. high caste men. Probably this is as near an approximation to the facts as can be arrived at.

Outturn and wages paid upon task-work.

Such being the arrangements in force for the efficient management of the relief works and the proportions of the different classes upon them, it remains to be considered how far the works were practically successful in obtaining a reasonable outturn for a moderate wage. The following statement for the workers upon task-work during the whole range of operations will show the daily outturn of work obtained, the cost rate per 1,000 cubic feet, and the wage paid, as reported by the local officers:—

N.B.—There was no task-work in the Chota Nagpur Division.

So many different elements enter into the calculation that the comparison of inter-district results is apt to be misleading; the proportion among works undertaken of roads to tanks, with their long lift and heavy lead; the proportion of adult males among the workers; the quality of the soil, and as to cost, the different rates of wages in different districts, are all considerations which affect the results to a varying extent in different districts. All that need be said generally is that the outturn per male unit was remarkably good, and that it showed a gradual tendency to increase and cost per 1,000 cubic feet to decrease, as the famine went on and the discipline upon works was perfected. The marginal figures for each month of the famine of the divisional daily average outturn per male unit in the Patna Division, in which by far the greater part of the task work was done, clearly indicate this progressive improvement. The remarks of Mr. Higham, to whose enquiries reference has already been made, may be quoted as independent testimony to the efforts which were concentrated in Bengal upon this important part of famine administration:—

" . . . . 'The narrative reports afford evidence of the close attention paid by all officers to the tasking and outturn of work. I believe it may safely be said that in no other Province are the full tasks for a minimum wage so heavy or as fully worked up to as they have been in Bihar. This is partly due to the high proportion of men to other workers and to the character of the works, which, as a rule, permit the employment of a high proportion of carriers, but a great deal is undoubtedly due to the vigilant attention paid to the daily outturn for each male unit. Nor can it be said that the task-workers receive a higher wage than elsewhere."

With the exception of the Chota Nagpur Division, where the work was practically wholly conducted as piece-work, and to the extent already indicated in the Bhagalpur, Burdwan, Presidency and Orissa Divisions, the system of piece-work upon large works was practically confined to the Patna Division. Piece work in that Division, except for a short time on some small works under the Civil Agency in the Samastipur subdivision of Darbhanga, was introduced upon the marginally noted large works, all of which were in charge of the Public Works Department, and a comparison of the results obtained under piece-work and task work respectively by that Department with its advantages of a more highly trained supervising staff under both systems, gives therefore a fairer basis for comparison than by deductions from the smaller works under the civil agency, which were to some extent, as regards the Chota Nagpur Division, at least, subject to different local peculiarities. The system did not have the complete trial which might otherwise have been given had it been understood from the first that such a departure from the Famine Code would have been permitted, but the general weight of opinion, where the means of judging were best, is distinctly in its favour as opposed to task-work. In the Patna Division the opinion in favour of the system is almost unanimous. In the Bhagalpur Division the Collector of Bhagulpur was distinctly in its favour, and so to a less extent was the Deputy Commissioner, Sonthal Parganas. In the Chota Nagpur Division the peculiar local conditions rendered piece-work a necessity; the strong dislike of the aboriginal people to any form of regulated labour, and the means at hand in the existence of jungle produce of supplementing a partial diet, had task work been attempted, would, have led to universal idling in the hopes of obtaining the minimum wage with which the people would have been quite satisfied. The Collector of Bankura is strongly in favour of piece-work, and the only adverse opinions are expressed from the Presidency Division. The advantages of the system are various; the people understand it and prefer it; the necessity for large petty establishment is removed; the elaborate classifications of labour and of maximum, minimum and penal wages which lend themselves too readily to fraud on the part of the subordinate staff, are avoided; the relief-worker is able to support his dependants, and the numbers on gratuitous relief are to that extent diminished; and lastly, the work is cheaper and more efficient. That the average daily wage was higher under the piece-work system was expected, and in fact intended; the wage or task work is calculated to support the worker only, but one of the objects of piece-work is that by hard work the labourer will earn sufficient to support his dependants. The merits of the system are thus summarised by the Hon'ble Mr. Glass:—

"The Engineers engaged on works in the recent famine are unanimously of opinion that piece-work is the most suitable form of employment for able-bodied persons on famine works at all times. At the outset of a famine, when distress is not acute, piece-work is the most certain preventive against people flocking to the works who are not really in need of relief; and it has, besides, the advantage of putting a stop, in a great measure, to the fraudulent designs of muharrirs and other subordinate employes, who are only too ready to avail themselves of the opportunities afforded by the task-work system for embezzlement. It is well known to all who have had experience of relief works in this and previous famines that the class referred to are corrupt in the extreme, and that no inconsiderable portion of the expenditure finds its way into their pockets. At the commencement of a famine it is quite impossible to prevent peculation when relief is afforded on the task-work system. Everything is more or less in a chaotic state, and until order has been brought about, the opportunities for embezzling are numerous. Even when order has been introduced, the system is such that dishonest persons find no difficulty in attaining their ends. It is the general opinion of Public Works Officers engaged in the recent famine that it is not possible to prevent swindling altogether when work is carried out on the task system. The dishonesty of the underlings is not the only objection to it It involves the maintenance of a large and expensive establishment for the purposes of mustering the people, making and checking measurements, and the keeping of accounts. It also involves considerable interference with the labourers which they do not like, and much of their time is wasted (from the labourers' point of view) in forming the gangs, calling the muster-rolls, and setting the people to work. All these disadvantages practically disappear under the piece-work system."

On the other hand, that the system has disadvantages was fully recognised. It is exceedingly difficult to determine a rate which will allow the inexperienced and weakly labourer to live and at the same time not allow the professional labourer to make a profit on the work, although a system of piece-work on different rates for different classes can be adopted, as was actually shown to be practicable, or piece-work can be supplemented by a system of petty task-work for the weakly and their dependants. A second disadvantage of the system is that it is very difficult to prevent the petty contractor creeping in: the mate of a gang easily degenerates into a contractor's servant, although this difficulty too was met by making the gangs smaller. Further, there is a tendency for professional labour to drive others out of their gangs. That women and children on a piece-work will be in less proportion was anticipated, and the actual results exemplify this most clearly. Finally, in so far as it is calculated that the wage will support a labourer and his dependants, in the case of any worker unencumbered by dependants the balance over and above what is required for his personal maintenance is so much clear profit to him and unnecessary expense to the State.

The rates of outturn obtained by the Public Works Department do not call for detailed comment. In Darbhanga and Madhubani the higher rates under task work were due to the preponderance in these divisions of work on tanks with their long lead and excessive lift; in Saran the figures of cost include all expenditure upon works, and not only that upon wages; the mean rate if adjusted would probably be less than Rs. 3-8 per 1,000 cubic feet. Under the system of piece-work the outturn per male unit on the different works was singularly uniform, the high figure attained in Nadia being due to the fact that nearly all the labourers were able-bodied men, and that there were practically no women or children. Allowing for reservations on account of varying lift and lead, the outturn is both higher and the consequent rate per 1,000 cubic feet uniformly lower than under the task work system of the Code, the only exception being the district of Muzaffarpur, where the rates for task-work were throughout exceptionally low.

Competition between relief works and private works.

In the course of the famine a complaint was made with especial reference to the Moghalsarai-Gaya Railway, in the district of Shahabad, that the famine works were attracting labour from it to the more profitable employment on Government relief. The line ran through an affected area; and had fair rates been offered, there would have been every reason to suppose a supply of labour would be forthcoming, but on enquiry it was found that the Company had started with a rate of Re. 1-8 per 1,000 cubic feet to contractors, including dressing. The rates compared to normal rates were low at any time; with grain selling at the price it it was, they were prohibitive, and insufficient to afford a bare subsistence to the workers. The Company had to raise its rates to Re. 1-12, Rs. 2, and ultimately to Rs. 2-8, at which point labour was secured. As soon as a reasonable rate was offered, Government works in the neighbourhood were closed, so that any possibility of competition might be obviated.

CHAPTER VII.

GRATUITOUS RELIEF.

The classes of persons who are considered entitled to the receipt of relief gratuitously are, broadly speaking, those from whom it is impossible to exact any form of task in return, but the provisions of the Famine Code define them more precisely, and the following classes are included, provided that they have no relatives able, and by the custom of the country bound, to support them:—

(c) The blind.
(d) All who from age or physical weakness are incapable of earning their living.
(e) All persons whose attendance on the sick or on children in their own homes is absolutely necessary.
(f) Respectable people who are reduced to starvation.

In the distribution of gratuitous relief several different methods of procedure were adopted. In this, as in other matters, Sir Alexander Mackenzie while insisting everywhere on the observance of the fundamental principle of saving life at the least possible cost to the State, thought it wise to leave a large discretion in details to local officers, knowing that no one Procrustean rule or method would be found suitable to the infinite variety of condition, habits, customs and prejudices prevailing in provinces of the vast extent of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa. In some districts all the methods described below were in vogue at one time or another of the famine; in others, some only were adopted, local conditions being the predetermining cause in each case. The different means of distribution may be stated as follows:—

(a) Village relief by money or grain doles.
(c) Relief at poor-houses.
(d) Relief of dependants on works.

History of the procedure adopted in different districts.

In the Patna Division the first step taken towards giving gratuitous relief was the allotment of small advances to police officers with instructions to relieve all urgent cases. The measure was temporary only, anticipating the general organisation of relief establishment in the district. As charges and circles were mapped out and manned in the manner already described, the circle officers were provided with maps and details of the villages under them, with which their first duty was to make themselves acquainted. In the meantime lists of persons who were considered to be suitable recipients of gratuitous relief had been collected through the police, the village panchayats and chaukidars. These lists were made over to the circle officers, with orders to visit every village, muster the people named on the list, and by inspection and enquiry satisfy themselves that they were fit to be placed in receipt of such relief. The check by the circle officer was as far as possible repeated by the Charge Superintendent, and the lists were subject to constant scrutiny by every superior officer who had occasion to visit the locality. The lists once prepared, days and centres of distribution were fixed, at which it was the duty of the circle officer to attend and to personally supervise the giving of the doles of grain or money, but usually grain. These central distributions in their turn were subject to constant supervision by the superior officers. The system was primarily based on minute house-to-house enquiry in the villages, the work of the actual person enquiring being subjected to constant check by higher paid officers. The importance of this check was realised from the beginning, and as soon as the organisation of relief works was sufficiently advanced to free Charge Superintendents from more pressing duties, it was the subject of special and unremitting attention. Notably in Champaran and Muzaffarpur, but generally in all the districts of North Bihar, the greatest assistance in checking the lists was derived from the volunteer supervision of the indigo planters, whose intimate acquaintance with the circumstances of the people in the neighbourhood of their factories, made their services especially valuable. Although the greater part of the gratuitous relief given was in the form of grain and money doles to the people in their villages, poor-houses were started at an early stage, but for reasons which will be stated more in detail later, they were never largely attended. Relief in kitchens, originally intended primarily for travellers and wanderers, also played an important part in the later stages of the famine, especially in the maintenance of children. Dependants, meaning the dependants of those who were working on relief works, but unable to work themselves, were relieved by money doles on the works. This form of relief was never encouraged and obtained most on works under the Public Works Department. Relief to artisans was not given in the Patna Division. In the Bhagalpur Division lists of recipients of gratuitous relief were drawn up and weekly distributions of grain were started in the Bhagalpur district on a similar system to the village relief of the Patna Division. In the Sonthal Parganas lists were framed by local Committees and checked by the Charge Superintendents after which tickets were distributed, entitling the holders to receive so much grain from a shopkeeper. The latter on producing the tickets as vouchers was paid the price of the grain. In the Chota Nagpur Division gratuitous relief in Hazaribagh was given practically entirely in kitchens, and to urgent cases of travellers along the Grand Trunk Road, through the police. In Lohardaga what relief was given was distributed for the greater part in kitchens, and to a small extent also by doles. In Palamau the large area of scattered distress caused a different system to be evolved. Committees were formed at each thana and outpost, usually with the local zamindar as Chairman, who undertook a house-to-house enquiry in the villages under them and the preparation of lists of suitable recipients. A panchayet was then appointed in each village, who undertook the relief of the persons named in the list by a system of small permanent advances. Parda-nashin women and artisans were relieved from the charitable fund. Similar local Committees were also formed in Manbhum, but cooked food was also given in kitchens, and weavers were also relieved by paying them for cloth woven or by a system of advances. In Bankura lists were prepared through the agency of police and panchayets, subject to check by a supervising officer, and weekly distributions held, which were presided over by a reliable local agent, either a Government servant or a volunteer. Kitchens were also opened at a late stage. In the Presidency Division no gratuitous relief was given in the Murshidabad district from Government funds. In Nadia the village system similar to that adopted in Bihar was followed, supplemented by kitchens towards the end of the famine. In Khulna the village system was adopted, together with the establishment of poor-houses, which were more successful here than elsewhere. Relief was also given to weavers. In Puri the village system was adopted.

Average daily numbers on gratuitous relief.

The following statement shows the average daily numbers in receipt of gratuitous relief of all kinds during the whole period of the famine operations and the corresponding figures of 1873-74:—

During the famine of 1873-74 gratuitous relief was not started till January, nor was it fully organised until April, but in the recent famine the organisation, which had been started in December, had already reached considerable dimensions in February. On the other hand operations during the recent famine closed a month earlier than in 1873-74. It is to be observed that while the maximum numbers on relief works in 1874 were more than four times as great as in 1896-97, the numbers in receipt of gratuitous relief in the latter year approximated more closely to the figures of the former famine. The explanation is not far to seek. While gradually deepening distress has the result of increasing the numbers alike upon relief works and gratuitous relief, the circumstances affecting the course of the two systems of relief are not in all respects identical. The average daily numbers upon gratuitous relief were first in excess of those upon works in May, and thenceforth, excluding the month of October, when operations were being wound up, remained so practically till the end of the famine; again while the daily average upon relief works reached its zenith in May, the numbers upon gratuitous relief did not touch their highest point until June, succeeded by a very small falling off in July. The classes who are entitled to the gratuitous relief consisting of the lame, blind, halt, the sick, the aged, and of professional beggars, constitute a more or less fixed percentage of the population who even in ordinary times, are dependent upon the charity of their neighbours for subsistence. As the relief organisation was extended and the increasing pressure of distress caused the springs of private charity to dry up, this portion of the population was bound gradually to drift on to the Government lists. Once there, they were obliged to remain until favourable prospects and cheaper prices opened out other sources of charity. It is for this reason that while upon relief works, the breaking of the monsoon caused at once a falling off in the numbers of the able-bodied who could find employment in the fields, the numbers on gratuitous relief did not decrease to any marked extent until August, and even in September were considerable.

During the course of the famine doubts were at one time felt by the Government of India, whether, in view of the numbers upon relief works compared with the numbers upon the gratuitous list, the latter form of relief was not being overdone. In reply it was submitted that there is no necessary connection between the numbers upon relief works and upon gratuitous relief, the former being more or less a fixed percentage of the population, and the latter varying with the strictness with which the labour test was enforced, the possibility of obtaining employment outside of the Government relief works, and the general staying power of the population of the distressed areas; and even assuming that there were such connection, the relative proportions in the districts of Bengal did not differ materially from those in other districts in other parts of India. The percentage of the population upon gratuitous relief did not exceed what from à priori considerations of the conditions of the affected tracts might reasonably be estimated as probable, being about the same as the percentage of the population in poor-houses in England. Apart, moreover, from the constant attention and supervision which had been directed from the commencement by the local officers from the Commissioners downwards, to the checking of the lists and the removal of names improperly placed upon them, Sir Alexander Mackenzie and the Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens, when Officiating Lieutenant-Governor, had both satisfied themselves, by personal inspection, that the principles of relief laid down in the Famine Code had neither been departed from in theory nor exceeded in practice. Independent testimony to the same effect was borne by gentlemen unconnected with the provincial administration. Mr. James, writing of Champaran, remarked :—

'We drove to see a relief work . . . . and then watched the distribution of gratuitous relief. All present were obviously suitable objects of relief, being composed principally of helpless men, poor women, with a number of small children and weakly men and boys.'

Again, Mr. Higham reported after his visit to these provinces :—

"During my tour, therefore, I endeavoured to see as many as possible of the people on village relief . . . . I can . . . very confidently assert that, among all those inspected by me, there was not an individual who was fit to be sent to the works, or to be given only the most nominal task."

The Government of India ultimately expressed themselves fully satisfied with the administration of this, as well as of other branches of the relief administration in Bengal.

The highest percentage was reached in Nadia, where 13·27 of the population of a particular tract were at one time upon gratuitous relief, after which came Shahabad with 6·35 per cent. The highest aggregate number reached was in Darbhanga where, on the 26th June, 109,619 persons were upon the gratuitous relief lists. With regard to the district of Nadia, the excessive numbers being gratuitously relieved at once attracted the attention of Government, and it was feared that, owing to the insufficiency of the supervising establishment and to relaxation in the case of Muhammadan women, of the rule which required all able-bodied persons to work as a test of their being in distress, gratuitous relief at one time was being overdone. Additional officers were at once deputed, and the Officiating Lieutenant-Governor as already remarked, ordered a rigid scrutiny of the lists, after a personal visit to the district. The result of these measures and of the reaping of the early autumn rice, was that the numbers were largely reduced. The circumstances of Shahabad were exceptional: relief here was started somewhat later than elsewhere, and the people were, consequently in worse condition at the early stages of the famine; the temporary migration of the male members of families in this district has already been referred to, and their women and children were left to swell the list ; further, the physical condition of the affected tract is at all times very low, and lameness and paralysis among the men (said to arise from eating the khesari grain) is very prevalent. In Darbhanga, the poverty and extraordinary density of the population are to be remembered in considering the numbers gratuitously relieved, and the results attained in the relief operations conducted by the Maharaja of Darbhanga, with all the facilities possessed by his subordinates for accurate knowledge of the circumstances of the persons relieved, showed by their similarity to the results on the Government lists, that relief was not being overdone.

	Whole Division	8 87	50·29	40·83
Orissa Division	Puri	15·4	25·8	58·7

A noticeable point is the constancy of the proportions in different Divisions, with the exception of the Presidency Division, where the small proportion of men and large proportion of women gratuitously relieved was, as already remarked, due to the fact of women having been allowed to receive this form of relief instead of being forced on to relief works.

No regular statistics were generally collected of the particular causes which brought the various recipients on to the gratuitous relief lists, but in the Patna Division, an analysis was made in some typical circles. The enquiry was undertaken in July, when this description of relief was at its highest. The results were as follows:—

District.	Number of circles.	Number of villages in the circle.	Persons in receipt of gratuitous relief on 1st July 1897.	Cause of disability.
				Lunatic or idiot.	Cripple.	Blind.	Decrepit from age.	Pardanashin women.	Orphans and destitutes.	Other causes.

Darbhanga	31	798	30,309	·82	3·25	3·66	32·56	6·44	2·88	50·36

The number shown under "other causes" was practically almost entirely made up of children; after them, the most numerous class were the aged, then pardanashin women, most of whom were made over ultimately to the care of the Charitable Relief Committees, and after them cripples and orphans. At the same time, information as to the caste of those on gratuitous relief was collected. It was found that the true cultivating castes of Kurmis and Koeris were not largely represented; the Brahmans and Rajputs forming the bulk of those relieved as purdanashin were not numerous, and practically the bulk of those relieved were of the lower labouring castes. Similar detailed enquiries were not made in other Divisions, but as far as information is available, it would appear that the majority of those gratuitously relieved by Government everywhere were of the low-caste indigent labourer and beggar classes.

Analysis of the different methods of gratuitous relief.

The following statement shows the part which the different methods of offering gratuitous relief, already indicated, played in the general scheme:—

The heading "otherwise relieved" includes every variety of gratuitous relief except such as was given in poor-houses and kitchens and to dependants on works. The greater part of such relief consisted in the distribution of grain or money doles at the people's homes, but minor varieties are included, such as the payment of Re. 1 a month to chaukidars, who it was soon found were suffering from the inability of the villagers to pay their ordinary wages. Still, in every district except Hazaribagh, the village distribution was the backbone of the system. Relief to dependants of workers upon the works was kept within the smallest possible limits. It was found that such people were altogether out of place upon the works, where their presence merely hampered the organisation of the labour and the exaction of the tasks. It was much easier in every way to relieve them in their villages, and in fact towards the end of February definite orders were issued to that effect, although a certain number of small children who could not be separated from their parents, together with a few old people to look after them, had throughout to be allowed to come on the works.

The proportion which dependants bore to the total number of relief-workers is shown below:—

Shahabad	16·29	Bhagalpur	5·1
Saran	4·7	Sonthal Parganas ...	4·5
Champaran	6·32	Bankura	·09
Muzaffarpur	4·84	Nadia	24·5
Darbhanga	6 09	Puri	·9

The piece-work system followed in the Chota Nagpur Division left no room for dependants. The high percentage in Nadia is due to the fact that relief to children was at first granted in this way, but the system was stopped in July and kitchens opened for them instead. The large proportion of women and children to men in Shahabad would account for the figures in that district. Generally speaking, therefore, dependants formed less than 5 per cent. of the number on works.

The part played by poor-houses, with the exception of those in the Khulna district, was small. A poor-house may fulfil two objects, either affording a test of the necessity for relief by submission to residence within it, or offering a means of punishing contumacious relief-workers. For the first purpose the test was considered too severe, or, as the Collector of Saran describes it, "the poor-house is primarily a test of prejudice and only secondarily a test of distress." It was found generally that residence in a poor-house was regarded with the utmost repugnance by even the lowest castes, and what inmates there were consisted mostly of wandering beggars and the destitute sick. As the Collector of Champaran points out, their chief use was as infirmaries. As a method of punishing unruly workers they failed in the absence of any power to enforce detention. The experience of Khulna was exceptional: the Collector did not find caste prejudices against residence in a poor-house so strong as elsewhere, and was able to a great extent to use the poor-house as a test of the real necessity for relief.

Kitchens as a method of relief were resorted to to a considerable extent, though chiefly towards the later stages of the famine. As soon as distress deepened, a considerable deterioration in the condition of the children was noticed, the inference being that their adult relatives were appropriating their doles. To meet this difficulty the distribution of food to children in kitchens was found of the greatest value. Towards the end of the famine, moreover, the acceptance of cooked food at a kitchen was found a suitable test in curtailing operations. Relief to travellers, especially in such districts as were traversed by the Grand Trunk Road, was most conveniently offered in this form.

Roughly speaking, both poor-houses and kitchens were found to be more expensive forms of relief than doles either in villages or to dependants on works. To some extent attempts were made to get something from the persons gratuitously relieved in the form of light labour, such as spinning, weaving, string-making, etc., but as a whole it was found that the results barely justified the trouble taken.

CHAPTER VIII.

LOANS AND ADVANCES.

Loans under the modified rules of the Land Improvement Loans Act.

It has already been mentioned in the course of this narrative that one of the early measures adopted by this Government at the commencement of the famine was the modification of the rules under the Land Improvement Loans Act, so as to allow of loans on specially favourable terms within the areas officially declared as distressed, to land-owners and substantial raiyats for the excavation of tanks and other works of improvement, such as are required for relieving distress, and especially for improving the supply of water for drinking and irrigation. It was provided that the loans should be given free of interest and repayable in five years; and that if the work was completed to the satisfaction of the Collector, one-third of the principal would be subsequently remitted. It was hoped that advantage would be largely taken of these concessions, and that many labourers would thus obtain employment who otherwise would find their way to the Government works. The aggregate amount advanced in loans under these special rules was a little over three lakhs of rupees.

The advances in the Patna Division were taken advantage of very slightly. The proposal seemed to have been regarded with suspicion, and it was possibly feared that Government by paying portion of the cost of such works would have some claim to a right of property in the works or in the land on which they might be situated. In some instances the works were not carried out to the satisfaction of the local officers, and the experiment was not on the whole very successful. But when it is remembered that landholders in Bihar carried out from their private funds many works that afforded relief; that they paid up their land revenue in full during the year, and that their collections of rent must have been very short, it is not a matter for surprise that they did not embarrass themselves by largely resorting to Government for loans for carrying out works of improvement. No complete statistics are available of the numbers to whom labour was afforded in this way. In the Bhagalpur Division the people of North Bhagalpur seemed to require no stimulus to start petty works of the description which the rules were designed to encourage, and without practically any advantage being taken of these loans, small works were opened everywhere by private persons, and the Collector reports that of his personal knowledge over 200 private tanks were at one time being excavated or re-excavated in North Bhagalpur. In the Sonthal Parganas loans on the special terms were eagerly sought after, and the amounts advanced would have been larger were it not that the applicants were unable in many cases to offer adequate security. In the Chota Nagpur Division while the system did not work very well in Hazaribagh and Lohardaga, in Palamau and Manbhum the loans were eagerly taken up. In Palamau out of Rs. 43,125 advanced, it was estimated that work was done to the value of Rs. 40,227 and a daily average of 3,345 labourers employed for about four months. In Manbhum the daily average employed for about the same period was approximately 2,200, and the total amount advanced Rs. 42,610. In the districts of Nadia and Khulna in the Presidency Division the loans were eagerly applied for, and to a less extent in Murshidabad. In Khulna the works were carried on from January to July, and an average daily number of 1,200 employed; in Murshidabad the numbers averaged 1,500 daily between the middle of April and middle of June. Figures for Nadia are not available.

Ordinary loans under the Land Improvement Loans Act.

In addition to the sums advanced under the modified rules under the Land Improvement Loans Act, Rs. 1,07,135 during 1896-97, and Rs. 1,08,714 between April 1897 and November 1898 were distributed in the affected districts under the ordinary terms. The figures are those supplied by the Accountant-General, Bengal. The works done seem to have been mostly of the nature of tanks, banahs, and irrigation channels.

Loans under the Agriculturists' Loans Act.

Under the Agriculturists' Loans Act, a total sum of Rs. 11,35,872 was advanced when the distressed area during 1896 97 and 1897-98. In view of the special circumstances of the year, the existing restrictions which limit the amounts advanced for such loans to Rs. 2 per acre of land held by the applicants was raised by Government in May to Rs. 3, and the restriction that loans should not be given to raiyats with holdings of 2 acres or less, was removed. Most of the advances were made on the joint and several security of the residents of a whole village, and were in the majority of cases given for the purchase of seed, though in the cold weather of 1896-97 money was also advanced for the encouragement of irrigation. In considering the total sums advanced, the large sum of over eight lakhs distributed as gifts and loans by the Charitable Relief Committees, should be remembered. Loans were not granted in Darbhanga, where the Collector thought that they were not required, and that the establishment necessary to enquire into the applications was not available; in this district also the Maharaja of Darbhanga advanced nearly six lakhs to his own tenants. Otherwise, with the exception of the Nadia district, they were freely distributed everywhere. The figures as to the number of persons who received these loans are very imperfect, but from such materials as are available it appears that the average amount advanced per family varied from Rs. 9-11-1 in Khulna to Rs. 5-10-5 in Champaran.

Bounties for wells.

A bounty of Re. 1 on every kutcha well dug was sanctioned by Government in December 1896 with a view to encouraging the irrigation of the rabi crops, but the concession was not largely availed of. The proposal had particular reference to the Patna Division. In this Division the expenditure incurred in this way in 1896-97 was Rs. 6,793 in Muzaffarpur and Rs. 665 in Champaran, or a total of Rs. 7,458. In the greater part of Darbhanga there is a prejudice against irrigation from wells; in the Bhabhua subdivision of Shahabad the soil is not suitable for these wells, and in Saran the raiyats are ready enough to construct and irrigate from wells without special inducement. Many wells too were dug out of the sums advanced as ordinary agricultural loans.

Loans for importation of grain.

The granting of loans for the importation of food-grains will be considered along with the general course of the traffic in food-grains in the Province, and the circumstances explained under which these loans were found necessary in Palamau, Hazaribagh, Nadia, and Puri. Elsewhere no stimulus to the import of food-grains was required.

Opium advances.

The economic effect of the cultivation of opium, in the districts of the Patna Division, has already been referred to, and the payment of the opium advances made during the year 1897, although in no sense a special measure of relief, was obviously of the greatest benefit to the recipients during the prevailing distress, causing the circulation of a large sum of money in the affected districts, just when it was most required. The following amounts were advanced during the year:—

		Rs.
Shahabad	...	2,59,488
Saran	...	4,28,605
Champaran	...	3,17,703
Muzaffarpur	...	1,68,512
Gaya	...	9,37,847
Patna	...	2,96,867
Monghyr	...	2,95,757
Total	...	27,04,779

In the matter of relief by loans there was almost as great a departure from the policy adopted in 1874 as in the matter of the importation of grain by Government. As has been already shown above, the amounts advanced during the recent famine in the affected districts were—

Comparison between amounts advanced on loan in the recent famine and in 1873-74.

	Rs.

Under ordinary rules of ditto	2,15,849
Under Agriculturists' Loans Act	11,35,872

In 1873-74, calculating the price of the grain advanced at 8½ seers to the rupee, the cost rate given by the Famine Commissioners, the total sums advanced in the distressed districts amounted approximately to—

	Rs.
In grain	1,34,75,000
In cash	30,03,000
Total ...	1,64,78,000

or far more than the total expenditure under all heads on the famine in 1896-97.

CHAPTER IX.

EXPENDITURE AND ACCOUNTS.

System of accounts.

At the outset of the famine the expenditure upon the relief works undertaken, was for a short time borne by the District Boards. As, however, it speedily became evident that the resources of the District Boards would fall far short of the requirements, and that the bulk of the expenditure would ultimately fall on Government, estimates were called for from the various Commissioners and submitted to the Government of India in February, though revised estimates were subsequently submitted in March. The estimates for 1897-98 were sanctioned by the Government of India, and general authority given as regards 1896-97 to spend whatever might be required on the recognised methods of relief. Allotments to the affected districts were made monthly on receipt of estimates of requirements. Within the districts themselves Charge Superintendents worked on a system of permanent advances, with smaller advances from them to their circle officers, the advances being recouped at intervals after submission of the necessary bills. Some confusion in the accounts was caused at first, until some necessary modifications of the account rules as contained in the Famine Code, were finally decided on, and a special officer of the Accounts Department was appointed to travel round to the affected districts, explaining the system. The Public Works Department opened a special branch accounts office at Muzaffarpur, which was found of great use. The forms of accounts in use in the Public Works Department differed somewhat from those in use in the civil works, a circumstance which gave rise to some confusion and delay when works were to be transferred from one to the other, and has subsequently caused some difficulty in the classification of accounts on a uniform basis.

Arrangements for supply of coin.

No special arrangements were found necessary for the supply of coin on the relief works. Copper coin was obtained on indent from Calcutta and sent out under police guard to the different works. The police force had to be strengthened in most districts for the purpose, but no case occurred of loot of coin en route. The only additional treasury opened was at Jhanjharpur in the Darbhanga district.

Actual expenditure.

A detailed statement giving figures of expenditure is included in the appendices. It is necessary to give here a brief summary only of the noticeable points. The net result of the relief operations from first to last, reducing the persons relieved to terms of one day, shows that in the 15 affected districts 61,018,611 people were relieved for one day on works and 70,783,120 gratuitously, or a total of 131,801,731, while in districts in which distress was apprehended and test works opened, although famine was never officially declared to exist, relief on works was given to 277,239 people and gratuitously to 284,963. For the Province, therefore, as a whole, 61,295,850 persons attended the relief works, and 71,068,083 persons the gratuitous distributions, or a total of 132,363,933 in terms of one day. The total expenditure on relief works exclusive of expenditure in the nature of bounties and advances, amounted to Rs. 1,08,03,758, of which Rs. 4,78,235 was met from the funds of the District Boards, and Rs. 1,03,25,523 from the general revenues of Government. The expenditure may be classified under the following main heads:—

	Rs.
Wages of workers and contingencies	62,99,245
Gratuitous relief	32,00,287
Establishment	8,85,446
Tools and plant	4,09,785
Compensation for land, trees and crops	8,995
Total ...	108,03,758

The average daily cost per head of expenditure on the wages of workers excluding contingences amounted to 1 anna 4·9 pies per diem, and the average daily gratuitous dole to 8·6 pies per head; while the total daily cost per person relieved exclusive only of the compensation paid for land and crops, amounted to 1 anna 3 pies. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the cost per head per day was very moderate, but he does not think that this should be regarded in itself and without regard to other considerations as a crucial test of efficiency in the administration of famine relief, for it is manifest if all or a majority of labourers failed to perform the prescribed tasks and were put on the penal wage, that the cost per head would be reduced below what was intended or desired. Inclusive of the bounties paid on grain and the cost of grain imported by Government, bounties paid to encourage the excavation of kutcha wells, and advances to grain importers and under the modified rules of the Land Improvement Act, most of which will be recoverable, the grand total of expenditure amounted to Rs. 1,12,52,005, or, in other words, to one crore and twelve lakhs. The accounts are still subject to minor adjustments by the local officers, and contributions by District Boards may possibly be slightly increased, but for all practical intents and purposes the figures may be taken as correct.

In the estimates sanctioned by the Government of India there was no special provision for compensation for land, bounties on grain imported, and the cost of Government grain, and the expenditure under these heads was met from general savings. The following statement shows the actual expenditure as compared with the estimates sanctioned by the Government of India for 1897-98, plus the actual expenditure during 1896-97 for which the actual, and not the estimated expenditure, was sanctioned by the Supreme Government:—

	Estimate. Rs.	Actual. Rs.	Saving. Rs.
Relief works and gratuitous relief, salaries and establishment ...	1,12,93,093	1,09,61,981	+3,31,112
Advances under the modified rules of the Land Improvement Act ...	11,92,522	2,82,566	+9,09,956
Bounties for wells	4,467	7,458	—2,991
Total ...	1,24,90,082	1,12,52,005	+12,38,077

Under the main head of the relief operations therefore the estimate was singularly accurate; the circumstances which influenced the expenditure under the remaining two heads are set forth in another part of this narrative.

For the estimate of the numbers likely to require relief of any description, the only complete data upon which some forecast could be founded were for the Patna Division, and the subsequent results showed that the forecasts of numbers in North Bihar and Shahabad submitted to the Government of India in February were as nearly correct as could be expected. The estimates for Bihar were based on the assumption that 120 millions would have to be relieved for one day. The actuals were one hundred and ten millions.

Comparison with the expenditure during 1873-74.

The nett expenditure by Government in the famine of 1873-74, as given in the report of the Famine Commissioners, was Rs. 6,61,00,000. The difference of expenditure, therefore, on the two famines has been nearly five and-a-half crores.

CHAPTER X.

PRIVATE RELIEF.

With regard to private relief, as distinguished from the larger operations of the Indian Charitable Relief Fund, and confining the term to the assistance given by the zamindars and leading inhabitants of the affected districts to their raiyats and dependants in whatever form it was offered, it would be unjust to make any general assertion unfavourable to any class in any of the distressed districts. It will be shown subsequently in the course of this narrative that the payment of land revenue and cesses was not seriously affected by the famine. Government found it necessary to give but few remissions of revenue, and the petty zamindar, hampered by difficulties in collection from his raiyats, must have been at times himself pressed to pay up the Government demand. All classes, too, rich and poor, felt the pressure of the abnormally high prices, and the general uncertainty and apprehension as to the future, raised to a certain extent a not unnatural disinclination to expenditure of money beyond what was absolutely unavoidable. With those reservations, it may be said generally of the Patna Division, apart from the notable exceptions to be mentioned hereafter, that the ordinary zamindars made no great show of relieving their tenants. The European planters, however, who are also large landholders, displayed moderation in the collection of their dues, and in many instances conducted small relief works at their own expense in the neighbourhood of their factories. The assistance which they rendered gratuitously in the supervision of Government relief was also most useful, and has already been acknowledged by the Lieutenant-Governor. But all other private efforts taken together in the Patna Division were surpassed by the princely benefactions of the Maharaja Bahadur of Darbhanga who undertook to give relief to all who were in need of it throughout his estates. The scheme of relief organised by the Maharaja in Darbhanga and Muzaffarpur, consisted in the offer of labour on works on a system of piece-work at rates somewhat above the normal, to compensate for the dearness of grain, and the giving of gratuitous relief on very much the same lines as Government, with this difference that the Raj enjoyed the advantage of a village staff already on the spot, who possessed a personal acquaintance with the needs of the villagers and over whom they had various means of control. The maximum number of works opened by the Raj was 80, consisting for the most part of tanks and embankments upon which employment was given to an aggregate number in terms of one day of 2,834,848 persons, to whom Rs. 2,45,538 was paid as wages. The total cost of gratuitous relief amounted to Rs. 1,22,789, and a total number of 2,913,702 souls, in terms of one day, were relieved. The Maharaja Bahadur also distributed nearly 6 lakhs in advances. Government has already signified its high appreciation of this splendid liberality. The Court of Wards on behalf of the Hatwa Raj in the Saran district gave relief by works, grain advances, and gratuitous doles in kitchens and poor-houses. In all 28 works were opened, employing 789,236 people in terms of one day and involving an expenditure of Rs. 44,915 in wages, while Rs. 10,778 was spent on gratuitous relief equivalent to a distribution to 240,226 persons for one day. Eighty-four thousand eight hundred and thirty-two maunds of grain were distributed in advances to 30,523 tenants in 1,039 villages, which were of the greatest assistance. The other large zamindari of North Bihar, the Bettiah Raj, which is also under the Court of Wards, was not in a position to incur any great expenditure on famine relief. However, it spent in all Rs. 15,253 in maintaining a kitchen, excavating some tanks, and other forms of relief.

In the Bhagalpur Division a high tribute is paid by the Collector to the spirit of liberality displayed by all classes on this as on previous occasions of scarcity. The most conspicuous examples of such liberality were afforded by the Maharaja Bahadur of Sonbursa, who spent Rs. 34,000 on tanks and embankments, giving employment to about 5,000 persons for two months, and also distributed Rs. 9,000 in gratuitous relief; Rai Ganpat Singh Bahadur and his brother, Babu Narpat Singh, who spent on doles and other forms of relief Rs. 41,691, and remitted rents to the amount of about Rs. 40,000; and the Raja

Bahadur of Banaili, who expended Rs. 14,911 on works which, while affording labour, were also of benefit to the estate. In this district as in Bihar the Maharaja Bahadur of Darbhanga gave all the required relief to his own tenantry.

In the Sonthal Parganas the zamindars as a whole appear to have done a good deal in assisting their tenants, and Mr. Grant, Raja Ram Ranjan Chakravarty Bahadur of Hetampur, and Rani Kesobati Kumari of Huudwai and Rani Makhan Kumari of the Lachmipur estate are deserving of special mention. The many missionary agencies both here and in the Chota Nagpur Division rendered willing and valuable assistance to Government, and were strenuous in their efforts on relief. In the Chota Nagpur Division the zamindars of Hazaribagh and Lohardaga rendered but little assistance to their raiyats. The relations between landlord and tenant in this Division are in many instances strained, and the zamindars as a rule do not appear to have acted during the period of distress with much generosity. Palamau furnished a pleasing exception; the district is less advanced than others owing to its general remoteness, and the zamindars, many of whom retain their old ancestral properties, have always maintained a cordial sympathy with their raiyats, which is the more to their credit, as few of them are men of large means. The Deputy Commissioner mentions eight gentlemen who between them spent Rs. 47,855, and relieved on an average about 2,085 people daily for some five and a half months. Foremost among them were Raja Thakurai Bhagwat Dayal Singh of Chainpur and Rai Thakurai Gobind Prasad Singh Bahadur of Ranka. In Manbhum the zamindars are as a class too impoverished to do much in the way of relief. In Bankura there are no wealthy zamindars; and although a few came forward to assist their tenants, no one was able to do anything on a large scale. In the Presidency Division the landlords of Nadia did little to help their raiyats. In Murshidabad there are many liberal and public-spirited zamindars who came forward to assist, notably the late Maharani Surnomoyee and the Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad. The Court of Wards estate of Cossimbazar spent some Rs. 30,000 in excavation of tanks, affording employment to from 1,000 to 1,200 persons daily, besides advancing Rs. 4,000 in loans. In Khulna the land-owners did not as a body show any special leniency to their raiyats, but the Hon'ble Justice Chandra Madhub Ghose of the Calcutta High Court both gave gratuitous relief and undertook relief works on his estate, and Rai Hari Charan Chaudri of Nakipur gave great help to his tenants by advances.

CHAPTER XI.

RELIEF FROM THE INDIAN FAMINE CHARITABLE RELIEF FUND.

Preliminary organisation of charitable relief.

As soon as it became apparent that the Province was face to face with famine, the organisation of private charitable relief, as distinct from relief from Government funds, was considered by the Lieutenant-Governor and actually taken in hand by some local officers in anticipation of the expression of the views and wishes of the Supreme Government on the subject. A nucleus of a Provincial Charitable Relief Fund existed in the balance of Rs. 35,334, which was in hand from the Bengal Distress Relief Committee—a Committee which had been organised by Sir Steuart Bayley's Government—and grants from this fund were supplemented by subscriptions locally collected. Distribution through local Committees on varying systems, according to local requirements, was started in the districts of the Patna Division with the exception of Muzaffarpur and Champaran; in Nadia, Jessore, and Khulna in the Presidency Division; in Rajshahi and Bogra, Hazaribagh and to a very small extent in the Sonthal Parganas.

The Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund.

The inauguration in India of the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund at a meeting held in Calcutta on the 14th January 1897, and presided over by His Excellency the Viceroy, was speedily followed by the formation of a Provincial Committee for Bengal, acting under the direction of the Central Executive Committee. The Provincial Executive Committee, which, as originally formed, included 32 members, representative of all sections of the community, under the Chairmanship of the Hon'ble Mr. C. C. Stevens, C.S.I., first met on the 28th January, and under its instructions active steps were taken in all districts to organise local machinery for the distribution of charitable relief.

System and scope of organisation.

The Committees formed provisionally at the outset of the famine were merged in the District Relief Committees formed under the Charitable Relief Fund; new Committees were formed elsewhere, and eventually a Committee was formed in every district of the Province. The District Magistrate or Judge was usually Chairman, but in one or two instances the post was filled by non-official gentlemen. The details of organisation varied, but ordinarily, subordinate to each District Committee, were formed local Sub-Committees for subdivisions or municipalities, and in the most distressed areas for thanas. Most of the local men of influence found a seat upon these Committees, members of which were drawn from all classes and professions. The organisation for charitable relief was not confined to the fifteen districts officially recognised by Government as distressed. To confine it to those districts was impossible. Every district in the Province was affected by the high range of prices, and almost every district contained areas where the crops had failed in whole or in part, and where "distress which just falls short of absolute destitution prevailed." In all these districts there was ample and legitimate scope for the operations of the Fund, and eventually in every district, with the exceptions of Hooghly, Darjeeling, Backergunge, and Balasore, some expenditure was incurred on relief, especially of the respectable poor. The actual disbursement of the money and giving of relief were entrusted to the District Committees. The duties of the Provincial Committee were confined to the distribution of funds between the various districts and the general supervision of District Committees; the collection and examination of periodical returns of expenditure and of persons relieved, the compilation of such returns for the Province, and the general settlement in communication with the Central Committee of the principles of the administration of charitable relief. In the town of Calcutta, however, relief was actually administered by the Provincial Committee, through the Commissioner of Police and one or two native gentlemen, and on a more extensive scale by the erection of sheds for the accommodation of destitute paupers in connection with the Campbell Hospital, and the provision of rations and comforts for a daily average of 200 persons.

Objects of the Fund.

The objects to which the Fund might be applied were settled by the Central Committee in concert with the Government of India, and may be summarised as follows:—

(1) To supplement the subsistence ration provided by public funds by the addition of small comforts of food and clothing.
(2) To provide for the maintenance of orphans.
(3) To relieve the respectable poor, who will endure privation rather than apply for Government relief accompanied by official enquiry and the enforcement of a test.
(4) On the subsidence of distress to restore sufferers to their original position, and to give them a new start in life.

Receipts of the Provincial Committee.

The details of the administration of charitable relief funds will be found in the full and interesting report drawn up by the Provincial Committee. Here it will suffice to mention a few of the salient facts.

The total amount received from the Central Committee amounted to Rs. 17,93,750, while Rs. 70,959 was "earmarked" for the Province. The total amount collected by the Provincial and District Committees amounted to Rs. 4,70,137 for expenditure in the Province and Rs. 30,976 for the benefit of other Provinces and the whole of India generally. Besides these amounts, it must be remembered that some of the largest subscriptions to the Indian Central Committee's Fund in Calcutta were given by the wealthy residents of Calcutta and Bengal for expenditure on India generally, which are not included in the sums mentioned. Sir Alexander Mackenzie is glad to be able now to say that the confidence which he expressed at a Darbar held at Belvedere on the 8th December 1896, that "Bengal will turn out to be inferior to no Province in the liberality of its rich men and the providence of its landholders," has been justified by subsequent events. The total of miscellaneous receipts amounted to Rs. 1,42,958, and the Provincial Committee therefore had at its disposal a total sum of Rs. 24,77,804.

Expenditure.

The statement below exhibits the expenditure incurred by the different District Committees from the funds at their disposal, whether raised locally or received from the Provincial Committee or otherwise:—

EXPENDITURE.

	Rs.	A.	P.
Object I	2,03,511	3	8
" II	13,155	5	2¼
" III	8,83,188	5	9½
" IV	8,09,947	9	3½
Miscellaneous	24,594	7	5½
Total ...	19,34,396	15	4¾

Including sums expended direct by the Provincial Committee, the total expenditure up to the 31st October 1897, subject to such final adjustment of the accounts as may be necessary, amounted to Rs. 19,46,480. As might have been expected, expenditure was largest in the four districts of North Bihar. Expenditure in districts other than the 15 districts officially declared distressed amounted to Rs. 3,99,507. When it was found in September that the monsoon rains of the year were all that could be desired, that owing to the success happily attending the Government operations the famine orphans to be maintained would be few, that the prospects of the coming crops were better than could have been expected, and that with a bumper harvest in view, private local charity could again be trusted to support the destitute poor, the Provincial Committee were enabled to refund to the Central Committee a sum of Rs. 2,75,000 for expenditure in provinces less favourably situated in these respects. The total outstanding balance on the 31st October 1897 with the Provincial and District Committees amounted to Rs. 2,56,324.

Distribution under Object I.

The details of distribution in different districts varied largely according to local conditions. Thus under Object I numbers of wanderers along the Grand Trunk Road were relieved in Gaya and Burdwan in kitchens; in Monghyr numbers were relieved in a travellers' rest-house; elsewhere doles of food were made to the destitute, while little extra comforts and clothing were given to these classes and to those in receipt of Government relief in poor-houses and on relief works. Kitchens were also largely resorted to.

Distribution under Object II.

The maintenance of orphans absorbed only a small portion of the Fund in Bengal. The mortality of the year being in no appreciable degree above the normal rate, and the number of deaths directly due to famine being extremely small, the number of famine orphans was insignificant. In the whole Province 8,202 orphans are returned as having received relief under this heading, but of these the majority had lost their parents previously to the famine, while there are grounds for suspecting that in many instances children were put forward and classified as orphans whose parents were living and earning money on the relief works. Arrangements are being made for the future maintenance of the orphans who will be left after the dissolution of the Fund; their number is estimated at about 106 only in the whole of these Provinces.

Distribution under Object III.

More expenditure was incurred on the relief of the respectable poor than on any other object of the Fund.

In the Durbar to which reference has already been made, held at Belvedere on the 8th December 1896, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, addressing the large gathering of native gentlemen assembled on that occasion, said:—

"I specially commend to your attention the small people of respectable standing who cannot dig and are ashamed to beg, the poorer bhadralog. For them let the tact and good-will of their wealthier fellow countrymen find suitable means of succour. The Government does not repudiate its own obligation to keep all classes of its subjects alive, but its methods are necessarily rough and indiscriminating, and into some classes of cases, it is hardly seemly for it to pry."

From the beginning therefore this form of relief was regarded as one of the primary and most beneficial objects of the Fund.

Relief under this heading took the form of gifts of clothing; provision of work, such as paddy-husking, cotton-spinning, cloth-weaving, etc., grain and money doles, the opening of cheap grain shops and other minor local variations of the above methods. In the administration of relief in the form of grain and money-doles, with a view to prevent the overlapping of Government and charitable relief, and to secure efficiency combined with economy, the Government agency of circle officers and Charge Superintendents was used to a considerable extent in the distressed districts. These officers already possessed village lists of persons deserving of relief and unable to go to the works, and it was the simplest and at the same time the safest arrangement to transfer the respectable poor, after scrutiny of the lists, to the books of the Charitable Fund.

Expenditure on Object IV.

The expenditure under heading IV, though large, bears, it is believed, a smaller proportion to the total expenditure than in other severely affected provinces. The reasons were twofold. In the first place, there was no large mortality among cattle in Bengal, and the need for the provision of funds to supply fresh cattle in the place of those dead or parted with under the stress of famine, was not so great as elsewhere. Secondly, there was some delay in the distribution of relief under this head owing to a difference of opinion that arose as to whether it should be given in the shape of loans or gifts. The greater part was eventually distributed as gifts, but in the Chota Nagpur Division and the districts of Khulna and Monghyr a certain amount was distributed as loans. Grants chiefly took the form of gifts for purchase of seed-grain and cattle, and a valedictory dole consisting of a small sum to all those in receipt of gratuitous relief when the relief operations were closed, the object being to give them a slight start till crops ripened. The enquiry into the numerous applications submitted for these grants was an arduous task, but here, again, the existing Government agency was utilised with good results. The local knowledge acquired by the circle officers in the course of the famine, and the enquiries already instituted on applications for Government loans under the Agriculturists' Loans Act were of the greatest use in testing the merits of each application.

Special care also was taken to have the distribution of these donations supervised by reliable official or non-official agency.

Miscellaneous expenditure.

The administration of the Fund was uniformly conducted by honorary and unpaid agency, and the expenditure on clerical establishments, stationery and contingencies, amounted to only 1·4 per cent. of the total expenditure.

Numbers relieved from the Charitable Relief Fund.

It is difficult to state exactly the total number of persons who have been relieved by the Fund. The form in which the statistics of persons relieved has been kept does not distinguish clearly between those to whom relief was continuous, e.g., in the shape of a weekly dole for a considerable period of the operations, or given once and for all, e.g., in the shape of a donation or loan with which to start afresh at the end of the famine. Attempts have been made in compiling the statistics to correct this defect by taking the average numbers relieved either daily or monthly, but this was not possible in all districts, and the figures are at best approximate. The compilation of statistics was also hampered by the untrained nature of much of the honorary assistance given. Roughly, however, the following figures show the number of separate persons who came under the influence of the Fund. Some of these enjoyed it for long periods, some for shorter, and some in the form of one substantial donation only, but it is not possible to give any accurate idea of the numbers relieved in terms of one day:—

Under Object	I ...	... 270,878
Ditto	II ...	... 8,202
Ditto	III ...	... 194,678
Ditto	IV ...	... 246,328
	Total	... 720,086

The figures vary from a total of 110,777 persons relieved in Darbhanga to 64 in Howrah. Close upon 70,000 people were relieved in each of the districts of Champaran and Muzaffarpur, 61,000 in Saran, and over 40,000 in Khulna, Gaya, and the Sonthal Parganas In the 15 districts officially distressed 521,680 persons were relieved, and 198,406 in the remainder of the Province.

A rough approximation of the numbers relieved in terms of one day may be arrived at by taking the expenditure under objects I and III, and assuming that one anna supported one person for one day. Similarly for orphans the expenditure under object II may be taken at the rate of half an anna per child per day. On this basis the numbers relieved in terms of one day would amount to approximately 18,000,000.

The average donation distributed under heading IV amounted to Rs. 3-4.

General.

As to the general result of the operations of the Fund, the Commissioner of Patna observes:—

"The efforts of the Committees, working with the assistance of the local officials, have succeeded in distributing the large sums at their disposal to very great advantage. It would be presumptuous and absurd to assert that there has been no peculation and no fraud and deceit, but I believe that there has been little of either; while, on the other hand, I am confident that the funds have been wisely administered with for the most part a scrupulous care and economy which was scarcely to be expected at first."

The outcome of the operations of the Charitable Fund in these Provinces may be summed up in the words of the Provincial Committee:—

"It has fulfilled the purpose for which it was raised. It has lightened the burden of suffering in multitudes of simple homes. It has stretched out a friendly hand to thousands who held aloof from the colder and more formal charity of the State. And if the gratitude of these has not been loudly proclaimed, it is none the less sincere and abiding. The donors of this munificent charity need feel no fear that their splendid gift was unneeded or unwelcome, or that it has failed to bring forth its full fruit in due season for—

"'In charity there is no excess: neither can angel nor man come in danger by it.'"

CHAPTER XII.

FOOD-STOCKS AND TRAFFIC IN FOOD-GRAINS.

Importation of grain by Government during the famine of 1873-74 compared with 1896-97.

In no respect does the famine organization of 1896-97 differ more completely from that of 1873-74 than in the relations of Government to the grain trade. From the outset of the famine of 1873-74 the necessity of Government undertaking the importation of grain into the distressed areas was contemplated as probable, and at an early stage it was considered as certain "that while private trade was doing all in its power in many directions with the greatest public advantage, yet there were extensive limits of territory within which it was powerless, and in which there was a general demand beyond its means to supply." Government therefore entered in 1874 upon the task of importing grain to supplement the efforts of private trade. Estimates of the requirements of each district were framed, an elaborate transport system, with a strong reserve train to supply the deficiencies due to casualties, was organised, and the purchase of grain on behalf of Government for the most part in British Burmah was commenced. While the Government of India undertook the task of purchasing the grain over seas and landing it in Calcutta, on the Local Government devolved the task of landing it in the distressed districts. Some idea of the magnitude of the operations will be conveyed by the fact that at the height of operations 88 European military officers and 2,116 native officers and soldiers were engaged in supervising the transport, with a train of over 100,000 carts, some 14,000 pack-animals, 2,300 country boats, and 23 steamers. The Government importations (inclusive of the reserve in Calcutta) amounted to 480,000 tons, of which roughly 345,500 tons were eventually distributed. Out of a total gross expenditure of Rs. 9,91,00,000 incurred on the famine, no less than Rs. 7,00,40,000 was incurred in the promotion of the private grain trade, the purchase of Government grain, and the maintenance of the transport train. Against this may be set the recoveries by sale of grain amounting to Rs. 2,62,40,000 and a sum of Rs. 62,50,000, recovered as the price of grain advanced on loan to raiyats, but even then, there was a balance of some Rs. 3,75,00,000 debitable to this branch of the relief organisation; or in other words the net loss to Government on the grain transactions alone of that year amounted to more than three times the total expenditure by Government on the famine of 1897. It is then manifest that one chief cause of the greater economy with which relief operations were conducted in 1897 lay, in the policy of non-interference with private trade. This policy, which would have possibly failed in 1873-74, was only rendered practicable in the recent famine by the extension of railways and general improvement of communications that has been effected since that time. The fact that a saving of nearly four crores of rupees in famine expenditure has in this way, been brought about affords a remarkable illustration of the wisdom of spending the Famine Insurance Fund on protective public works, instead of hoarding it to be wasted on expenditure connected with hasty and expensive arrangements for transport of food in years of actual distress.

Enquiries as to existing food-stocks.

At the very outset of the famine, when the prevailing high prices commenced to attract attention, and by reason of the existence of scarcity in other parts of India the likelihood of food-supplies coming in from provinces other than Burma seemed to be greatly diminished, instructions were issued to all District Officers to institute systematic enquiries as to the stocks in hand, and to endeavour to forecast the possibility of a depletion of food-stocks under the effect of rising prices. The method of enquiry prescribed was the ascertainment as far as possible of the amount of stocks of food-grains believed to be in hand; the aggregate addition to the food-supply expected from the winter rice and rabi crops, in the two events of the November rains failing or not; the requirements for consumption of the entire population for the coming year, and the probable deficit to be supplied by importation, or probable surplus which might be available for export in each district. At the same time, it was again declared that Government did not intend to import grain, as was done in 1873-74, or otherwise to interfere with private trade, but that it desired to assist the mercantile community in forecasting approximately the extent to which it might be profitable to import grain from foreign countries. The enquiry was carried out everywhere with thoroughness and minuteness, and a vast amount of valuable information was collected, upon the basis of which, after scrutiny and check, a note summarising the results for the Province was compiled in the Agricultural Department. In forwarding the results of the enquiry to the Government of India, the Lieutenant-Governor observed that while it was never expected that anything like correct quantitative estimates would be obtained of the food-stocks in hand, or of the surplus or deficit in each district above or below the requirements for local consumption, the object of the enquiry had been attained. By the concentration of attention on these subjects, this Government was put in a position, notwithstanding the want of village patwaries or other village revenue officials, such as are available elsewhere, to forecast from the reports of local officers the extent and intensity of the distress and the cost of relieving it, with a far greater approach to accuracy than had ever previously been attained in these provinces, and, it is believed, with as close an approach to the actual requirements of the situation as was attained during the present famine in any other province of India. It is not proposed to discuss in detail the estimates then framed. Here it is sufficient to say generally that the districts in which it was reported that there would be a deficit have in fact had to import food-grains, while those in which it was reported that there would be a surplus have been able to export to districts less favourably situated.

Effect of the famine year on the trade of the Province.

Before proceeding to examine the actual results as shown by the figures of registered traffic in the districts in which famine was acute, it will be instructive to examine briefly the changes wrought by the famine in the course of the trade of the Province as a whole. Detailed information will be found in the appendices attached to this report, but the net results may be briefly summarised. Taking, as will be done throughout for the purpose of comparison, the period from November 1896 to October 1897 as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year, the import trade in food-grains of the Province as a whole, inclusive of the local inter-district traffic, increased in round numbers from 1,245,000 tons to 1,660,400 tons, and the export trade from 1,271,000 tons to 1,330,000 tons. At the same time the net trade of Bengal, to and from outside countries and provinces, showed a total of 649,000 tons of food-grains imported and 664,000 tons exported, so that it appears that if there had been no drain from other Provinces on Lower Bengal, the deficit in the distressed districts might have been made good by the surplus from other parts of these provinces. The extent to which Bengal is in an ordinary year more than self-supporting is shown by the figures of net trade for the corresponding period of the previous year, when 758,000 tons were exported as compared with 271,000 tons imported.

But the effect of the famine will be more clearly shown by considering the sea-trade of the Province separately, and here we find that whereas in the previous year the Province imported 103,000 tons of food-grains by sea and exported 489,000 tons, in the period of famine it imported 470,000 tons and exported only 224,000 tons; in other words, while imports by sea increased by 356 per cent., exports by sea decreased by 54 per cent.

Turning now to the registered trade of the Province with other Provinces in India, including Nipal, Sikkim, Tibet and Bhutan, it appears that while imports fell from 261,000 tons to 235,000 tons, or by 9·8 per cent., exports increased from 272,000 tons to 444,000 tons, or by 63·4 per cent. The most noticeable fluctuations may be briefly referred to. From the North-Western Provinces imports increased by 25 per cent., but exports to the same Province increased by 62 per cent.; and while imports from the Punjab fell by 54 per cent., exports to the Punjab rose by 1,800 per cent. From the Central Provinces imports decreased by 33 per cent. and exports rose by 1,400 per cent. Imports from Assam increased by 33 per cent. and exports to the same Province fell by 10 per cent. Imports from Nipal, Sikkim, Bhutan and Thibet decreased by 52 per cent. The exports to these countries are insignificant. At an early stage of the famine, the Nipal Darbar had prohibited the export of food-grains; and although grain in large quantities which escaped registration, was smuggled over the border, the embargo must have had an important effect on the trade. The whole of the food-grains exported from Bengal is not comprised of grain grown in Bengal, but the drain upon this Province, which took place in the end of 1896, when famine appeared imminent all over India, was very large.

Effect of the famine on the ordinary course of trade in the distressed districts.

The course of trade in the districts officially declared to be distressed will naturally exhibit in a more marked degree the same features of increased imports and decreasing exports which characterise the trade of the Province as a whole.

Patna Division.

In ordinary times every district of the Patna Division except Saran is a large exporter of food-grains. Although the major part of the traffic moves by rail, there is a large boat traffic, notably on the Ganges to Patna; on the Sone canals; down the Gogra from the North-Western Provinces, and on the Gandak. There is a large cart traffic everywhere across the Nepal frontier, only a portion of which is registered, while much of the traffic of Shahabad goes from Zamania, a station outside the Province. Inter-district cart traffic is also important. Traffic by all these routes escapes registration, and the rail-borne traffic affords but an incomplete indication of the total deficit made good by importation of all kinds.

The following statement giving figures of the net excess of imports and exports exhibits the course of the rail-borne trade in the more acutely distressed districts of Bihar, as affected by the famine:—

District.	Net excess of Imports or Exports of each district in maunds—
	October 1895 to March 1896.	April 1896 to September 1896.	October 1896 to March 1897.	April 1897 to September 1897.
1	2	3	4	5
Shahabad	I 78,393	E. 2,83,857	I. 17,791	E 84,200
Saran	I. 8,171	I 29,840	I 7,47,688	I. 10,05,294
Champaran	E. 7,220	E. 5,681	I 80,163	I. 4,07,867
Muzaffarpur	E. 14,755	E. 6,039	I. 3,29,195	I. 6,63,521
Darbhanga	E. 90,174	E. 40,725	I. 31,005	I. 11,24,127

I = Imports. | E = Exports.

The comparatively small exports from Champaran in the period October 1895 to September 1896 are accounted for by the fact that the greater part of the export from this district does not go by rail. Shahabad, after the rabi crop of 1897, was able to export (though to nothing like the extent as after an excellent rabi crop in 1896), while Saran went on importing on an ascending scale; but the other three districts exhibit the same features of gradually dwindling exports up to October 1896, and from then onwards a steady and marked excess of imports. Of the three districts, Darbhanga was the last to show the change, and even up to December 1896 exports in this district exceeded imports. The influence of the famine is shown in the converting of districts ordinarily able to export, into districts importing largely for their food-supply. The net surplus of imports by rail over exports in the four northern districts of Bihar during the famine period October 1896 to September 1897 amounted to 160,700 tons. The amount of the imports by road and river is not known.

Bhagalpur Division.

The rich food-producing district of Bhagalpur at all times exports largely. The famine year was no exception to this rule; extensive and vigorous exportation of grain was the pronounced feature of the year. Directly the bhadoi crop was reaped, and the crop failure in other parts of India became a certainty, the local middlemen and outside agents competed with one another in buying up stocks for export. The trade remained brisk till March, when stocks showed signs of depletion. From October 1896 to March 1897 no less than 19,50,429 maunds of food-grains were exported by rail, against 49,323 maunds imported. From April to July imports increased largely, although still exceeded by exports, but with the good prospects of August and September, came round the normal state of affairs, and imports promptly dropped and exports were at once revived. The Sonthal Parganas, like Bhagalpur, is in ordinary times an exporting district, but the abnormal traffic early in the year depleted stocks, and in July and August imports exceeded exports by 34,300 and 35,800 maunds respectively.

Chota Nagpur Division.

The course of trade in the Chota Nagpur Division is not capable of as accurate definition as elsewhere. The Division is backward, and its general inaccessibility and remoteness from the line of rail have already been commented on, while so large a proportion of its trade is conducted by carts and pack-bullocks that in the absence of reliable statistics for this portion, any general view of its trade is necessarily subject to many reservations. The question how far the ordinary efforts of private trade would be able to meet the requirements of the Division was a more anxious and difficult one here than elsewhere. As early as January, the Commissioner (Mr. Forbes, C.S.I.), in view of the seriousness of the situation, and the alarm that was felt, in consequence of the unprecedented rise in prices (which were far higher than those prevailing in the neighbouring Patna Division), and the prohibition of export from the Native States, recommended the importation as a first instalment, of one lakh of maunds by Government agency, and its concentration at Maharajganj on the border of the Gaya district for sale to the general public. To this measure Government were unable to agree, and the Commissioner subsequently modified his proposals to the payment by Government of a bounty of 8 annas per maund on all Burmah rice imported, further enquiries in the Gaya district having given reasons for believing that the local merchants there would undertake to import on these terms. The proposal in this form was finally submitted to the Government of India in February, and received their sanction as an instance of the special cases in which Government interference was justifiable. From the outset the difficulties of transport prevented the traders from taking full advantage of the Government offer, and the amounts actually imported fell far short of what had been anticipated by the Commissioner. In April, therefore, with a view to encourage the Daltonganj merchants to join in the trade, from which the want of funds had hitherto debarred them, an allotment of Rs. 75,000 was sanctioned for loans for the import of grain, on the condition that grain should be brought from outside the district, and no more than Rs. 5,000 advanced to any one individual. During May the restriction of the bounty to Burmah rice was removed, and the privilege extended to all rice, but the difficulty of carriage still continued, and apprehensions commenced to be felt regarding the supplies of grain for Government relief works and gratuitous relief. Other measures were therefore decided on, and 15,400 maunds of Burmah rice were imported by Government viâ Gaya for use on the Government relief works and gratuitous relief only. With the advent of the rains in June, the difficulties of transport were immensely increased, and in July in view of the unmistakable signs of depletion stocks in Lohardaga it was determined to sanction a bounty of Re. 1 per maund up to a limit of Rs. 20,000 on all rice leaving Purulia for Ranchi within one month from 8th August. By the beginning of September, however, the prospects of excellent bhadoi and rice crops removed all ground for further apprehension.

With the exception of one circle in Nadia and a limited tract in Puri, Chota Nagpur was the only area during the famine in which the general policy was departed from, of trusting to private trade to import grain alike for famine labourers, gratuitous relief and general consumption. At one time, however, during May, in the affected area round Ramnagar in the Champaran district, a break-down in the railway traffic caused serious apprehensions as to the sufficiency of the food-supply, but under the prompt action taken traffic fortunately soon resumed its ordinary course. The total importations into Palamau under the bounty system from February to the end of August amounted to 14,227 maunds of Burmah rice and 5,465 maunds of country rice, the total bounty paid being Rs. 9,846. Of the total sum of Rs. 75,000 sanctioned for loans, for purchase and importation of grain Rs. 52,500 was advanced. In Lohardaga 11,050 maunds were imported under the system of bounties.

With regard to the course of trade in other districts than Palamau, which has been already noticed, the figures of rail-borne traffic in food-grains for the period October 1896 to September 1897 give the following results in the cases of Hazaribagh (viâ Giridih) and Manbhum :—

	Imports.	Exports.	Net excess of imports.
	Mds.	Mds.	Mds.
Hazaribagh ...	2,44,998	5,678	2,39,310
Manbhum ...	3,08,218	15,787	2,92,431

In ordinary years it is calculated that Hazaribagh imports about 2,00,000 maunds of food-grains and exports about 17,500, so the result of the famine was to materially increase imports and reduce exports to practically nothing. Manbhum on the figures of the rail-borne trade in rice for the years 1894—96 exports more than it imports; the famine had, therefore, the result of reversing the ordinary course of trade, but in considering the figures it is to be borne in mind that a good deal of the grain imported during 1896-97 went on to Lohardaga. Of the normal trade of Lohardaga, carried on as it is almost entirely by pack-bullocks through Palamau and Hazaribagh, it is impossible to give any accurate figures. All that can be said is that from October to December 1896 it exported largely; in January exports practically stopped, and in March imports began, and continued till September.

Burdwan Division.

The trade of the Bankura district is ordinarily very restricted, and is all by road. During the famine period exports were abnormally large, and practically exhausted stocks in the affected tracts necessitating the introduction of supplies from the unaffected areas, and to a small extent from Midnapore.

Presidency Division.

In the Presidency Division the figures of rail-borne traffic for the Nadia district, which appear to show a small excess of exports for the period February to September, are misleading, as the large import of grains by cart from Burdwan, which is estimated at 3,00,000 maunds at least, is not taken into consideration. The rabi crops are at all times largely exported, and it is a significant fact that although in the distressed areas the cultivation of rice exceeds by many times that of any other crop, yet the imports of rice and paddy largely exceeded the exports. At one time in one charge in this district rice gave out entirely, and the circle officers were unable to obtain sufficient for their requirements. As no local traders would come forward, a loan of Rs. 20,000 was made to a local grain merchant, and the import of rice by him from Calcutta relieved the situation. In Murshidabad the excellent crops in the "Rarh" enabled exports to exceed imports in every month. The statistics for the Khulna district are of little practical value. The figures for the boat traffic of the district are not available, and without them comparisons are useless. Of Burmah rice alone, it is estimated that not less than maunds 50,000 were imported. In ordinary years large quantities of rice are exported.

Orissa Division.

The district of Puri ordinarily exports largely and imports practically nothing in the way of food-grains, but the export by sea and rail during the famine period amounted to 108,000 maunds only as against 362,647 maunds during 1895-96. In the out-of-the-way parts of the distressed area round the Chilka lake, it was found necessary to stimulate the import of grain, and Rs. 3,100 was advanced on loan to traders for that purpose. In Satpara also Rs. 860 was spent in importing grain at Government expense for sale at cost price.

Burmah rice.

It is not possible to give any exact statement of the localities from which the supplies that poured in to meet deficiencies in the affected districts were drawn, but the total imports of Burmah rice into Calcutta during the period from November 1896 to October 1897 amounted to 85,11,756 maunds, or about 312,677 tons; the imports of Burmah rice in the previous year had amounted to 119 tons only. A good deal of this went up-country to other Provinces, but with the exception of Bankura and Puri, Burmah rice was imported to a greater or less extent into every affected district, the total of such imports amounting approximately to 25,00,000 maunds, as far as can be gathered from the figures supplied by local officers. In the Bettiah subdivision of the Champaran district, Burmah rice for many weeks became the staple food of the people. In the use of this rice the experience of all the affected districts was the same; it sold as a rule about one seer cheaper than country rice, but was not at first taken to by the people. As in the famine of 1873-74, various complaints were made about it—that it was watery, unsatisfying, and conducive to bowel-complaints. As time went on and pressure increased, these complaints died out.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE PRICES OF FOOD-GRAINS.

The course of prices of food-grains during the famine of 1896-97.

Not only did prices of food-grains in the affected districts commence to rise at an unusually early stage of the distress, but ultimately reaching a height which had never before been known, they remained practically at this level throughout the period of relief operations. Even when the famine was over and the excellent crop prospects had justified the cessation of Government relief, prices were slow in falling, and in spite of a bumper harvest, have not yet returned to the ordinary level. While the most striking features of these unusual conditions were manifest in the affected districts, the general range of prices in every district in the Province rose far above normal, causing great hardship to all classes, even though an actual state of famine was avoided. It was this circumstance which rendered the assistance afforded by the Charitable Relief Fund necessary and beneficent in nearly every district in Bengal.

The history of prices during the year is necessarily mainly statistical; the circumstances of each district have been elaborately analysed and compared in the district and divisional reports, and it is not necessary here to do more than indicate the most noticeable points which are suggested by the experience of all districts: the suddenness of the rise; its abnormal extent; and its unusual duration and scope, both as affecting the whole Province in area and every description of food-grain in degree. Nothing was more marked than the approximation of the ordinarily more expensive and cheaper grains to the same level—a fact which indicates that stocks of both sorts of grain had alike become depleted, and that the people had to content themselves with quantity, regardless of quality to satisfy their hunger, having had to pay the same prices for inferior and superior food alike. Prices in their general features ordinarily follow the course of the harvests, being cheapest just after the various crops are gathered and dearest just before the new grains come upon the market. In 1896, when the irregularities of the monsoon during July and August began to cause apprehension as to the outturn of the approaching harvests, the market commenced to get unsettled. When the failure of the September and October rains turned apprehension of loss into certainty, not only in this Province, but in the rest of India, prices under the influence of large purchases for export, went up with a bound. This is clearly shown by the price of rice in the affected districts on the 30th September and succeeding two fortnightly periods:—

As the cold weather went on, and the first panic was allayed, prices remained fairly steady, with a very slight tendency to grow easier as the winter rice, and the cold-weather crops, came upon the market. From March onwards, however, they again hardened, and reached their highest pitch towards the end of July, thence falling slowly as the prospects of the bhadoi improved.

	Shahabad.	Saran.	Champaran.	Muzaffarpur.	Darbhanga.	Bhagalpur.	Sonthal Parganas.	Hazaribagh.	Palamau.	Manbhum.	Bankura.	Nadia.	Murshidabad.	Khulna.	Puri.

These figures speak for themselves, and convey some idea of the severe pressure upon all classes. Common rice has been taken for the purposes of comparison for the Province as a whole in one common staple, although in the Patna Division the coarser grains and pulses, rather than rice, are largely consumed by the poorer classes. But the course of prices of one grain was the course of prices in all.

The highest price actually touched at any time by common rice at the head-quarters of each affected district is shown below:—

In the Chota Nagpur Division prices in Lohardaga and Palamau touched a height which the Commissioner is probably right in saying was unknown during the famine in any other part of India. On the 31st July rice was selling in Lohardaga at 4 seers and under to the rupee, in 29 different marts in the interior of the district, and on the 15th August at 20 marts in the district of Palamau, at 5 seers and under.

Course of district average prices of common rice and maize in the affected districts during the famine period as compared with the normal.

The annexed chart has been prepared illustrative of the normal course of the average district average prices of common rice and maize, as compared with the actual results of the famine period in the fifteen affected districts.

It will be seen that common rice at the beginning of October starts at a normal average of 15 seers to the rupee, falls slightly in December and January with the in-coming harvest, and rises to its highest point of 13½ seers in the end of July. During the famine year it started at the corresponding period at 11 seers, rose at once to 9½ and 10 seers, remaining fairly steady at that point till the end of March, which saw another rise to 8 seers, at which prices remained, until in September they fell again slightly to about the level of November in the previous year. Maize in its normal course is cheap in October, as the harvest has not long been reaped. It then rises steadily, but with small fluctuations, till it touches the level of 18½ seers in July, from which it falls to 22 and 22½ seers as the harvest again comes round. During the famine period at the commencement of October, the price of maize stood at 15 seers. It then rose rapidly to 11 seers in January, at which approximately it remained till March. Then followed a further rise culminating in June-July at 8½ seers, or at a price nearly as high as that of rice, after which the new harvest and excellent prospects induced a rapid fall. The chart illustrates clearly the characteristics of the famine period; a range of prices uniformly much above the normal; the sudden rise in October-November, the steadiness of prices between January and March; the further rise in March, culminating about June-July, and the subsequent decline, fairly rapid in the case of maize, but slow in that of common rice.

Comparison of prices with those prevailing in the famine of 1873-74.

In comparing the prices prevalent during the recent famine with those prevailing in the famine of 1873-74, it is necessary to remember that a large rise in normal prices has taken place in the intervening 23 years, but, allowing for that fact, the following statement still indicates how much higher was the general range of prices during the recent famine. Taking the four typical periods as above, the percentage of increase in the price of common rice over its price for the corresponding period of 1873-74, is shown below :—

	Shahabad.	Saran.	Champaran.	Muzaffarpur.	Darbhanga.	Bhagalpur.	Sonthal Parganas.	Hazaribagh.	Palamau.	Manbhum.	Bankura.	Nadia.	Murshidabad.	Khulna.	Puri.

In addition, moreover, to the fact that prices during 1873-74 never touched the level that was reached during the recent famine, they were both later in rising and earlier to fall. The large importations of Government grain during the former famine, and its sale at the rate of 10 and 12 seers to the rupee, kept prices in that year lower than they otherwise would have been, while neither did the famine of 1874 extend to other parts of India, nor were there then existent the means of communication between district and district and province and province, which while tending to equalise prices over a large area, tend to do so by levelling up in the producing area and levelling down in the area of deficit. That prices, notwithstanding the recent bumper rice harvest, are still above the normal is possibly due to the replenishing of old hoards which had become depleted during the recent famine, with the result of absorbing some of the surplus produce of the recent harvest, which ordinarily would be brought into the market for sale.

CHAPTER XIV.

STATE OF PUBLIC HEALTH AND CONDITION OF CATTLE.

Place of vital statistics in famine administration.

The examination of the vital statistics of the affected districts in a time of famine is of the greatest importance, both for the discovery of any abnormal increase in mortality or, if this feature is absent, as should be the case had the administration of famine relief been taken in hand in time and efficiently conducted, for any indication of decrease in stamina of the people, whether indicated in greater liability to disease, or in a decreasing fecundity and consequently diminishing birth-rate. The proper function of vital statistics in famine administration is not by an abnormal death-rate to prove the existence of a famine, but rather to indicate the degree of success which has attended the efforts of Government in meeting it. A large mortality from starvation pre-supposes the failure of the Government measures; but while Government may undertake, as far as possible, to prevent starvation, it is unable to prevent a large degree of deterioration in the general well-being of the population, which will manifest itself in the vital statistics of the period.

Method of registration of vital statistics in Bengal.

In these Provinces up to the year 1891 the registration of vital statistics, which is compulsory in urban areas only, was in the hands of municipal agency. In that year the failure of the existing system being shown in the rates recorded, which were manifestly below what was known to be the birth and death-rate of the Province, the duty of registration was made over to the town police, and at the same time the registration of births was extended to rural areas. The system now in force is to collect vital statistics by the agency of the police and chaukidars. It is the duty of the chaukidars, who are supplied with proper forms for the purpose, to report both births and deaths at the weekly parades at the police-stations, the returns so collected being subsequently compiled. The work of the chaukidar is subject to supervision by the police and other inspecting officers on their visits to the villages, but the agency is at best defective, though none better can be devised. Even granting that the actual number of births and deaths is recorded with some approach to accuracy, and allowing for the greater attention given to the subject in recent years, yet in the cause of death as reported there must always be a large margin of error in statistics based on reports of illiterate and uneducated chaukidars.

Death-rate in the affected districts as compared with the normal.

The following table shows the death rate of the affected districts, both for the entire district and for the area affected in each, as compared with the average of the preceding five years:—

* Figures for nine months only.

The figures will be found to differ slightly from those supplied by the Sanitary Commissioner, whose note forms one of the appendices of this narrative, allowance having been made by him for variations in the population since 1891, the year of the last census. The only districts which show a rate of mortality in excess of the average rate of the five years ending with September 1895, not only throughout the whole district, but in the affected tracts also are—Shahabad, the Sonthal Parganas, the three affected districts of the Chota Nagpur Division, and Bankura. In Khulna the death-rate throughout the district was above the average, but in the affected area it was about the same.

In Shahabad the physical condition of the affected area is in ordinary times poor. The rise in mortality is attributed to outbreaks of cholera and small-pox, with a high mortality from fever in August and September 1897. In the Sonthal Parganas there was some sporadic cholera, attributed to the partial failure of the water-supply and to bad and insufficient food. In Chota Nagpur up to April and May 1897 the year was comparatively healthy. A change for the worse then occurred. Cholera broke out in Manbhum in April, and in Hazaribagh and Palamau in May and continued to September. Mortality under the head of fever also increased largely, and there was some small-pox in Manbhum. The figures of the mortality per mille in the affected districts from June to September as compared with the normal rate are shown below:—

	Hazaribagh.		Palamau.		Manbhum.
	5 years' average.	1897.	5 years' average.	1897.	5 years' average.	1897.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
June	2·63	3·03	3·39	3·59	2·40	4·10
July	3·00	5·31	2·97	4·17	2·51	4·08
August	3·51	10·51	3·22	6·43	2·66	4·48
September	3·08	6·59	3·32	5·20	1·94	2·98

The Civil Surgeon of Hazaribagh has remarked:—

"It cannot be concealed that the debilitated condition of the people made them more subject to fatal disorders, and further that a portion of the population during the rains was living on jungle products, which, as articles of food at this period of the year, were distinctly deleterious to health, but it is also absolutely certain that the rainy season of this year (1897) was a very abnormally unhealthy one, causing an excessive prevalence of bowel-disorders and fevers amongst all classes of the population, whether subject to scarcity or not."

The Civil Medical Officer of Palamau is similarly of opinion that while famine did not operate as a direct cause of any disease, yet constitutions were deteriorated by privation, and want of food brought on such a state of physique that the sufferers fell ready victims to very slight indispositions. There were three deaths from starvation reported in Lohardaga,—all of wanderers, whose names and residences could not be traced. In Manbhum 17 deaths from starvation were reported, but on thorough enquiry in each case death was found due to other causes. The reluctance of the aboriginal tribes in Chota Nagpur to come on relief works, and their preference for an independent life of extreme privation while subsisting on jungle products, has already been referred to, and it was inevitable that much suffering should have been experienced and the indirect mortality increased. In the affected area in Bankura the increased mortality was due to the outbreak of cholera between March and June. In Khulna too cholera was prevalent, attributable to the deficient water-supply; the water in the affected tracts was more or less impregnated with salt, and people had often to travel miles to get fresh water for cooking and drinking. Under the circumstances of this district, the provision of a better water-supply is a matter of time, but the 40 tanks excavated as famine relief works and 43 more dug by private persons from Government loans effected a much-needed and substantial improvement.

In the remaining affected districts the mortality was below the normal rate. The reason is to be sought in the scanty rainfall of 1896. The ground never becoming saturated, there was less malaria and autumnal fever, while the year 1897 was, generally speaking, extraordinarily free from cholera. This is the more remarkable when it is remembered that the water-supply everywhere ran short, but against this is to be set the increased attention given to the matter of preservation of the water-supply and the instant remedies which were taken wherever cholera made its appearance. The effects of diseases aggravated by want and insufficient and unsuitable food were, however, traceable, especially after the breaking of the rains. In the Patna Division the death-rate in every district rose above normal in August, and, except in the districts of Patna (not distressed) and Shahabad, remained above normal in September. On the other hand, things had by that time taken a turn for the better, and a district like Gaya, which was not distressed, showed an excess above normal as large or larger than the others. Bhagalpur is reported to have enjoyed "an exceptional immunity from disease," while disease in an epidemic form was also absent in Nadia and Murshidabad in the Presidency Division.

Birth-rate in the affected districts

But apart from the positive evidence of the prevailing death-rate during the famine period, the figures of birth-rate in the affected districts as compared with those of the previous year afford evidence of some lowering of the stamina of the people, and consequently lessened fecundity. For the purposes of comparison a longer period than the previous year cannot safely be taken: the registration of births in rural areas was only introduced into Bengal in 1892, and the figures of 1892 and 1893 are admittedly defective. A comparison with the figures of the period October 1896 to September 1897 with the corresponding period of the previous year gives the following results according to the figures supplied by the Sanitary Commissioner:—

DISTRICTS.	Birth rate during 1895-96.	Birth-rate during 1896-97.
Shahabad	37·19	34·90
Saran	33·25	33·40
Champaran	41·33	32·41
Muzaffarpur	43·37	37·31
Darbhanga	41·38	37·09
Bhagalpur	39·54	38·53
Sonthal Parganas ...	39·45	30·51
Hazaribagh	43·53	37·56
Palamau	42·63	35·77
Manbhum	41·31	33·38

Nadia	41·04	43·20
Khulna	36·25	34·08
Murshidabad	46·29	44·28
Puri	35·78	40·04

The general decrease in the birth rates as compared with the corresponding twelve months of the previous year is remarkable, and, in the absence of any general epidemic disease, the result can, in the opinion of the Sanitary Commissioner, only be attributed to the effects of the scarcity deepening into famine, which commenced to spread over the districts, when with the irregularities of the monsoon during 1896, a serious crop failure became certain.

Statistics of mortality in famine hospitals.

It has already been mentioned that special famine hospitals were opened in seven districts, and between the months of January and October 41,113 patients were treated in them, of whom 992 or 2·4 per cent. ultimately died. Both the total admissions and mortality were heaviest by far in Champaran, where a portion of the distressed area lay in a notoriously unhealthy tract, in which the health of the supervising staff was severely tried. Next in order as to admissions come Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, and Saran. The mortality as compared with admissions was highest in Shahabad and Saran. Sickness and mortality combined were greatest in the months of June, July, and August, and the majority of the cases treated were sufferers from malarious fevers and splenic diseases; 305 cases of cholera with 39 deaths were treated in the famine hospitals and in the villages by the special medical staff deputed to famine duty; the majority of the cases (264) were from Champaran. Of small-pox, there were 134 cases and 4 deaths, the greater number of cases (97) again being in Champaran.

Condition of cattle.

As regards the condition of the cattle, little need be said. There is no evidence that their condition generally deteriorated, while in some ways they were better off than usual. On the failure of the bhadoi and rice crops in many places, the cattle were allowed to graze them down, and the winter rains afforded a certain amount of green pasture. At the same time decrease in cultivation, especially in the area under the cold-weather crops, involved less field-work to be done. Only in Shahabad and Puri was mortality from want of fodder and water reported. There was a sharp outbreak of rinderpest in Muzaffarpur in July, but nowhere else was there cattle-disease to any exceptional extent or calling for special preventive measures. In Khulna many plough cattle are said to have been sold, and in the Patna Division a good many changed hands locally and into Nipal, but no where to such an extent as to cause any depletion of the stock or any difficulties in cultivation.

CHAPTER XV.

EFFECTS OF THE FAMINE ON CRIME—REVENUE AND EMIGRATION.

Influence of the famine on crime.

The influence of high prices of food-grains upon crime, and especially upon offences against property, is well known, and the relation between hunger and rioting, and theft, with its kindred offences of dacoity, burglary, and robbery, is nowhere more clearly exemplified than in the crime statistics during the period of the recent scarcity. The people of Bihar and Bengal are peaceful, patient under suffering, and law-abiding, but notwithstanding this the statistics given below afford a plain indication of the severity of the distress that recently afflicted parts of these Provinces. Though there was no resort to open violence except in one or two instances of grain-rioting at Dinapore during the early stages of the scarcity, and though no serious attempt was made anywhere to resist the authorities, yet there was a very large increase in petty pilfering of grain, petty thefts, and offences against property generally. For the purposes of comparison the offences of theft, robbery, burglary, and dacoity have been taken, and the period that from 1st October 1896 to 30th September 1897, during which the influences of the famine may be considered to have been most fully operative. Within those months the total number of such offences reported in the affected districts was 34,952, as compared with 20,865 and 19,942 in the corresponding periods of the two previous years. The increase is remarkable, being no less than 71·3 per cent. over the average of the two preceding years. The fluctuations in the different quarters of the famine period are no less noticeable. The total number of offences against property in the affected districts rose steadily with each succeeding quarter. For every district except Khulna the number of offences rose in the quarter January to March. In the succeeding quarter the rise continued in the districts of Bhagalpur, Sonthal Parganas, Bankura, the three affected districts of the Presidency Division, and the distressed districts of the Chota Nagpur Division with the exception of Palamau. In the districts of the Patna Division, in Palamau, and in Puri there was a decrease in crime as compared with the previous quarter, in the quarter from April to July, after the reaping of the rabi crops; but crime again increased when the temporary relief afforded by these crops had ceased, and reached its highest level in every district during the quarter July to September.

Burglary and theft.

It is under the headings of burglary and theft that the most notable increase took place. For the Province as a whole the figures show an increase of 43·47 and 31·19 per cent., respectively, for the period 1st October 1896 to 30th September 1897 over the mean of the corresponding periods of the two previous years.

In the affected districts the percentages of increase similarly calculated were as follows:—

	Shahabad.	Saran.	Champaran.	Muzaffarpur.	Darbhanga.	Bhagalpur.	Sonthal Parganas.	Hazaribagh.	Palamau.	Manbhum.	Bankura.	Nadia.	Murshidabad.	Khulna.	Puri.

These figures are instructive: they correspond to some extent with the degree of distress experienced, and, apart from all other evidence, furnish a sufficient answer to those who, in ignorance of the real situation, at one time feared or imagined that relief was being given more freely than necessary in these Provinces. Thus in the Patna Division the largest increase was in the most affected districts of Champaran, Muzaffarpur, and Darbhanga. The large increase in Chota Nagpur is coincident with the severity of the distress there experienced, and its peculiarly abnormal character is due to the fact more than once referred to in the course of this narrative, of the aversion of the wild people in that Division to availing themselves of the relief offered by the State; the increase of crime in Murshidabad, where distress was slight, was much less; while again in Khulna and Nadia, in parts of which distress was greater, the figures rose very largely.

General.

Apart from this phenomenal increase in burglary and theft, the criminal histories of several districts during the period of famine present features of special interest. In the Shahabad and Champaran districts of the Patna Division, dacoities show a noticeable increase. The grain dacoities in the Bhabhua subdivision in the end of 1896 afforded one of the earliest signs of the feeling of unrest that was abroad. In the Champaran district only two technical dacoities were of grain. Arson, with a view to discovering and plundering hoards of grain, which is a common feature of scarcity, was extremely prevalent, notably in Darbhanga and Champaran, but the reported figures give little indication of the real extent of the crime, as many fires were not reported and others returned as accidental which were probably intentional. In the Bhagalpur district dacoities show an increase, but it was in the technical crime only, and the district is reported to have been singularly free from any eruption of lawlessness, the people bearing their hardships with singular patience. In the Sonthal Parganas there was a considerable increase in dacoity—31 cases against 3, the mean of the two preceding years. Most of them were grain-looting cases. Special measures were taken to check this crime, and prosecutions were in most cases successful, while an efficient patrol of the roads had the satisfactory result of preventing any cases of loot of grain in transit. There was a remarkable increase in dacoity in the distressed districts of the Chota Nagpur Division of no less than 336·8 per cent. over the mean figures of the previous two years. None of the cases are said to have been serious, but of the total of 83, the majority are said to have been loots of grain. There was a satisfactory absence of grain riots in the affected districts of the Presidency Division.

EFFECT OF THE FAMINE ON EMIGRATION AND IMMIGRATION.

General wandering of distressed people from one district to another was not a prominent feature of the famine in these Provinces. On the borders between adjacent districts, a certain number of people may have crossed over into the next district in search of work, but only in so far as it was accessible from their own homes. In the border districts marching with the North-West Provinces, people from Gorakhpur found their way into Bettiah and the Gopalganj subdivision of Saran. On the other hand, it is possible that many from the districts of Bengal wandered into the North-West Provinces; though owing to the superior reputation Bengal enjoys among up-country people as a land of plenty, the natural tendency was to wander towards Calcutta. The number of travellers down the Grand Trunk Road was larger than usual, and, as has been shown, necessitated special measures for their maintenance.

The only distressed districts from which emigration to Assam and the colonies takes place annually on any considerable scale are the Sonthal Parganas, the districts of the Chota Nagpur Division, and Bankura. In the Sonthal Parganas a comparison of registered emigrants for the period January to September for the years 1895, 1896, 1897 gives the following results:—

	Adults.	Dependents.
1895	1,204	125
1896	1,618	211
1897	2,763	1,484

But the increase is progressive in ordinary years, and is due to the freer intercourse with Assam, and is not only attributable to the scarcity, though that too may have had some slight effect. The mass of the emigration, however, is what is called "free" emigration, for which no reliable statistics are available. In the Chota Nagpur Division the emigration from the Native States into British territory was very small. Emigration from all districts increased. During the period of distress 6,947 persons are reported to have emigrated from the Hazaribagh district, against 2,095 for the corresponding period of the previous year. From Manbhum 4,766 people were registered as emigrants in 1897, against 1,073 in 1896. From Palamau also emigration increased. The figures cannot pretend to accuracy, as a great deal of emigration escapes registration. In Bankura the number of registered emigrants during 1896-97 was 471 as compared with 264 and 209 in the two previous years respectively. Free emigration was unusually brisk, and from a census taken of emigrants of this class in March, it appeared that the large numbers of 6 234 and 2,243 had emigrated from the distressed areas of the Raipur thana and Simlapal outpost alone, many villages being found almost devoid of males. In the Khulna district a considerable amount of internal migration took place, especially from the distressed area to the eastern parts, where the harvests were good and the lands better protected from the salt water.

From the districts of the Patna and Bhagalpur Divisions migration of labourers eastwards at the beginning of the cold weather for temporary employment in the harvest fields and on roads, railways or any odd employment that offers, takes place in ordinary years on a considerable scale, the labourers returning at the end of the hot weather in time for the agricultural operations in their own district, which commence with the bursting of the monsoon. Such emigration took place in increased numbers during 1896-97, but no accurate statistics are available. Migration of this kind in the Patna Division is greatest from the Saran district and least from Champaran and Darbhanga. The home remittances of these emigrants are an important feature in the economic aspect of the Division. That very large remittances come into the Division by money-order (the favourite means for an emigrant to remit his savings) is shown by the following figures of sums remitted in this way into the Division as a whole:—

	Rs.
1884-95	94,34,064
1895-96	1,00,86,541
1896-97	1,10,86,359

The increase during 1896-97 is noticeable. All these remittances are not made by emigrants, but the greater portion of money-orders are for petty sums of less than Rs. 10—a fact which supports the belief that remittances by emigrant labourers, including small cultivators, constitute no unimportant share of the total. On the whole the famine had no great effect in stimulating emigration.

EFFECT OF THE FAMINE ON LAND REVENUE AND OTHER COLLECTIONS.

Land revenue.

Speaking generally, the famine has had little effect upon the collection of land revenue, and the collections of 1896-97 only showed a decrease of Rs. 90,255 in comparison with those of 1895-96. In Government estates collections from the raiyats were to some extent suspended, but the greater part of the distressed area being under the Permanent Settlement and the incidence of the land revenue light, it was not to be expected that there would be any great necessity for remissions, or permanent falling off in collections. The decrease in revenue during 1897-98 is estimated by the Board of Revenue at Rs. 8,00,000; but looking to the excellent outturn of the late winter rice and favourable prospects of the coming rabi crops, it is doubtful whether the decrease will be more than Rs. 4,00,000, or even whether that is not excessive. Special circumstances existed in special localities as exceptions to this general rule. In the Bhabua subdivision of Shahabad, where the landlords are mostly impoverished, leniency was shown in the enforcement of the sale law, but the arrears thus allowed to accrue will be subsequently realised. In Palamau the March kist of 1897 showed large defaults, and the percentage of total collections on total demand for 1896-97 fell to 70·04 per cent. from 89·5 per cent. in 1895-96. In Nadia it was found necessary to remit Rs. 2,185 out of a demand of Rs. 18,610 in the Government khas mahals of the Kushtia and Meherpur subdivisions. In Khulna, too, small remissions were given, while the collection of revenue from temporarily-settled estates in the Sunderbans showed a marked decrease from 80·28 to 67·73 per cent. In Puri it was found necessary to grant remission during 1896-97 to an aggregate amount of Rs. 80,025.

Road cess.

In cesses where the opportunities for defaulting are more frequently availed of and the penalties for default are less than in the case of land revenue, there was no general decrease in collections.

Excise.

The effect of the famine on the excise revenue was more perceptible, and is described in detail by the Excise Commissioner in a memorandum which forms one of the appendices to this report. The gross receipts during the last seven years were as follows:—

YEARS.		Gross receipts.	Increase.	Percentage of increase.
		Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1890-91	...	1,04,60,932	......	......
1891-92	...	1,11,29,813	6,68,881	6·39
1892-93	...	1,16,00,621	4,70,808	4·23
1893-94	...	1,21,37,096	5,36,475	4·62
1894-95	...	1,25,67,855	4,30,759	3·54
1895-96	...	1,33,77,705	8,09,850	6·44
1896-97	...	1,34,10,579	32,874	·24

Thus, though there was an increase of Rs. 32,874 in the receipts of 1896-97 as compared with those of 1895-96, it is manifest that the steady growth of recent years met with a decided check. The average annual net increase during the years 1891-92 to 1895-96 was Rs. 4,31,792, or say 4 lakhs; and at this rate the expected revenue for 1896-97 should have been Rs. 1,33,77,705 (the revenue of 1895-96 + Rs. 4,00,000 = Rs. 1,37,77,705), against the actual revenue of Rs. 1,34,10,579, and in this light it may be said that there was a real loss of Rs. 3,67,126, or roughly 3½ lakhs, due to the famine. Settlements having been concluded before the scarcity made itself felt, the effect of the scarcity was noticeable not so much in license-fees, as in the revenue derived from duty. The heaviest loss was in the Patna Division, where the total decrease amounted to Rs. 1,03,373. In the Sonthal Parganas and Palamau also there was a heavy falling off under the head of country spirits. The probable receipts for 1897-98 are estimated at Rs. 1,28,46,338, or less than those of 1896-97 by Rs. 5,64,241, or roughly 5½ lakhs. On the other hand, if the steady growth in the annual increase had been maintained, a revenue of Rs. 1,41,78,000 could have been expected in 1897-98, against the probable estimate of Rs. 1,28,46,338, the difference being Rs. 13,31,662, or approximately 13 lakhs. A serious decrease during 1897-98 is anticipated in the Chota Nagpur Division. In short the total loss in excise revenue due to the famine is estimated at about 16½ lakhs of rupees.

Stamps.—The following figures show the revenue derived from the sale of stamps during the last six years:—

				Increase.
			Rs.	Rs.
1891-92	...	...	1,51,00,000	......
1892-93	...	...	1,55,45,000	4,45,000
1893-94	...	...	1,59,76,000	4,31,000
1894-95	...	...	1,67,01,000	7,25,000
1895-96	...	...	1,67,72,000	71,000
1896-97	...	...	1,75,74,000	8,02,000

The major portion of the increase, amounting to Rs. 4,32,586, was obtained from the sale of non-judicial (impressed) stamps, due to the execution of a large number of bonds and documents, which may to a great extent be attributed to the scarcity. The estimate of receipts for the sale of stamps during 1897-98 amounts to Rs. 1,73,20,577. It is likely, therefore, that an increase rather than a decrease of stamp revenue will result from the famine, the falling off in suits instituted being more than compensated for by the execution of bonds and mortgage deeds.

Registration.

The increase in the registration of deeds of sale and mortgage and of money bonds is clearly shown by the figures for the last three years:—

Year.	Sales.	Mortgages.	Bonds.
1895 ...	... 299,986	306,104	102,139
1896 ...	... 313,986	327,675	111,243
1897 ...	... 377,286	431,609	135,284

The most remarkable instances of increase were in the Darbhanga, Champaran, and Muzaffarpur districts.

Forests.

The effects of the famine upon forest revenue were felt in the Sundarbans and Chittagong Forest Divisions. The estimated loss on this account amounted to Rs. 72,000 in 1896-97 and Rs. 65,000 in 1897-98, or Rs. 1,37,000 in all. The greater part of the loss was in the Sundarbans. The loss arising from the concession given in the reserved forests of the Chota Nagpur and Orissa Divisions of taking edible roots and fruits free of charge was insignificant, and is estimated at some Rs. 400 only.

CHAPTER XVI.

CONCLUSION.

Little need perhaps be added to what has already been written on the history of the recent famine. It has been shown how the intervention of Government was necessitated by the serious crop failure resulting from the abnormal rainfall of 1896, which, while succeeding a year of seriously deficient harvests, was aggravated by similar conditions obtaining at the same time in the greater part of India. The nature and organisation of the relief measures undertaken by Government have been indicated, and the degree of success attending its efforts for the prevention of starvation has been described. At the same time, the assistance rendered to Government by the measures of public and private charity has been acknowledged, and finally the effects of the famine upon the different branches of the administration and on the general well-being of the people have been traced.

Many lessons have been learnt during the recent famine, and much experience gained which will be of the utmost value should a similar calamity again overtake the Province. It is not, however, the purpose of the present narrative to discuss the changes and modifications which the experience so acquired may suggest in the recognised methods of dealing with famine, but in reviewing as a whole the recent famine relief administration, reference may well be made again to the various salient points which the operations suggest. It has been seen that although the rainfall of 1896, succeeding a monsoon which had been almost as unfavourable, was even worse distributed than in 1873-74, and although the failure of crops had been as great as in the famine of that year, yet the necessary relief was given to all who required it at a cost of approximately one-sixth the sum expended during the earlier famine. It has been shown that this greatly reduced cost of the recent relief operations was due primarily to the policy, wisely adopted and courageously persevered in, of absolute non-interference with private trade, and in a secondary degree to the greatly improved methods and knowledge of famine relief administration, both in the exaction of adequate tasks from the able-bodied as a test of distress, and in the careful selection from among those unable to work of suitable objects for gratuitous relief. At the same time the mortality from starvation was practically nil, and the people while maintained in good case, were able and willing to return of their own accord to their ordinary pursuits as soon as the bhadoi harvest was reaped and the prospects of the winter rice assured.

As to how far the events of the recent famine have indicated any increase in the powers of the people to resist the effects of bad seasons, detailed and laboured comparisons and deductions from the experience of 1874 have not been attempted. That under less favourable circumstances than in 1873-74 the numbers requiring Government relief should have been so much less, would appear to establish the fact of a general improvement in the general circumstances of the people, but the whole conditions of the relief administration during the two famines were so different, that the inference is not so conclusive as it would have been had the same methods been adopted in both cases. Nevertheless, the general experience and observations of the officers engaged in the famine, some of them with knowledge of the facts both then and now, as well as the concurrent opinions of non-officials acquainted with these provinces, do indicate that, even in Bihar, during the past quarter of a century, there has been a considerable advance in material prosperity, and that the power of the country as a whole to withstand the calamities of seasons has greatly increased.

That the benevolence of Government was able and far reaching enough to embrace every creature in want of the means of subsistence, had already been brought home to the people by the events of 1874, and the history of the past year can only have emphasised that lesson; but at the same time the administration of the recent famine has taught the useful corollary, that the benevolence of Government is not indiscriminate, and that Government has both the intention and the power, to ensure that its benevolence shall not be abused. The great efforts made by Government and the noble and spontaneous charity of the English people cannot have failed to have imbued the minds of the people with a sense of gratitude and appreciation, and as charity blesseth him that gives as well as him that takes, the intimate relations which the famine operations have entailed between the distressed people and those to whom the administration of relief was entrusted, cannot but have created on both sides a feeling of greater mutual knowledge and sympathy. While the patience and fortitude with which the great mass of the people have borne their undoubted sufferings has evoked the sympathy and admiration of those whose task it was to relieve them, it has been brought home to the minds of those relieved, that Government and its officers have a very real desire and power to assist them.

His Honour has separately placed on record in a Minute of this date, his high appreciation of the efforts of individual officers upon whom has fallen the burden of the famine administration, but in expressing generally the cordial thanks of Government for the ability and devotion with which their anxious duties have been performed, Sir Alexander Mackenzie desires to express his entire concurrence in the opinions already expressed by Mr. Stevens, while officiating as Lieutenant-Governor, as to the complete success which has been attained by them in the operations now brought to a close.

REVISED WATER-RATE RULES FOR THE MIDNAPORE CANAL.

The 14th February 1898.

No. 19.—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sections 99 and 78 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to pass the following rules and to fix the undermentioned rates to be charged for water supplied from the Midnapore Canal. These rules and rates will supersede those now in force.

A. D. MCARTHUR, Col., R.E.,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

1. The Divisional Canal Officer is responsible for maintaining the canal in an efficient state of repair, for providing drainage channels where necessary, and generally for all engineering work involved in its management, as well as for the distribution of water to lessees. The word "canal" is here used as defined in section 3 of the Act.

2. The Deputy Collector is responsible for the assessment and collection of water-rates accruing to Government from the canal.

3. Water shall not be distributed otherwise than on the application of a lessee, or to a person in whose favour a provisional license under Rule 15 has been issued. Such application may be made verbally or in writing to any subordinate in charge of that part of the canal from which water is required.

4. If any lessee apply for water to the Deputy Collector or one of his subordinates verbally, he shall be directed to address himself to an irrigation officer or subordinate. If he makes such an application in writing, his petition shall be forwarded direct by the zilladar, to whom it is addressed, to the Subdivisional Canal Officer in charge of that part of the canal from which the petitioner's village is supplied.

5. The Divisional Canal Officer shall map out the irrigable area into blocks in accordance with the natural features of the ground, and so determine that the whole block shall be irrigable from one outlet or from one set of outlets. So far as may be practicable, the blocks shall be separated by drainage lines.

6. Each block determined as above shall be numbered and recorded with its irrigable area in registers to be maintained by the Divisional Canal Officers and Deputy Collector. The blocks shall also be marked on maps to be maintained by the same officers.

7. Ordinarily leases for not more than five years may be granted for the whole irrigable area of a block, or, subject to the provisions of Rule 13, for definite parts of a block under the following conditions:—

I.—Ordinarily the whole irrigable area of any village, so far as situated within the block, must be included in the lease.

II.—All leases within one block shall be granted so that they shall expire on the same date.

III.—In order to equalize the areas to be dealt with in each year, the date of expiry of the leases in each block shall be determined by the Divisional Canal Officer in consultation with the Deputy Collector, so that, as far as practicable, one-fifth of the total area usually irrigated may fall out of lease in each year.

IV.—No permit shall be granted, when the supply of water must of necessity be delivered across an unleased area, unless a village channel exists, which, in the opinion of the Subdivisional Canal Officer, will deliver water without waste across the unleased area.

To enable the Special Deputy Collector to equalize the area which lapses each year, leases in suitable blocks may be granted under the above conditions for six or seven years with the approval of the Executive Engineer.

8. The rates to be charged for water supplied between 16th June and 30th November, whether by flow or lift, to lessees on application shall be—

For a term of five years—Re. 1-8 per acre for each season. The area under long lease will, in future, as a rule, be reduced to 75,000 square acres, i.e., 65,000 acres under the Midnapore weir, 8,000 under the Panchkura weir and 2,000 under the Tidal reaches.

For one year or for water supplied on a provisional license for which a permit for a term of years is not subsequently issued, Rs. 3 per acre.

Provided that the leases, whether new or renewals required for shorter terms than five years in order to develop the system of blocks as explained above, shall be charged Re. 1-8 per acre only.

If water is available after the long leases have been irrigated, leases for a single watering may be given at eight annas per acre, the rate being payable in advance.

9. For the supply of water, when available, for winter crops, a rate of Rs. 2-8 per acre per season shall be charged.

10. For the unauthorized use of canal water a rate of Rs. 5 per acre, or such less rate as may be sanctioned by the Deputy Collector, shall be charged.

11. Application for water-leases under section 74 of the Act shall be presented to the Subdivisional Officer through the zilladar in whose charge the land lies.

12. Every application for a water-lease shall contain the following particulars:—

1.—Name and residence of applicant.

2. Name of pargana, mahal and village in which the land to be irrigated is situated.

3.—Total area for the irrigation of which the application is made and its boundaries, and if the lands to be irrigated lie in separate chaks, the name of each chak.

4.—Names of the raiyats whose lands are to be irrigated, and the quantity of land held by each.

5.—Name of the canal and number of distributary from which water is required.

6.—Signatures of the applicants.

13. A separate application must be presented for lands in each village, but tahsilalaida or other lands lying within the village boundary at the time of survey may be included.

14. Before a permit for a term of years is granted, the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained, but permits for one year only and provisional licenses may be issued with the written assent of the Subdivisional Canal Officer. The Deputy Collector shall on the day of issue forward a copy of all permits granted to the Divisional Canal Officer.

Existing leases may, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer, be extended for not more than three years, without enquiry or remeasurement, payments being made in accordance with the existing assessment.

15. When a water-lease is granted, a kabuliyat shall be taken in a form approved by Government, and a "permit" shall be given to the lessee or lessees in a form similar to that prescribed in Schedule C of the Act. Pending the completion of a lease, the zilladar may issue a provisional license for the supply of water to an area covered by an application.

16. On the issue of a permit or provisional license, the zilladar shall forward to the Subdivisional Canal Officer direct a requisition requesting him to supply water to the lessee on application. This requisition shall be kept by the Canal Officer till January 1st next following, and shall then be returned to the Deputy Collector. On the back should be noted the several dates on which the village was supplied with water. A fresh requisition shall be issued on or before June 1st, and returned on or before January 1st each year, till the lease expires.

17. When it comes to the knowledge of the Subdivisional Canal Officer that canal water has been taken without authority, he shall hold a local investigation and transmit the record thereof to the Divisional Officer, who shall, if he is of opinion that the fields should be assessed, forward the case with his remarks to the Deputy Collector. Separate proceedings shall be taken in the case of each village irrigated without authority.

18. On receipt of the record mentioned in Rule 17, and after hearing any objection which may be raised, the Deputy Collector shall determine whether water-rates can be legally charged, and if so, he shall proceed to assess, at the rate provided in Rule 10, the land irrigated without authority. Water-rates shall not be charged where the unauthorized irrigation has occurred through the act, neglect or default of a Canal Officer or subordinate.

19. The statements of the amounts demandable for water-rates leviable under the rules in force shall be prepared under the supervision and signature of the Deputy Collector in such form as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor. Persons charged under Rule 10 or 18 shall be served, by post or otherwise, with a statement showing the amounts charged to enable them to lodge an appeal to the Collector under section 91 of the Act, if they desire to do so.

20. Should it be proved, after due enquiry, that the supply of water given to any leased area is habitually wasted, or used for the irrigation of lands not under lease, it shall be competent for the Superintending Canal Officer to direct that the lease shall be cancelled with effect from the 1st of June next following.

21. The rates for water supplied from June to November shall in each season fall due on the 1st January and 15th February following, but all sums of Rs. 5 and under shall become due on the 1st January and be payable in one instalment. The Deputy Collector may, however, require one-half of the rates due on applications filed after the 1st of September to be paid in advance, and may refuse to issue a permit for more than one year. The rates for water supplied for winter crops shall fall due on the 1st April following.

22. Water-rates imposed under Rule 10 or 18 shall fall due as soon as the assessment is made, and shall be realized at once.

23. The Superintending Canal Officer may, with the concurrence of the Collector direct the Deputy Collector to—

I.—Cease to issue permits for the irrigation of lands in villages where there have been constant difficulties in realizing water-rates until all the arrears of water-rates due are paid up, and also, if specially so ordered, unless half the amount due under new applications is paid in advance. An order under this rule shall be in force for the time stated therein, which shall not exceed three years.

II.—Cancel any five-years' lease if on the 1st of June of any year water-rates to the extent of half the demand for one year are in arrears.

24. Remission of water-rates, either in whole or part, as the cease may require shall be granted by the Deputy Collector for—

I.—Errors in the assessment of rates.

II.—Injury to the crop on a leased area caused by deficient supply of water, provided a written application for remission has been made 15 days at least before the crop is cut.

In regard to applications under II, the written opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained and form part of the record of the case.

25. The Deputy Collector, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer may grant remissions of water-rates, either in whole or part, for injury to the crops on leased areas caused by excess of water due to deficient drainage.

26. The Deputy Collector may, with the written assent of the Divisional Canal Officer, commute rates charged under Rules 10 and 18 to those chargeable for water supplied on application, provided that a lease either for a term of years or for the season has been subsequently executed for the lands in question.

27. Remissions on other grounds than the above require the sanction of Government.

28. In cases where sums due on account of water-rates cannot be collected owing to the death, bankruptcy, or absconding of the defaulter, the amount which is non-realizable may be written off as irrecoverable on the authority of the Superintending Canal Officer.

29. Before awarding compensation under section 16 of the Act, or making a reference under section 17 of the Act, the Collector shall obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Canal Officer, and his written opinion shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

30. The chaukidar or mukhya of any village in which lands are leased for a term of years shall be entitled to a remission of water-rates for his holding either as a jagir or raiyati up to a limit of 3 acres per hundred acres of total leased area provided he gives efficient and willing assistance to the Canal Officers in respect to the following matters:—

I.—In the preparation of applications for leases.

II.—In the measurements of irrigated lands.

III.—In giving the names of the occupiers of the various fields.

IV.—In receiving demand statements and informing the cultivators of the demands against them.

V.—In receiving tappas from the zilladars and distributing them.

VI.—In being present when complaints are investigated by Canal Officers, and giving information regarding the matters under investigation.

VII.—In reporting to the zilladars any mutations in holdings of persons who have signed a lease for a term of years.

31. Tanks may be filled with canal water without charge, wherever water can be made available without injury to the cultivation dependent on a canal under the following conditions:—

I.—No tank shall be filled unless the water is to be exclusively used for domestic purposes or for watering cattle.

II.—No tank shall be filled from which irrigation is practised.

III.—No tank shall be filled which intercepts any line of drainage or is liable to overflow from the accumulation of water from natural causes.

IV.—No tank shall be filled except on the written order of the Subdivisional Canal Officer issued on the written application of the persons concerned.

V.—No tank shall be filled unless the village channel used to convey water to it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Subdivisional Canal Officer to be in a sound condition when the application is made.

VI.—The privilege here accorded may, by the written order of the Subdivisional Canal Officer, be suspended for 12 months for the breach of any of the above rules.

32. The Divisional Canal Officer may supply water for manufacturing or other purposes and charge for the same at the rate of one rupee for each 10,000 cubic feet or part of 10,000 cubic feet supplied. The same charge will be made if water is taken into a tank without authority or used in an unauthorized manner.

33. No person shall, without the permission in writing of the Divisional or Subdivisional Canal Officer, pass or cause any animal or vehicle to pass on or across any of the works, banks or channels of a canal or drainage work after he has been desired to desist therefrom, except by means of such bridges, fords and ferries and their approaches as are provided by the Divisional Canal Officer.

34. No officer employed on the canals, unless especially exempted by the Lieutenant-Governor from the operation of this rule, shall have any interest in the distribution of water from any of the canals, or purchase or bid for any Government property sold thereon, either in his own name or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others.

35. Except as provided in the Act and in these rules, no appeal shall lie from any order passed by a Canal Officer; but the Subdivisional Canal Officer shall modify any order passed by him in accordance with the order of the Divisional Canal Officer, and the Subdivisional Canal Officer or Divisional Canal Officer shall modify any orders passed by them in accordance with the orders of the Superintending Canal Officer, who shall exercise a general control over the proceedings of all Canal Officers.

36. In appeals to the Collector under section 91 of the Act other than those specially provided for in Rule 19, the Collector may require the Superintending Engineer to state his opinion in writing, which shall form part of the record of the proceedings in the case.

No. 1049—1272P., dated Bombay Castle, the 18th February 1898.

NOTIFICATION.—By the Government of Bombay, General Department.

IN exercise of the powers delegated by the Governor-General in Council under section 2 (3) of the Epidemic Diseases Act III of 1897, His Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased to prescribe, as a temporary measure, the following rules for quarantine against plague applicable to vessels arriving at Aden, and to direct that they be substituted for the rules prescribed in Government Notification No 6450—4275P., dated the 20th November 1897 :—

Rule I.—The commander of every vessel, including buggalows or other native craft arriving at Aden from an infected port shall, before entering the harbour, hoist a yellow flag (or if entering the port at night-time, exhibit two red lights one above the other at the main) and indicate by signal the port from which such vessel has come, and shall keep such flag and signals flying until permitted to take them down. Rule III.—(1) All vessels passed as "healthy" according to the procedure prescribed in these rules, and carrying a qualified Medical Officer shall be given 'pratique' even though ten days may not have elapsed since their departure from an infected port ; provided that, in the case of a "healthy" vessel which has been in an infected port within ten days of its arrival in Aden, the following measures are to be taken before the crew or passengers are allowed on shore or mix with the local population :—

(a) The persons on board should be medically inspected.

(b) The soiled linen and personal effects of the crew and passengers which, in the opinion of the officer appointed for the purpose by the Resident, may be regarded as contaminated, should be disinfected.

(c) A watch should be kept over the health of the crew and passengers (until 10 days from the date of departure from the infected port).

(d) The crew should not be permitted to land except on duty and subject to such precautions as the officer appointed for the purpose by the Resident deems necessary.

(e) The bilge-water should be pumped out after disinfection and good drinking-water should be substituted for the water stored on board.

(2) A vessel which carries no qualified Medical Officer shall not be given pratique until ten days from the date of its arrival in Aden. Until the 10 days' period has expired, such vessel shall, during its stay at Aden, remain at the quarantine anchorage appointed from time to time by the Resident by general or special order in this behalf. Until a vessel has been given pratique, it shall have no communication with the shore.

Rule IV.—On the arrival of a vessel whose destination is Aden, an officer appointed for the purpose by the Resident shall go alongside and ascertain whether ten days have or have not expired since its departure from an infected port.

(a) If ten days have expired since its departure from an infected port, and if it carries a qualified Medical Officer, the officer appointed for the purpose shall board the vessel and make such inquiries and inspection as he thinks necessary, and may require a declaration on oath from the Medical officer of the vessel or the captain, or both, as to the existence of plague or suspected plague on board the vessel either during the voyage or before its departure. He shall then declare whether the vessel is "healthy," "suspected" or "infected," as defined in Rule VII. If he is satisfied that the vessel is "healthy," it shall be given pratique forthwith. If he declares it to be "suspected" or "infected," it shall be dealt with in the manner prescribed in Rule VII.

(b) If on the arrival of a vessel it is ascertained that ten days have not expired since its departure from an infected port, the procedure to be followed will depend on the fact whether the vessel carries a qualified Medical officer or not. If it carries such an officer, the officer appointed for the purpose shall make such enquiries as he thinks necessary, and if he comes to the conclusion that the vessel is "healthy," he shall give it pratique, subject to the measures prescribed in Rule III (1). If the vessel carries no qualified Medical officer, it shall be detained at the quarantine anchorage until ten days have expired since its arrival* at Aden, after which the officer appointed for the purpose shall take the measures specified in clause (a) of this rule, and classify the vessel.

Provided, however, that the officer appointed for the purpose may, at any time before the expiration of the aforesaid period of ten days, make such inquiries and inspections as he thinks necessary, and if, as the result thereof, he comes to the conclusion that the vessel is "infected," he shall forthwith, and without waiting for the expiration of the ten days' period, order it to be treated as infected.

* NOTE.—Cf. Rule III (2).

Rule V.—On the arrival of a vessel, which is onward bound, and which uses Aden as merely a port of call, the officer appointed for the purpose by the Resident shall go alongside and ascertain whether ten days have or have not expired since its departure from an infected port.

(a) If ten days have expired since its departure from an infected port, and if it carries a qualified Medical Officer, and if the officer appointed for the purpose is permitted to make such inspection as he thinks necessary, and, as the result thereof and as the result of any inquiries he may make, is satisfied that the vessel is "healthy," the vessel shall be given "pratique." Otherwise, it shall remain in quarantine at the anchorage appointed for the purpose by the Resident during its stay in port: no persons shall be landed therefrom except at the quarantine camps appointed by the Resident, and no communication with the shore or with other vessels shall be allowed except the landing of mails in quarantine and the embarkation and disembarkation of passengers in quarantine.

(b) If ten days have not expired since its departure from an infected port, the procedure to be followed will depend on the fact whether the vessel carries a qualified Medical Officer or not. If it carries such an officer, the officer appointed for the purpose shall make such enquiries as he thinks necessary, and if he comes to the conclusion that the vessel is "healthy," he shall give it pratique subject to the measures prescribed in Rule III (1), provided that such a vessel may, instead of seeking free pratique, remain in quarantine at the quarantine anchorage appointed for the purpose during its stay in port. If the vessel carries no qualified Medical Officer, it shall be detained at the quarantine anchorage during its stay in port

N.B.—No inspection of a vessel under Rules IV and V shall ordinarily be made except by daylight.

Rule VI.—These rules shall not prevent the transhipment, in quarantine, of passengers or other persons or mails or cargo from a vessel in quarantine to another, provided that thereafter the latter vessel shall be in quarantine.

Rule VII.—For the purposes of these rules, a "healthy" vessel means—

"A vessel,* even though coming from an infected port, which has had no death from, or case of, plague on board, either before departure, during the voyage, or on arrival."

A "suspected" vessel means -

"Any vessel, on board which there has been a case of plague at the time of departure or during the voyage, but on which no fresh case has occurred for twelve days."

An "infected" vessel means —

"Any vessel with plague on board, or on board which one or more cases have taken place within twelve days."

The only measures which the authorities of the port of arrival may enforce with regard to "healthy" vessels, are those which are prescribed for "suspected" vessels (medical inspection, disinfection, pumping out the bilge-water and the substitution of good drinking-water for the water on board), except that the measures prescribed for the disinfection of the vessel itself may not be enforced in the case of healthy vessels.

The following treatment is prescribed for "suspected" and "infected" vessels, respectively :—

Suspected vessels are subject to the following measures, which will be carried out under the orders and supervision of the officer appointed for the purposes :

1.—Medical inspection.

2. Disinfection; the soiled linen and personal effects of the crew and passengers, which in the opinion of the officer appointed for the purpose may be regarded as contaminated, should be disinfected.

3. Pumping out the bilge-water after disinfection, and the substitution of good drinking water for the water stored on board.

4. Disinfection of all parts of the vessel which have been inhabited by plague patients, and any other measures of disinfection that may be ordered by the officer appointed for the purpose.

A watch should be kept over the health of the crew and passengers for ten days from the date of arrival of the vessel; and the crew should not, without the special permission of the officer appointed for the purpose, be allowed to land, except on duty, and subject to such precautions as he deems necessary.

Infected vessels are subject to the following rules :—

1.—The sick will be immediately disembarked and isolated.

2.—The other persons on board should also, if possible, be disembarked and kept under observation or surveillance† for a period varying according to the sanitary condition of the vessel and the date of the last case, but which must not exceed ten days.

* NOTE.—Vide Chapter II, Section VII of the Venice Convention Regulations.

† The expression 'observation' means segregation of the passengers, either on board a vessel or in a lazaretto, till they have obtained free pratique. The expression 'surveillance' means that the passengers will not be isolated; they will at once obtain free pratique, but on arriving at their destination, they will be kept under medical surveillance.

3.—The soiled linen and personal effects of the crew and passengers, which in the opinion of the sanitary authority of the port may be considered as infected, will be disinfected.

4.—The bilge-water will be pumped out after disinfection, and good drinking-water will be substituted for the water stored on board.

5.—All parts of the vessel which have been inhabited by plague patients should be disinfected, and such other measures of disinfection shall be taken as may be ordered by the officer appointed for the purpose.

Rule VIII.—The Resident shall have full power, subject to any orders that may be issued by the Government of Bombay, to make regulations or pass orders regarding the detention under observation of persons who are open to suspicion as likely to carry infection of plague, and who in the event of plague, developing, might be difficult to find, as also regarding persons who are merely passing through Aden en route for African ports, and regarding the administration of quarantine camps and hospitals, whether ashore or afloat, and regarding quarantine anchorages; and all persons concerned shall be bound to obey such regulations and orders. Any vessel objecting to submit thereto, or to any of the measures indicated in these rules, shall, however, be free to put back to sea.

Rule IX.—Any mails or cargo which may be brought by any vessel arriving from an infected port shall be landed under such precautions as the officer appointed for the purpose may deem necessary to prevent the spread of the disease.

Rule X.—It will be the duty of the Port Officer to facilitate the conveyance to all vessels in quarantine of such supplies of provisions, stores and other articles as may be required by those on board. Such supplies will be placed on the boats of the vessels in quarantine, to be subsequently removed by members of their crews.

Rule XI.—All vessels arriving at Aden, which may have communicated with vessels coming from an infected port, shall be subjected to the same rules as vessels arriving at Aden from an infected port.

Rule XII.—All vessels which have undergone medical inspection and quarantine in the manner above prescribed, should have the fact clearly stated on their bills of health.
